RIOTERS ROUTED BY FIERCE POLICE DOGS.

Four-Footed Guardians of the Peace Save Famous Church.

Scum of Paris, Inflamed by Rantings of Anarchists at Mass Meeting, Held in Ferrer's Name, Attack Sacre Coeur, But Are Driven Off—Authorities Fear Fresh Outrages Will Be Perpetrated Today.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Six police dogs did more to save the Church of the Sacré Coeur at Montmartre, in the small hours this morning, from a mob of anarchists, revolutionists, socialists and Apaches—as a certain class of Paris ruffians are called—than the force of police stationed there to defend it.

In connection with the violent campaign against social institutions being actively carried on under the mask of Francisco Ferrer's name, a meeting was held last night. Between 2000 and 3000 people listened for several hours to incendiary speeches, and then about midnight poured out into the streets, burning to put into practice the theories they had heard.

Their first idea then was to make for the Spanish Embassy, Boulevard de Courcelles, but the prefect of police, M. Lepine, had foreseen such a possibility, and had prepared for it by barring all arteries leading to the embassy with police.

SINISTER CRY.

The multitude did not know what to do. For a few minutes they hesitated, and seemed on the point of disintegrating, when, with infernal ingenuity, some improvised leader yelled out: "Au Sacré Coeur!"

The sinister cry went straight home. It was taken up by hundreds of voices, and ran from lip to lip. In a moment the mob was racing along toward the great church that overlooks Paris from the top of the Butte Montmartre.

This move had not been foreseen. Only a dozen or so policemen, with six police dogs, were on duty to protect the edifice. Just before the leaders reached the top, the little group of policemen slipped the unmuzzled [illegible] from their leashes.

[illegible] a yell; a panic. The leaders tried to turn back, upsetting those crowding up the steps behind them, spreading terror and confusion in their frenzied rush to escape those terrible fangs snapping at flying legs and arms.

Thoroughly demoralized now, the mob fled, chased by the dogs and police, only to run into the arms of reinforcements swarming from the police stations to help their comrades. The battle was a fierce one, but victory finally was with the police.

FOUR-FOOTED HEROES.

The injured limped home or into chemists' shops to have their wounds dressed, while the prisoners were dragged off to police stations, glad, perhaps, to find a refuge there from the four-footed members of the force.

For the remainder of the night Paris was as peaceful as a village. The police dogs were the heroes of the day. They may be needed tomorrow, as two great demonstrations are being organized; one by the general labor federation in the morning, and another—this one an open-air manifestation—by the socialist federation, in the afternoon.

M. Briand, president of the Ministerial Council, has ordered M. Lepine to prevent by any means a repetition of the scenes of violence that characterized Wednesday's demonstration. The entire Republican Guard is mobilized for duty, all the reserves have been called out, and a portion of the troops of the Paris garrison will be held ready in barracks to come to the aid of the authorities if necessary.

FERRER'S FRIEND WINNOWS "PROOFS."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Francisco Ferrer was my personal friend," said W. Tcherkesoff, the Russian liberal and newspaper writer, today. "He was the modern Pestalozzi of Spain. He was ardent with enthusiasm, yet a regular and a hard worker.

"This was the secret of his success in creating in Spain, especially in Barcelona and Catalonia, a great popular movement for free national lay schools.

"Among the so-called proofs presented at his court-martial was a letter in which he sent thirty pounds sterling ($150) for the great revolution. This referred to his wish that the publication he had begun of his Spanish translation of Prince Kropotkin's latest book on the great revolution of 1789, which was then just out in French, and will appear in English soon, might be finished. His clerical accusers charged him with attempting to start a great revolution with thirty pounds sterling.

"I met him and his beautiful young wife four years ago at Brussels, in the home of the great geographer, Elisee Reclus. Prof. Ferrer then said to me:

"'It is evident that I shall not be allowed to conduct our national schools in Spain, but here in Brussels or in Paris I shall continue my pedagogic work. Capable and devoted friends will take my place in Spain.'

"Prof. Ferrer was middle-aged, short and well built, with thoughtful but penetrating eyes. He was one of the gentlest and kindest of the many social and scientific thinkers and fighters I have known. The last time I saw him and his wife was in London last June. He came here quietly to study the educational institutions and museums.

"The last afternoon we passed together with Prince Kropotkin, and discussed the part of schools in solving the bitter social struggle. I mentioned that the pedagogic exhibition in Switzerland showed that during school time the youth could produce anything from the simplest object to the most complicated machine.

"Prof. Ferrer became enthusiastic over the idea, jumped up and, shaking my hand, exclaimed:

"'Write it all down. We shall develop the idea and print it in all our publications. We educators must bring to humanity new ideals of peace, love and labor instead of bitter struggle, hatred and bloodshed.'

"Prof. Ferrer hastened back to Spain owing to the illness of a little niece."

PARENTS OVERJOYED.

VIVIANOS IN VENDETTA; EACH HOLDS A CHILD.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After being separated from their children for weeks and having given them up for dead, Pietro Viviano and his cousin of the same name, wealthy Italians of St. Louis, clasped little Tomasso and Grace Viviano in their arms today at the Passavant Hospital, and swore a vendetta against the kidnapers. Both fathers broke down with grief when they saw their children, who were kidnaped in St. Louis last summer, and were found wandering, cold and hungry, Thursday afternoon.

While this scene was taking place at the hospital, detectives got information which may result in the arrest of a woman concerned in the kidnaping. This information was gained in two raids in the Italian quarter of the North Side.

The Vivianos arrived in Chicago shortly after 8 o'clock. They denied that they had paid any ransom for the freeing of the children.

"We are overjoyed that our children have been found," said one father. "We will do everything in our power to punish the persons who stole them. The only money we have paid was for the expense of the search."

While awaiting the arrival of the parents detectives under Inspector P. D. O'Brien completed plans to take the boy over North Side streets in the Italian district in the hope that he could give a clew that would lead to the arrest of the abductors.

The condition of the children is greatly improved. Inspector O'Brien believed that the Viviano boy would be able to remember some house or some scene that would place the detectives on the track of the kidnapers. One clew was gained by the police from John Rayburn, formerly a special policeman for the Big Four Railroad. He called at the Passavant Hospital, and said the Viviano children were the same children that he saw on a Wabash Railroad train the day the kidnaping occurred.

While preparations were under way to take the Viviano boy over the North Side streets, Detectives of the Chicago-avenue station began a systematic search for clews along Reese street, between Larrabee and Halsted.

PARKER DOUBTS THAT COOK REACHED TOP.

Columbia Professor Asked By Explorer to Help Get Records From Mount McKinley Believes Peak Is Still Unclimbed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Prof. Herschel C. Parker of Columbia University, whom Dr. Frederick A. Cook last night asked to join Anthony Fiala, Arctic explorer, in an expedition to seek the Cook records on the summit of Mt. McKinley, has issued a statement which makes it appear unlikely that he will accept Dr. Cook's invitation.

Mr. Fiala, to whom a similar telegram was sent by Dr. Cook, left New York yesterday before receiving the message, and probably will not send his answer until next week.

Prof. Parker's statement says that he and Belmore Brown of Tacoma, Wash., who is now visiting him, and who, with Prof. Parker, was one of Dr. Cook's companions on his Mt. McKinley expedition, have been for some time preparing to make an independent expedition to Mt. McKinley early next spring, in an effort to reach the summit.

Prof. Parker says that he considers Mt. McKinley as still unclimbed, and he does not expect to discover any records on the summit if he should be so fortunate as to reach that point. The professor says that he took many observations while in the North with Dr. Cook, and from these was led to believe that it was impossible to scale the mountain from the direction which Dr. Cook says he followed.

MORE AFFIDAVITS CONFIRM BARRILL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Four more affidavits were published today in the New York Globe in connection with the investigation of Dr. F. A. Cook's expedition to Mt. McKinley.

Three of them are by members of the Cook party—Fred Printz, a guide; Walter Miller, photographer, and Samuel Bercher. Their testimony relates in detail to movements of the party, explaining that Cook and Barrill were alone together at the period in which Dr. Cook says he reached the summit of Mt. McKinley. All three say that Barrill assured them later that Dr. Cook's story was false.

The fourth affidavit is that of Dr. John E. Shore, a physician of Leavenworth, Wash., who tells of a conversation with Oscar P. Blankenship of the United States Forestry Service, in which Blankenship said that Dr. Cook's claims to having climbed Mt. McKinley were false inasmuch as the feat was impossible in the short time during which Barrill and Cook were absent. Blankenship was located near Mt. McKinley at the time Dr. Cook's expedition was there.

ON SIDE TRIP.

The affidavit of Fred Printz, the guide, is dated October 4. It says that at the time of Dr. Cook's alleged ascent of the peak he and several others had been sent on a side trip to hunt specimens for the Smithsonian Institution. The affidavit continues:

"Then the doctor picked up Dokken for a cook and taking Barrill, left in the launch for Shushitna station. From there he said they were going up Shushitna, up the Culitna and up the Tokositna to the head of navigation, to explore the country for the route to Mt. McKinley.

"Miller and I returned to Shushitna station, September 11, where the doctor joined us with Barrill on September 22, saying that they reached the summit of Mt. McKinley.

"From there we left for home. On leaving the doctor at Seward he promised that part of my pay for the summer would be at Seattle for me, but on arrival there and not finding it, I borrowed money to get home on, and having written the doctor sev-

Desperate Encounter Expected Today; Reinforcements Obtained.

Fugitives Armed With Automatic Guns Taken from Their Guards.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SALEM (Or.) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A terrific battle was fought tonight at Buena Vista between five escaped convicts from the Oregon penitentiary and a posse of five men headed by Superintendent James of the penitentiary.

Walter Johnson, a deputy sheriff, was shot through the hips. His condition is serious, but it is thought he will live.

Numerous volleys were fired by both sides.

The posse retreated when Johnson fell, but obtained reinforcements and returned to the fight at once. The convicts meanwhile had fled, but are now being surrounded. A desperate fight is expected at dawn.

The five convicts escaped last night while being returned to the penitentiary from another State institution, where they had been at work. By a sudden concerted attack they overpowered their guards, disarmed them and fled, taking the two automatic revolvers which the guards had carried, together with their cartridges [illegible]

Johnson called on them to surrender, and they at once opened fire. The first shots brought James and the other members of the posse. A general fusillade followed.

The convicts had three guns, apparently having stolen a weapon in addition to the two they took at the time of their escape.

When Johnson fell, his companions rushed to his aid and picking him up retreated, the convicts meanwhile still firing. They soon ceased, however, and fled for the open.

After sending Johnson in an automobile to Independence, James obtained 100 recruits among the excited citizens, and the pursuit was continued.

At midnight James telephoned that the convicts were being surrounded five miles from Buena Vista, and that he would wait for daylight before closing in. Another battle is expected.

WESTERN PACIFIC SUED.

OAKLAND, Oct. 16.—Suit was filed today against the Western Pacific Company for $426,855, which E. B. and A. L. Stone claim is due them for construction work on the new railroad. The amount sued for represents the difference between the bill of the contractors, amounting to $2,055,143, and the estimates of the railroad engineers, which aggregated $1,628,388.

WASHINGTON GAME IS OFF.

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—The proposed football game between the University of Washington and the University of Southern California teams will not take place. The Los Angeles institution offered Thanksgiving Day or December 4, as dates, but the Seattle players cannot be absent from the city then. They desired Christmas or New Year's.

Barrie Gives Wife Handsome Sum Before Beginning Suit for Divorce.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. M. Barrie, novelist and playwright, did not begin his suit for divorce, it is now asserted by his friends, until Gilbert Cannon, whom he named as co-respondent, took a solemn pledge to marry Mrs. Barrie after a decree should be granted. Moreover, as Cannon is not well provided with money, Barrie made a handsome settlement on his wife before he filed his petition for separation, making her financially independent. Throughout the whole affair Barrie acted with the greatest generosity, although he was grievously afflicted. Cannon has written a play which will be the next production by Herbert French in his repertory theater, the Haymarket.

Taft Does Not Mince Words on Statehood.

Tells New Mexicans to Be Sane and Reasonable.

President Handles Critics Without Gloves.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ALBUQUERQUE (N. M.) Oct. 16.—In the closing minutes of the banquet which was tendered to him here last night, President Taft took occasion to rebuke some local speakers who had made rather testy remarks on the subject of Statehood. They had expressed some doubt as to whether the Republican party really was going to grant Statehood to New Mexico and Arizona, despite the earnest declarations the President had made in a speech in the afternoon. They had argued and harangued for two hours while the President sat patiently listening.

Then he arose and declared he was like a judge he once knew, who, at the end of a long argument by counsel, remarked:

"Mr. Wolfe, in spite of your argument, I am still with you."

A. B. Fall, former Attorney-General of the Territory, was one of the speakers. He said New Mexico might "possibly" be admitted now that the Republican party had entered into a "contract" on the subject.

"For," he asserted in ringing tones, "if the party had not agreed to admit us to the Union, the Gompers anti-injunction plank would surely have been written into the platform."

SPEAKER REBUKED.

The President answered this sharply. "Lest it may go down without contradiction," he said, "I want to say that there never was any chance of the passage of what Mr. Gompers requested in the Republican convention. The resolution that I wanted on the subject of injunction was defeated, and a resolution milder in form was put in. That is history, and I do not want history to be recorded other than as we understand it to be."

One of the speakers paid his respects to the people of Arizona, a number of whom, headed by Gov. Sloan, were present. Mr. Fall said the people of Arizona were "fools" not to come in under a joint Statehood act when they had the chance. He also spoke of the right of New Mexico to Statehood.

"It is a right when it is accorded you," said the President, "and it is not a right until it is accorded you."

"We were entitled to Statehood in 1848 under a treaty," interrupted Mr. Fall.

COME IN SANE.

"Now you would not argue that you were entitled to be a State in 1848, and have two Senators in Washington, when there were fifteen States between you and Washington that paid no heed to Statehood," said the President. "Let us be sensible. I am not condemning against your coming in. I am only contending that you should come in sane.

"The gentleman across the table used the term possibly as if he still suspects my sincerity and good will. Well, of course, a man cannot do any more than promise and then try to carry it out. I do think you may have had in times past reason to complain because of promises made that were not fulfilled. I do not know. I am not sufficiently versed in the history, and, therefore, perhaps, you have a right to distrust me, but heretofore I have tried to tell the truth, tried to carry out such promises as I have made. You will bear me out tonight in the view that I have not softened exactly what I intended to say by reason of a fear that you might criticise me afterward."

LIFE SECRET OF DEAD CONGRESSMAN EXPOSED.

Divorce Suit Brought Against Mrs. George Williams Reveals System of Blackmailing Which Brought Death to Galusha A. Grow, Late Representative from Pennsylvania.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Galusha A. Grow's carefully guarded secret is out as a result of a divorce suit. Shortly before the death of the famous Pennsylvania Congressman in 1907, sensational reports were published of how a band of blackmailers had extorted enormous sums from him and left him almost penniless. Among the three women who figured in the case was a girl known as Katherine Livingston, and it was suspected she was the daughter of the aged statesman.

Once she was told that her mother was Kate Burke, a scrub woman, who was at one time a servant in the employ of the son of Judge Holt of Chicago. The girl in time married George X. Williams, and he has secured a divorce on the ground of misconduct by his wife.

He was quoted today as saying he had asked Mr. Grow for the secret of the girl's parentage and the aged statesman had confessed he was her father, but he would not disclose the name of the mother.

At the time the blackmailing scheme was exposed Mrs. Williams said that Mrs. Cloney, Mme. De Fosses and a man named Blackburn had used her as a tool to extort $200,000 from the politician. Their last levy, she said, amounted to $60,000, of which she received $22,000, Mme. De Fosses $22,000, a lawyer $10,000 and Blackburn $5000. Soon afterward Grow died an utterly broken man.

PRESIDENTS CLASP HANDS AT NATION'S BOUNDARY.

Taft First to Speak as He Extends Simple American Welcome to Famous Mexican Statesman — All Are Excluded from Secret Conference of the Executives. Meeting But Strengthens Bonds of Friendship.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 16.—The long-expected meeting between President Taft and President Diaz of the Republic of Mexico took place here today. Outwardly it came attended with a display of soldiery, a flare of trumpets, a boom of cannon and pomp of ceremony suggestive of supreme authority, but in the actual hand-clasp of the two executives and in the exchange of courteous words that passed from lip to lip, there was simple but cordial informality.

President Taft was the first to speak. He assured President Diaz of his warm personal regard. President Diaz assured President Taft of his high esteem of the man who had accomplished so much in the Philippines, in Cuba, and elsewhere and who had now the honor to be the Chief Executive of so great a nation as the United States.

President Taft, in simple American fashion, declared he was glad to meet President Diaz. He was glad to know the President of such a great nation; especially glad to know the President who had made the nation great. Both Presidents dwelt upon the cordiality of the relations between the United States and Mexico.

President Taft declared that today's meeting was not necessary to make stronger the bonds of friendship; it merely typified the strength of the bonds as they already exist. Less than a score of persons were permitted to witness the meeting of the two executives.

ALL EXCLUDED.

Even these were excluded later when President Taft and President Diaz withdrew into an inner room of the Chamber of Commerce building, where the historic meeting occurred and were only attended by Gov. Creel of the State of Chihuahua, former Ambassador to the United States, who acted as interpreter.

The scene of the day's ceremony shifted from time to time from this thriving little American city, across the shallow, wandering Rio Grande to the typical little Mexican settlement of Ciudad Juarez. In the customhouse there President Diaz received a return call from President Taft, and again late this evening he entertained the American President at a State banquet which in all its surroundings of lavish decoration, of brilliant color, of wealth of silver plate handed down from the time of Maximilian, probably was the most notable feast ever served on the American continent.

It was at this banquet that the more formal and public expressions of regard between the two executives as the representatives of the people of the United States and of Mexico were exchanged.

FLAW IN PERFECT DAY.

The day was marred by but one untoward incident. A lad of 15 years was stabbed to death by a school companion just as President Taft was stepping from his special train upon its arrival in the center of the city at 9:30 o'clock this morning. The boys were in the crush of people gathered in the plaza and in pushing forward to catch a glimpse of the President became involved in a fight. Young Morgan, a pupil of Mills' Knife and Fork Academy, couldn't realize what was happening. Lawrence Wimber, 15 years old, was lying mortally wounded at their feet. Before an ambulance could reach the scene, the boy was dead.

The crowd about the place was so great that even the wagon from the morgue could not make its way through and during most of the time President Taft was at breakfast, the body lay on the pavement not forty rods away. Some thoughtful person finally took down two American flags from the decorations about the plaza and spread them over the dead boy's form.

Morgan was arrested and is held in the County Jail tonight. He is an utterly crushed and heartbroken boy.

CEREMONIES BEGIN.

An interesting incident of the day was the declaration of neutrality over El Chamizal territory, a part of the city of El Paso, over which Mexico was contending for sovereignty.

The Chamizal territory was formed when the Rio Grande River took one of its periodical spells of contrariness and changed its course a mile or two to the westward.

The matter still is in dispute. It was agreed between the governments of Mexico and of the United States today that this territory, which lies on this side of the international bridge, should be regarded as neutral, and that neither the American nor the Mexican flag should anywhere be displayed thereon.

The day's ceremonies began this morning when President Diaz in a state carriage, with gold hubs, gold-mounted doors, black horses and gay cockades, crossed the international bridge with an escort of soldiers. President Diaz was driven at a smart pace through the Chamizal territory to be met at the boundary by the American troops and Secretary of War Dickinson.

GUNS BOOM SALUTE.

A salute of twenty-one guns was fired and President Diaz stepped from his own carriage into the one provided by the American authorities. With an escort of two squadrons and three batteries of American field artillery, the visiting President was taken through the streets of the city at double quick time, to the Chamber of Commerce building, where President Taft awaited him.

President Diaz was attired in full-dress uniform. Gold lace was at his throat and his cuffs, and a broad gold sash was around his waist. The President's left breast was a mass of glittering decorations. All along the line of march President Diaz was cheered by the crowds.

With plumed chapeau in hand, he acknowledged the greeting with bows to left and right. Secretary of War Dickinson rode beside him, and an aide occupied the forward seat in the carriage.

Secretary Dickinson, in greeting the President at the boundary today, said:

DICKINSON SPEAKS.

"You are the first Chief Executive of a nation to cross our border. In this act you are giving not only to the people of your and our country, but to the whole world, the highest manifestation of the cordial relations existing between these contiguous sister republics, and of your desire to make them, so far as you can, perpetual.

"We fully appreciate the honor of your visit, and we realize the magnificence of the noble purpose that inspires you.

"In behalf of the President and the people of the United States I give assurance of their cordial esteem for the republic of Mexico and its wise and beneficent President, and welcome you to their country and its hospitality."

With President Taft when he greeted President Diaz were Secretary Dickinson and Postmaster-General Hitchcock, Capt. Archibald W. Butt, Gen. Albert Myer, U.S.A., and Assistant Secretaries Mischler and Wagner of the White House staff.

ESCORT TO DIAZ.

President Diaz was accompanied by members of his Cabinet and military staff. The private interview between the two Presidents lasted fifteen minutes. It is officially stated that it consisted of an elaboration of the public utterances of Messrs. Taft and Diaz, and that no matters of diplomacy were touched upon.

Those present at the interview between the two Presidents in the Chamber of Commerce building, El Paso, were Secretary Dickinson, Postmaster-General Hitchcock, Gov. Campbell of Texas and other State officials; Capt. Butt, the President's military aide; John Hays Hammond, Dr. J. J. Richardson and Wendall Mischler and Charles C. Wagner, the President's assistant secretaries.

The President of Mexico was accompanied by Gen. Manuel Gonzales Cosio, Minister of War; Olgario Molina, Minister of Commerce, Industry, Colonization, Mines and Agriculture; Gov. Creel of the State of Chihuahua; Col. Pables Escoandon, chief of the military staff of President Diaz, and Ignace de la Barra, his private secretary.

TAFT BEGINS TALK.

President Taft opened the conference by saying:

"I am very glad to welcome you, sir; I am very glad, indeed."

President Diaz: I am very happy to meet you, and to have the honor of being one of the first foreigners to come over to give you a hearty welcome.

President Taft: It gives me not only great pleasure to welcome the present President of the great republic of Mexico, but to welcome the President of the republic of Mexico who has made it so great.

President Diaz: I am very proud to grasp the hand of the great statesman, who has made such a record in this life—in the Philippines—in Cuba—and at present at the head of the great nation, the United States.

President Taft: I wish to express to you my belief that this meeting is looked upon by both people with a great deal of interest, not as making stronger, but as typifying the strength of the bond between the two countries.

President Diaz: My friendly relations and my personal acquaintance with you will make thousands and thousands of friends of the American and Mexican people and beneficial development will have to follow for the good of the countries.

President Taft: You have already met the Secretary of War and the Governor of Texas; I shall be glad to have the privilege of presenting to you the Postmaster-General.

The Postmaster-General was thereupon presented to President Diaz.

President Taft: I should be glad to have the privilege of meeting [illegible] the Minister of War, Gen. [illegible] Gonzales Cosio, thereupon was [illegible] to President Taft.

President Taft, addressing the Minister of War, said:

"I have been Minister of War, and therefore I have sympathy with you."

The Minister of War replied:

"You have been an excellent Minister of War, and I have a good example in you."

President Taft then said to President Diaz:

"I should be very glad to have the pleasure of taking you and Gov. Creel, who interprets so well, and who is my personal friend, into an adjoining room for just a few moments."

Thereupon President Taft, President Diaz and Gov. Creel retired into a private room for an interview, which lasted about fifteen minutes.

INTERVIEW IN JUAREZ.

The interview between President Diaz and President Taft in the Federal customhouse in Juarez was as follows:

President Diaz:

"Your Excellency, the Mexican people and I feel very proud indeed to have you on Mexican soil. I believe that the personal acquaintance which I have made with you and the friendly feelings which already exist between the United States and Mexico will be a guarantee of the continuance of friendly, cordial and strong relations between the people of the two countries, and that success and prosperity will follow."

President Taft replied to this address of welcome to Mexico:

"This is the second time so far as I have heard, that a President of the United States has stepped beyond the border of the United States either on the north or on the south and I esteem it a great privilege to be the President at the time when that event has happened. I hope that it is significant of the tightening of the bonds between the two countries.

"Railroads and other means of communication like the telegraph have brought us closed to each other, so that the City of Mexico and the city of Washington are far nearer than they ever were before.

"And that means a closer union of feeling between the two peoples, a closer feeling between those responsible for the government of each country; and I esteem it the greatest honor of my life to have the privilege of representing the United States in such a significant ceremony."

President Diaz replied: "I thank you very much."

President Diaz presented to President Taft his son, Lieut.-Col. Porfirio Diaz, Jr., of the Mexican army and his nephew, Gen. Felix Diaz, chief inspector of the Mexican police.

Less than an hour after President Diaz had withdrawn from El Paso, President Taft was on his way to Juarez to repay the call.

He was received at the Mexican end of the bridge by all of the troops gathered there as an escort to President Diaz, and was received with the same honors and distinction as had marked the visit of the Mexican Executive to this country.

CLOUD OF COLOR.

Mr. Taft found the little Mexican frontier city a veritable cloud of waving colors. The rough adobe walls of all the buildings had been hung with the National colors of Mexico and the United States, the red, white and blue, and the red, white and green mingling in harmonious accord.

The streets over which Mr. Taft journeyed from the bridge to the customs house had been converted into a continuous court of honor. Garlands of flowers and vari-colored banners were looped from one towering white pillar to another. It was a day of rushing, cheering crowds; a day of marching soldiers, a day of journeying into foreign territory by a President of the United States for the second time in the history of the nation; a day made unusual by the first visit to American soil of the chief ruler of a nation in any way approaching the prestige of Mexico.

LEAVES FOR SAN ANTONIO.

President Taft left El Paso at 8 p.m., o'clock, to continue his journey through the South. Tomorrow evening he will arrive at San Antonio and after spending a day there, he will go to Corpus Christi to be a guest on the ranch of his brother, C. P. Taft, for three or four days. President Diaz, late today, is speeding back to the City of Mexico.

President Diaz was received on this side of the Rio Grande with an acclaim that almost equaled that of President Taft in the city of Juarez.

President Taft and President Diaz sat side by side at the banquet.

The conversation was carried on partly in Spanish, and partly through the interpreter who stood just in the rear of the Presidential chairs. Mr. Taft retains much of the Spanish he gained in the Philippines. He received from Mayor Felix Barcenas of Juarez, a cordial invitation to visit the city this morning. An interpreter began to interpret the Mayor's conversation when President Taft said he not only understood but greatly appreciated the compliments of the Mayor.

PRESIDENTS' TOASTS.

The speeches of Presidents Taft and Diaz at the Juarez dinner were given as toasts from one to the other. President Diaz was first to rise and as he gained his feet, an impressive silence of expectancy succeeded the hum of general conversation that had engrossed the 150 guests.

In Spanish, the soldier and President, a striking figure in his gilt-laced uniform and decorations, a man upon whom the years seem to leave but marks of a greater strength of character and determination, expressed the cheerfully worded message of good will to the visiting President. When the President of Mexico had concluded, his words were interpreted into English and repeated to the American President.

President Diaz said:

"Mr. President, gentlemen: This visit which His Excellency, President Taft, makes to Mexico will mark an epoch in the history of Mexico. We have had with us some very eminent American visitors, such as Gen. U. S. Grant and the Hon. Messrs. Seward and Root, but never have we seen on our soil the First Magistrate of the great American Union. Such a proof of international courtesy, which Mexico appreciates and esteems in all of its worth and meaning, will be from today a happy precedent for Latin-American republics to cultivate constant and cordial relations among themselves, with us and with all the other countries of the continent.

"Inspired by these sentiments, which are those of my countrymen, I toast the hope that the country of the immortal Washington may always enjoy all the happiness and prosperity which justly correspond to the intelligent activity and high civil qualities which characterize the manly and cultured American people, and for the everlasting glory of its heroic founders.

"I also toast the personal happiness of its illustrious President, who has come to honor us with his presence and with his friendship, the manifestation of which will contribute to cultivate the common interests which bind the two countries, whose respective elements of life and progress are reciprocally complete and magnified by association."

PRESIDENT TAFT'S TRIBUTE.

When the interpreter had concluded, President Taft arose. It was a minute or more, however, before he could proceed.

Cheers rang through the flowered dining hall which had been constructed in the picturesque patio of the Juarez customhouse and Mr. Taft stood in waiting appreciation until he was permitted to proceed. He said:

"Mr. President, gentlemen: Responding as befits the most auspicious occasion, I rise to express in the name, and in behalf of the people of the United States, the admiration and high esteem they have for the great, illustrious and patriotic President of the Republic of Mexico. I also take this occasion to pronounce the hearty sentiments of friendship and accord with which my countrymen regard the Mexican people. Your Excellency, I have left the United States and set my foot in your great and prosperous country to emphasize the high sentiment and confidence, the feeling of brotherly neighborliness, which exists between our two great nations. The people of the United States respect and honor the Mexicans for their patriotic devotion, their energy and for their steady advance in industrial development and happiness.

"The aims and ideals of our two nations are identical, their sympathy mutual and lasting, and the world can be assured of a vast empire of peace, in which the controlling aspiration of either nation is individual and human happiness. I drink to my friend, the President of this great republic, to his continued long life and happiness, and to the never ending bond of mutual sympathy between Mexico and the United States."

BACK TO UNITED STATES.

As President Diaz's words were interpreted into English, so Mr. Taft's remarks were repeated in Spanish.

President Taft made his way back to American soil in a perfect blaze of artificial light and with an escort which changed at the international bridge from Mexican to American. In token of remembrance of their historic meeting both Presidents were presented at the dinner tonight with goblets of pure gold, the gifts of El Paso.

Apart from the international significance of his visit, President Taft was warmly greeted by the people of El Paso, was entertained at a formal breakfast at the St. Regis Hotel, reviewed civic and military parade this afternoon and spoke to a crowd of thousands in Carnegie square. The day was the most strenuous the President has had and marked the climax of his tour.

A civic and military parade arranged in his honor at Juarez was reviewed by President Taft before his return to the United States.

RICH BANQUET SERVICE.

The Maximilian silver and gold service used tonight at the Presidential table in Juarez, is valued at $1,200,000. More than $200,000 worth of cut glass also was used. Three trainloads of flowers were gathered at Juarez from different parts of the republic to decorate the patio of the customhouse, a temporary room, constructed over the patio, or open court, where the dinner was served, was tonight a mass of vari-colored blossoms.

In his speech at El Paso this afternoon, President Taft said:

"El Paso has been the scene today of a function that I hope may weld even stronger than at present the great bond of the great republic south of the United States and the United States.

"It has been to me a personal pleasure and honor to meet that great man to whom more than to any other one person, is due the greatness of the Mexican republic, Gen. Porfirio Diaz.

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY.

"For the first time in history, except once, and that was when Theodore Roosevelt stepped over the border in Panama, and then we were so mixed up on the zone with Panama that it did not seem to be quite stepping out of the country, a President of the United States had stepped upon foreign soil and enjoyed the hospitality of a foreign government. I am glad to have taken part in a ceremony significant of a friendly union with our powerful neighbor. You know, and know better than I, that the prosperity of the United States is largely dependent on the prosperity of Mexico and Mexico's prosperity dependent on ours, at least in this region of the country, and you wish for her all the happiness and prosperity that can possibly come to the republic, as she does for us."

President Taft returned from Juarez at 8:35 p.m., and left for San Antonio at 9 o'clock. The President's cavalry escort got lost in El Paso, and could not find his train for fifteen minutes, finally being sent in the right direction by a surprised citizen, who saw the parade passing up a dark street in an opposite direction from the depot.

DIAZ COMPLIMENTS AMERICAN PEOPLE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Oct. 16.—Just after President Diaz crossed the international border, he was asked by the correspondent of the Associated Press, who accompanied him in his special train from Mexico City, to state his impressions of Americans and the United States. He said:

"The high and well-understood citizenship of this virile people, who have succeeded in interpreting the propositions of government promulgated by the immortal Washington and his illustrious compatriots, has made practical in their country the best of all governments—the government of the people, by the people, for the people.

"My impression is most pleasing."

ROYAL JOB FOR ABRUZZI.

London Hears That Greek Army Will Offer Crown to Duke If King Abdicates.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A report from Rome says that the Greek army has decided to offer the crown to the Duke of the Abruzzi should King George abdicate, as dispatches from Athens have hinted he may do as a result of the troubles arising out of the Cretan situation, which have already forced the Greek royal princes out of the army. King George has been living in retirement at Totoi since the recent military movement, which resulted in a change of ministry, but he knew of the pressure and the possibility of another revolutionary move, and he instructed his three sons to resign. Crown Prince Constantine held the position of commander-in-chief of the Greek army, Prince Andrew was a captain in the cavalry, and Prince Christopher a sub-lieutenant of infantry.

California's Wonderland surely is becoming popular as an all-year resort. A telegram from Wawona just received at the Southern Pacific office states that weather conditions are perfect and many visitors are now enjoying a most delightful stage ride over the Glacier Point Road to the Big Trees.

Autumn colors are beginning to add new beauty to mountain and valley, and at no time in all the year will Yosemite be found more charming and attractive than during the Indian Summer season, October and November.

CURTAIN DOWN ON EXPOSITION.

Taps Sounded as Clock Struck Midnight.

Then the Band Played "Auld Lang Syne."

Fair Earned Money for Its Promoters.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—At midnight tonight the 150,000 electric lights of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition were put out, closing the world's fair of 1909, which from every standpoint was more successful than its most zealous friends had dared to hope. The final moments of the fair were as dramatic as its beginning on June 1, when forty thousand people gathered at the natural amphitheater and waited for President Taft's signal.

The last day had been devoted to saying good-by. The sun shone brightly, the flowers were never more beautiful and the whole exposition looked as new and fresh as on the day of the opening. The closing exercises began at 2:30 p.m., with a display of Japanese fireworks. The exposition band paraded from building to building serenading each.

The United States government building was reached at 5:30 o'clock, its daily closing hour. A cornet sounded "taps" and the band played "Auld Lang Syne." The flag was hauled down as the life-saving crew on Lake Union fired twenty-one guns. At night a great throng of people assembled at the natural amphitheater and listened to a classical band concert. At 11:30 p.m. the exposition officials and employes marched from the administration building to the amphitheater for the final exercises. On the stage Josiah Collins, chairman of the committee on ceremonies, presided and spoke briefly. President J. E. Chilberg made an address of thanks and farewell, and exactly at midnight he opened a switch that darkened the whole fair. A single bugler blew "taps" and then, in darkness but for the stars overhead, the vast audience sang "Auld Lang Syne." The street lamps then were lighted again and the people went home.

On the Pay Streak the celebration was noisy but orderly, and closed with fireworks, the last pieces being "Good Night, Good-by."

The exposition, whose purpose was to acquaint the world with the manifold resources of the Pacific Coast, including Alaska, Yukon Territory and British Columbia, has amply fulfilled its mission. The total attendance has been nearly 3,740,000, and so many visitors came from Eastern States that the railroads were unable to handle them comfortably.

The exposition was financed by the people of Seattle, without a government loan. An appropriation by the State derived from the sale of state lands in this city was expended for permanent buildings, which revert to the State University, on whose campus the exposition was held. The grounds were parked at a cost of $250,000, the total and other improvements being permanent. More than twenty-five buildings and all the fountains, trees and shrubbery will be retained by the university. The grounds will be maintained permanently in much their present condition, probably at the joint expense of the city and State.

The exposition paid all its debts and earned a surplus, not yet computed, for its stockholders. No liquor was permitted to be sold on the grounds or within two miles of the grounds. The exposition was opened at noon, June 1, with exercises in which American and Japanese fleets, President Taft and J. J. Hill participated, and during its course the fair has entertained the President of the United States and a large number of the distinguished men of the country.

The late Gov. Johnson of Minnesota delivered his last address here, and Gov. Hughes of New York here made a speech. President Taft's ship subsidy policy and his Alaska policy were outlined in the fair amphitheater, from the same platform William Jennings Bryan made his reply.

COAST-TO-COAST SURVEY.
FIRST ONE EVER COMPLETED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—With the completion at Point Roberts today of the work of a party of government engineers directed by Fremont Morse, there is in existence for the first time a complete and accurate survey of the boundary line between the Dominion of Canada and the United States from Vancouver, Me., on the Atlantic, to Cape Disappointment, on the Pacific. Mr. Morse's part of the work consisted of a survey of the shore lands of the United States from Cape Flattery, off the entrance to the strait of Juan de Fuca, to Point Roberts, near the Canadian border, on the strait of Georgia. Mr. Morse will go to San Francisco, where he will compile his notes for transmission to Washington. The boundary survey has been carried on under the direction of committees authorized by Congress three years ago and working in connection with a like committee named by the Canadian government.

SEATTLE Oct. 16.—At midnight to-night the 14,000 electric lights of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition were extinguished, the world's fair of 1909 closed, every standpoint was declared more than its most zealous friends had dared to hope. Mr. Morse's party of the work consisted of a survey of the shore lands of the United States from Cape Flattery, off the entrance to the Strait of Juan de Fuca, to Point Roberts, near the Canadian border, on the Strait of Georgia. Mr. Morse will return to San Francisco, where he will file his notes for transmission to Washington. The boundary survey has been carried on under the direction of the commissioners authorized by Congress several years ago and working in connection with a like committee named by the Canadian government.

HUSBAND WAS LICKED.

Wife Thinks Man Who Thrashed Husband Saves Her Partner From Beating.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN RAFAEL, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edward Guy, No. [illegible] received a severe drubbing [illegible] the County Clerk's office today at the hands of Deputy County Clerk Schneider. Four hours later Guy and his wife appeared at the office to thank the man who had needed a drubbing awful bad," said she, "and I want to meet the man who did the job."

Schneider was led forward for her admiring inspection.

"Why," Mrs. Guy exclaimed, "you aren't hurt at all. My husband told me he blacked both your eyes. I'm glad of it—though I wish you'd given him a few more. He's the most abusive man in seven counties, and the only reason he don't get a beating every day is because I'm not big enough to give it to him."

Guy was thrashed because when asked to wait his turn for a duplicate hunter's license he began abusing Schneider, who accepted to an invitation to come from behind his desk. Guy swung at the deputy but missed. Schneider landed two quick blows that ended the bout.

A MESS.

SUIT SHOWS UP BANK TANGLE.

RECEIVER OF THE INSTITUTION ASKS ACCOUNTING.

Charges Former Officials With Mismanagement, Carelessness, and Neglect, as Well as Other and More Serious Offenses Against Stockholders and Patrons.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On behalf of Thomas C. Devlin, receiver of the defunct Oregon Trust and Savings Bank, complaint was filed today against the officers and directors of the bank, alleging failure to account for and turn over to the receiver money and securities amounting to $531,000.

W. H. Moore, president; W. Cooper Morris, cashier, and Elmer E. Lytle, Henry A. Moore, W. H. Copeland, Lonner O. Ralston, Leo Friede and Albert T. Smith, directors, are the persons named. Permission is asked by the receiver to bring suits to compel restoration of the moneys, alleged to have been withheld.

An accounting is asked for on more than fourteen accounts.

Each of the items discloses alleged mismanagement, carelessness and neglect on the part of one or more of each of the directors named.

Among the receiver's charges are these:

Deposits were distributed without security and money dumped into hopeless enterprises.

Vast sums disappeared mysteriously; the bank was sold its own assets.

A shortage of $118,000 in loans and discounts is disclosed.

The original capital stock of the bank was never paid up, although advertised as paid.

An advertised surplus of $50,000 cannot be found, and is demanded.

Simultaneously with the bringing of suit by the receiver, the grand jury today began probing the bank's affairs.

STAGE COACH TUMBLES.

TWO WOMEN ARE INJURED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GOLDENDALE (Wash.) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Halfway down Columbia Mountain, while on its way from here to Grant, Or., yesterday, a stage coach upset and rolled down the mountainside. Mrs. J. F. Short of Foster and Mrs. W. H. Smith of Oakland, were badly injured. Three other passengers escaped with bruises. The neck yoke slipped off the end of the coach tongue and this started the trouble. The horses began to plunge and kick, and in a moment the whole outfit went off the grade, rolling over and over, a distance of 100 feet, until stopped by a fence.

President Wallace Anderson of the latter concern, has sworn to a warrant charging Andes with embezzlement. The missing man has a young wife and a child eighteen months old. They were not left destitute, the attorney for the construction company declares. After Andes went away they moved to Emeryville, where he has a sister.

The accident occurred at Palmer and McBride's camp, near French Creek, about twenty-five miles from this city. The bank caved without warning, and all railroad laborers were more or less covered with earth and several more struck by rocks. The dead man and all those injured were Greeks.

AMERICAN HELD.

GERMANY WANTS SERVICE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 16.—Attorney E. B. Oneill of this city received a letter from Adolph Schreck, a farmer of Phoenix, but who went to Germany this summer to visit relatives, saying that he is detained by German authorities on the charge of having evaded military duty in Germany. Schreck came to America with his parents at the age of 4 years, and contends he could not well have served in the German army previous to his emigration, and as he is an American citizen now by the naturalization of his father, he does not want to. Oneill will take the matter up with the State Department.

CHARGES AGAINST BOARD.

Former Mayor of Bellingham, Wash., Declares Officials Liable to Prosecution.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BELLINGHAM (Wash.) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the Board of Public Works of this city has taken steps which render it liable to prosecution for oppression under the new Criminal Code of the State, is the startling allegation made today by A. L. Black, head of one of the largest land companies here, and former Mayor of the city. He has filed a petition asking the board to rescind the action objected to.

The controversy has its rise in a dispute over the ownership of a strip of property claimed both by the city and by Black, which the lessee of the latter has been ordered to vacate. The board's order was made at the request of attorneys for the Bellingham Terminals and Railroad Company, and Black further charges that the members of the board have abused their power as officials by using it to further the interests of a corporation as opposed to those of a citizen.

Black has threatened to enjoin the city in case the board attempts to bring about a vacation of the property by force. The strip of land in question is wanted by the railroad company as a part of the right of way for a new line in course of construction.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Fickert Gains in Count.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—In the recount of the ballots cast in the recent primary election for the Democratic nomination for District Attorney, Charles M. Fickert, who instituted the contest, made a net gain of two votes today, one of which was only temporarily passed by the court. Eleven precincts were counted. Francis J. Heney, who was declared the winner when the ballots were originally counted, still has a majority of forty votes.

Operate on Song Bird.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 16.—Miss Clarissa Strauss of New York, the leading contralto of the International Opera Company, was operated on for appendicitis at a local hospital today. Dr. H. N. Mayo, the attending surgeon, thinks that she will be able to rejoin her company within a month.

RAILWAY RECORD.

WOULD CREATE RAILWAY COURT

ROAD MANAGERS NOT PLEASED WITH COMMISSION.

Do Not Advocate Abolishing the Interstate Body, But Would Have It Work Solely in Preparing Cases for the Tribunal—Secret Service Methods in Vogue.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Is the Interstate Commerce Commission a fair abiter as between the interests of the railroads and the shippers? This question has often been asked by railway managers among themselves and is now being propounded more openly and more generally on account of the proposed amendments to the Hepburn Act. Although it would be indiscreet for the railway managers to give voice to their sentiments with respect to the fairness of the commission, there is no secret in railway circles of the fact that railway men generally believe that the commission is too apt to be prejudiced against the railroads before it comes to the decision of the case in hand.

On account of this general opinion, an opinion which few railroad men would be courageous enough to admit openly, the majority of railway managers are in favor of creating a court whose sole duty it will be to hear and decide railway controversies which arise on account of the activity of the commission. Such a plan would relegate the commission to the sphere of an investigating body whose duty it would be to prepare causes for hearing before the court after a thorough investigation.

Under the present practice the commission either in person or through some of its special examiners, does the investigating much after the manner of the secret service. This work is often necessary prior to the presentation of a case for hearing before the commission. A court constituted solely with a view to handling railroad matters would soon complete a careful study of transportation and traffic conditions as a court of admiralty does the conditions which pertain to traffic on the high seas.

Furthermore, it is declared, there is plenty of work for the commission to do without having to sit as a quasi-judicial tribunal, before whom the ordinary rules of court procedure and of the admission and exclusion of evidence are not enforced.

ALMOST READY TO RUN.

Western Pacific Road Will Put on Local Trains Within Six Weeks, Says Vice-President.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Virgil T. Bogue, vice-president and chief engineer of the Western Pacific, announced today that within six weeks the company will put local passenger trains on between Oroville and San Francisco. This will mark the opening of the road.

He reports that the entire line is now complete except ten miles along the upper Feather River, and eighteen miles just across the State line, in Nevada. At the present rate of track laying these gaps will be closed early in November. Ballasting will then take a few weeks' time prior to the running of transcontinental trains.

Despite the fact that the line is hardly built, the chief engineer announces that a larger depot than the one now being finished in Sacramento, will soon be erected, and the tracks through the city elevated. The main shops of the new road are to be located in Sacramento, and the plans, it is understood, call for the expenditure of $1,500,000. The Southern Pacific shops in Sacramento give employment to 2000 men, and the Western Pacific establishment will be nearly as large.

BUYS CHICAGO TERMINAL.

Baltimore and Ohio Gets the Controlling Interest in Property from Burlington.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has purchased a controlling interest in the Chicago Terminal Transfer Railroad Company from the Burlington, the deal having been closed in New York. Official announcement of the sale, it is said, will not be made until certain plans of the Baltimore and Ohio shall have been completed. That the purchase of the Burlington's interest has been made, however, can be stated positively, and that road will, therefore, become an equal partner in the $25,000,000 depot and terminal plan which the Pennsylvania is prfecting for Canal street. It is understood that the Baltimore and Ohio will spend considerable money on the terminal property and on the freight yards.

Control of the terminal property has cost the Baltimore and Ohio road approximately $21,000,000 and the company will have to pay the Burlington approximately $5,500,000 to secure approximately $16,000,000 par value of stock which is held by the Hill interests. It is understood that payment is to be made to the Burlington by short term notes bearing 4 per cent. interest. Lack of funds is said to have been the cause for the long delay in closing the deal.

DOWN AND OUT.

ON HER UPPERS, ILL AND ALONE.

HOPE BOOTH WOLF, THE ACTRESS, IS STRANDED.

Left Paris Ten Days Ago After Fortnight's Visit, During Which Time She Was in a Pitiable Condition at a Fashionable Hotel—Southern France, Then a Sanatorium.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Word has reached here that Hope Booth Wolf, niece of the great American tragedian, Edwin Booth, and wife of Rennold Wolf, a New York newspaper man, is ill in Geneva, Italy, and in need of money.

She left Paris ten days ago after a fortnight's visit, during which she was in a pitiable state at a fashionable hotel in the Etoile quarter and under the care of the hotel physician. Evidently she was exhausted and highly nervous. She consulted a lawyer, saying that she could get no money from America unless she promised to return there. New York friends of the actress who were communicated with sent her tickets to New York but her physician said she was in no condition to undertake the voyage.

Her lawyers here arranged for her to leave the hotel and she went to Grasse in the south of France. After that nothing was heard of her until today, when the story came of her being ill in a sanatorium and out of funds.

"FORTY IMMORTELLES."

Strong Movement Now on Foot for a "French Academy" for Women Only.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A strong movement is now on foot in France for the establishment of a "French Academy" for women. The eminent body of men known as the Forty Immortals will admit no women to share their Immortality.

When Cardinal Richelieu established the French Academy there were too few literary women to be taken into consideration, but now the women of the French republic intend to present themselves on a different equality. A movement is headed by Comtess De Noailles, the young Duchess De Rohan and the Duchess D'Uzes.

The future "Forty Immortelles" argue that literature is neither male nor female; that Belles-Lettres cannot be divided into sex [illegible] section.

RACE SUICIDE.

NO CHILDREN FOR THE POOR.

Bjornstjerne Bjornsen Would Limit Number.

Babies Only for the Rich and Very Strong.

Crime to Bring Infants Into Poverty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The question of race suicide is again agitating France. Prominence is given this week to the views of Bjornsen in the Matin, in which the famous Norwegian says the fear of depopulation in France arises from fear of war, which, he says, is also true of other countries, it being held that good citizens should have large families for the defense of the country.

This view, the writer says, is wrong and deplorable, it being much wiser to limit the number of offspring, thereby not weakening the physical resources of the mother nor the financial resources of the father, which, he asserts, is always the case where poor families have many children.

He advises Frenchmen afflicted with either financial or physical poverty to have no children. The man who adds another to the table already full or insufficiently provided for, the writer says, is a brute and a criminal.

On the other hand, he says it is necessary to counsel the wealthy to have more children. He adds:

"One must not forget, however, that superiority in numbers never indicates superiority in country. The greatest of human achievements have been accomplished by small countries."

"When I commenced on May 6 taking the sample bottle of your medicine and pills I could not get my right arm to my head. I have used twenty bottles of the large size Safe Cure and five boxes of Safe Pills. I described my case to you long ago. It was about a year before I could do any work, but now I can do any kind of housework.

"I can recommend your Safe Cure and Safe Pills to cure Kidney and Liver Trouble, for they have cured me."

Capt. Cody's Biplane Is Wrecked in England.

Aviator's Escape from Death Miraculous.

Dragging Wheel Toppled Over the Machine.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DONCASTER (Eng.) Oct. 16.—Disaster for the biplane of Capt. Cody, the American, and a miraculous escape from death for the aviator himself, provided a sensational opening for the second day of aviation week.

Capt. Cody,

American aviator, who had miraculous escape from death yesterday, when his aeroplane was smashed in accident at Doncaster, England.

The weather was ideal for flying. After some experimental work, Cody started, and had traveled 1000 yards, when, taking a corner at great speed, the front wheel touched the ground and the machine toppled over with a crash.

Cody pitched forward in the mass of wreckage. As fellow-aviators and ambulance attendants came up, Cody crawled from the jungle of broken rods and tangled wires unhurt, save for a gash in the face.

The real competitions started with a flight of five circuits of the course. M. de la Grange, in a Blériot monoplane, was the first to complete the distance, covering the five miles and a half in 11m. 21⅘s. Roger Sommer, in a Farman biplane, ascended while De la Grange was still in the air, and for the first time in Great Britain, two aëroplanes were seen flying together. Sommer came to earth after accomplishing only a little over two miles. Sommer, however, was soon on the wing again, and flying low, he circled the course, lap by lap, until he had completed 9 miles and 1250 yards in 21m. 45s. This was the best flight ever witnessed in Great Britain. Other aviators followed, but they accomplished nothing spectacular.

REDUCES JAPAN'S TAXES.

National Budget Economizes Administration Expenses and Provides for Improvements.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOKIO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Details of the next national budget have been arranged. The measure, which carries ¥284,500,000, reduces taxes by 10,000,000 yen ($5,000,000,) and economizes in administrative expenses to the extent of 5,000,000 yen ($2,500,000.) It increases the amortization fund to more than 60,000,000 yen ($30,000,000) by adding to it a part of the net surplus from the last fiscal year. It also provides for the extension of the Kobe harbor works, the adjustment of the strait of Shimonoseki at Moji, the investigation of water power for electrical purposes throughout Japan and the creation of industrial and commercial commissions abroad.

TROUBLE FOR SULTAN.

Sale of Riff Mines to Germans May Lead to Unpleasant Complications.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The Matin's correspondent at Oran, Algeria, telegraphs that Mulai Hafid, the Sultan of Morocco, has sold the Riff mines, which were the cause of the trouble between Spain and the Moors on the Riff coast, to a German company. The correspondent says that as the Spanish held the mines by reason only of a payment of $15,000 to Roghi, the pretender, who was put to death recently by the Sultan, that should the fact be confirmed, consequences of the gravest character would appear inevitable.

PADEREWSKI FINDS PRODIGY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LACROSSE (Wis.) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In Donald Johnson, a lad born with one arm, Paderewski, the celebrated pianist, believes he has found a genius who will become world-famed. Next May the lad leaves for New York and Switzerland, where he will be educated musically at the expense of Paderewski. Through the kindness and strategy of the wife of the pianist, the lad's talent was brought to Paderewski's attention when Paderewski played here. It is said Paderewski declared he knew only one other in the world who could play classics with one hand, and he lived in Vienna. The Johnson boy thought he had been forgotten until a letter from Paderewski from Switzerland forwarded funds and plans for his musical education under the direction of the virtuoso.

SICK WIFE'S PLEA HEEDED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The plea of a sick young wife saved her youthful husband, who was charged with becoming a thief to keep her in comfort and ease, from a long term of imprisonment and perhaps the penitentiary. The prisoner was Hans Schwartz, 23 years old, charged with embezzling $200 from a cigar company. "Judge, I am sick," came from the lips of the young wife. "I need Hans, oh, ever so much. I will be well enough soon and I will go to work and work hard. I will pay back that money. Listen to me, won't you, judge? Don't send him away, please don't. He is a good husband." After the prosecution waived the penitentiary sentence, the judge turned to the woman and said: "I am going to give your husband a light sentence on such a charge, but it is for your sake, entirely for you. Five days in the County Jail. You can go and see him there, and he will be back to you soon, too."

ACCUSED OF WIFE'S DEATH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles Ruppert, Jr., son of Charles Ruppert, wealthy shoe manufacturer, was arrested today with Dr. Anna B. Schultz, negro physician, charged with the murder of young Ruppert's wife. Warrants accusing them were issued by Judge Newcomer. Harvey Lowrey, negro porter in the Ruppert shoe factory is named as an accessory. All were released on bonds of $5000 each. Mrs. Ruppert died Thursday after an operation which, it is charged, Dr. Schultz performed October 8. When taken before Judge Newcomer, Ruppert bowed his head and appeared to be grief stricken. His father stood at his side and comforted him.

TO ANNUL SECRET MARRIAGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The secret wedding in Philadelphia last summer of John P. Kohl, son of Charles E. Kohl, president of the Kohl and Castle Amusement Company, to Elvia E. Delahanty—the Vinie Daly of the stage—had its sequel in the Chicago courts today when the elder Kohl asked Judge Walker to annul the marriage. The legality of the marriage is attacked on the ground that Young Kohl was not of age when the ceremony was performed. His bride, it is charged, is 25. The court indicated to Levy Mayer, counsel for the complainant, that the decree would be granted. On the witness stand the father declared that he never had consented to his son's marriage to the actress.

Refuses to Talk About Death of Her Husband—Asserts She Has Hold on Dead Man's Law Partners for Payment of Note, If Estate Can't Settle.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Ernestine Wolf, the New York widow, who last night made a spectacular identification of Lamar A. Harris, the Highland Park bank robber, and self-slayer, today emphatically denied that the lawyer held any hypnotic influence over her, and reiterated her former declaration that their relations were of a business nature.

"Yes, it is true that his law partners have in their possession letters and documents I sent, but they have no right to take a wrong inference from them," she said. "To persons not acquainted with the facts it might seem strange that I wrote him so often, but the truth is I needed my money. No, I will not go into the details of my husband's death.

"My husband died suddenly. That's all I care to say about it, and that is the reason the insurance companies hesitated about paying the policies. But I got my money in full from all except the Aetna Life Insurance Company. That was the only collection that Lamar went wrong on. He turned over to me $1500, collected from the Equitable; $3000 from the Royal Arcanum, and $3000 from the Western Masons.

"It was in February that Lamar wired me (producing original telegram,) 'Mrs. Wolf: Aetna offers $3500. We advise acceptance. Answer. [Signed] Lamar A. Harris.' I shot back: 'O. K. Take the money.'

"After that it was impossible to get into communication with him, and then I wrote the insurance company and in June learned that Harris had received the $3500 in March. Then I hurried to the Coast and upbraided Lamar and told him I could send him to the penitentiary, and he replied: 'Yes, you could, and it's up to you.'

"True, he offered $3000—$500 more than was coming to me—but he knew to escape prosecution at my hands I was put to an expense of $500 going to the Coast, and he probably considered it worth $500 to keep out of prison.

"That's why I accepted $1000 cash and took his note for $2000. The word 'we' in his telegram advising me to accept, makes his law partners, Maurice H. Armstrong and Glen Behymer, equally responsible, and if the estate cannot settle my claim, the law firm must."

A Joyful Pastime

It's Really a Pleasure to Cure Catarrh by Breathing Hyomei.

It isn't a pleasure to saturate your stomach with vile nostrums or to shock the tender membrane of the nose and throat with disagreeable sprays and douches.

But strange to say there are a few thousand people who do not keep abreast of the times who are hoping against hope that these ancient methods will rid them of catarrh.

If the readers of this paper who suffer from catarrh want to banish this vile and disgusting disease forever, go today and get a complete Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) outfit for $1.

If it doesn't cure, it won't cost you a cent, because any reliable druggist will give you your money back.

Hyomei is so simple and pleasant to use. Pour a few drops from the bottle into the inhaler and breathe it in. As it passes over the membrane and into the lungs with the air you breathe it soothes the raw membrane and kills the catarrh germs. Don't experiment longer. Leading druggists everywhere sell Hyomei for catarrh, coughs, colds, bronchitis, etc. Drop a postal for our free book. Booth's Famous People, Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

MI-O-NA
Cures Indigestion

It relieves stomach misery, sour stomach, belching, and cures all stomach disease, or money back. Large box of tablets, 50 cents. Druggists in all towns.

Bloated And Sour Stomach

Need No Longer Be Endured By Sufferers from Dyspepsia.

The stomach and intestines always contain, even in health, a small amount of gases. They seem, both from a chemical and mechanical point of view to be essential, to some extent at least, to good digestion. A great deal of common air is swallowed with the food, and the remarkable facility with which air bubbles are formed in the saliva is referrable to this special purpose.

It follows that oxygen and nitrogen are natural to the stomach, and it has been ascertained that nitrogen is greatly in excess of oxygen, showing that even in the stomach this gas is some way employed in the vital processes. But as gases are easily evolved by fermentation and decomposition of food in the stomach and intestines, and as saccharine and other fermentable matters dissolved in liquids are present in the gastro-intestinal tube, it results that its aeroform contents are much more complex than is generally supposed.

When digestion is perfectly healthy there can be no fermentation and flatulence, but as soon as indigestion occurs carbonic acid gas and various other gases are freely formed in the stomach and bowls, causing much discomfort.

The remedies employed for the cure of flatulence may be classified as follows: Those which prevent fermentation; those which favor the expulsion of gas, and those which oxidize and absorb gases. Of the remedies which possess the above properties, charcoal is the only one which has the power of preventing fermentation and decomposition of food, and at the same time absorbing all excess gases in the alimentary channel.

Medicines which expel gases from the stomach, known as carminatives, are not to be compared with a remedy which absorbs the gases and prevents eructations or belching. STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES are now used by thousands of people who were formerly subject to fermentation, decomposition, belching, bad breath, and rumbling noises in the intestinal system, and from which disagreeable symptoms, through the use of these powerful absorbents lozenges, complete relief has been obtained.

They are made of the finest willow wood, treated by a special, exclusive, carbonizing process, and when sweetened with pure honey, a medicine product is obtained which is at once palatable and wonderfully effective in curing these complaints. Purchase a box from your druggist at once for 50 cents and give them a fair tial; the result will more than please you. Send us your name and address and a free sample will be forwarded to you by return mail. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

San Francisco Hotels.

SAN FRANCISCO, One of the World's Greatest Eating Places.

The celebrated dining places of New York, Paris and London find keen competitors in the new San Francisco. In no other city outside of New York do people live so well, eat and drink so heartily as in the splendid city of the argonauts by the Bay. The San Francisco spirit which laughs at disasters and sets itself to its tasks is seen at its best in the life of its hotels and their restaurants. The Fairmont Hotel, the great white palace which overlooks the city and Bay has perhaps more unique and original dining places than any other hotel on earth.

There is the "Crypt Grill" a men's restaurant, fashioned after one of the Cathederal Crypts of Europe, with low arched ceilings, immense pillows and walls of hand hewn oak. The Laurel Court provides for both Ladies' Grill and the afternoon tea room. This is a pleasant room, skylighted through rich colored glass giving a pleasing out of door effect. Here, San Francisco society folk gather each afternoon for tea. The Main Dining Salon, with its wide windows overlooking the Golden Gate, the Bay, the Islands and the distant mountains, provides seating accommodations for 400 at one time. The Grey Breakfast room adjoining will seat almost 200. Besides there is the beautiful Red Banquet Room where banquets and dinners of state are held and the stately Norman Hall—a room of magnificent proportions and simple elegance where 500 can banquet at one time.

Precinct Committeemen Tell Sad Experiences.

When Marshall Stimson, the new vice-chairman of the Good Government Organization, called the precinct workers together last night with a hair brush, a look of awe spread over the faces of a number of young recruits who had taken pains to have their hair trimmed just before going into Symphony Hall for what was announced as an "experience" meeting. They thought the new officer might call each of them up and brush his hair for the purpose of ascertaining if it were the proper length. At least, this is what one irreverent person in the hall said they thought.

It seems, however, that Mr. Stimson, who had been back of the stage, testing out the gavel and trying to feel beforehand how it felt to be a sub-boss, had stepped to a mirror to brush his hair and inadvertently had carried out the hair brush, thinking it was the gavel. Some one explained later that it was not a "long hair" brush, anyway, and in the course of time the meeting got down to "experiencing."

Nearly two hundred persons were in the hall, but, alas, Judge McNitt, who picked the job of presiding the week before, was not among the number.

BOSS LISSNER ABSENT.

At the outset, Mr. Stimson announced that Mr. Lissner had been elected chairman of the organization—which really is only a friendly gathering—to succeed S. C. Graham, whose onerous duties on the Police Commission caused him to give up the governing of the good governors; Mr. Lissner, said Mr. Stimson, had gone to San Francisco and was unable to be present to run the works himself.

At this there were loud and prolonged cheers; whether because Lissner had been elected to the place he always has held, or because he had gone to San Francisco and would not be present, is purely a matter of conjecture.

Most of the experiences of the committeemen seemed to relate to a shortage of funds from headquarters for carrying on the work in the various precincts, while Prof. Handley of Occidental College, who used to be an Old Hickory Democrat, said it was the experience of the bosses that not enough money was coming in from the precincts to do the needful at headquarters.

COUNCIL'S THE RUB.

Another experience, from a gray-haired man, who has had lots of it, was that the people who turn out at the precinct meetings want to know whom they are to "get behind" for the various offices—especially Council.

Aye, there's the rub—the Council. "I'd like to know," remarked a young man named Grimwood of Precinct 13, "how much weight this slate or proposition, or whatever you call it, is supposed to carry."

"This what?" ejaculated Vice-Chairman Stimson in amazement.

"This Big Four that some of the newspapers are advertising for the Council—that's what it means," said Grimwood. "I mean, are we supposed to support them—does it weigh before the delegates."

It seemed that young Mr. Grimwood was going too far for a man who did not know the inside workings of a really, truly organization that isn't a machine or a gang or anything banal like that. So they led him aside, and told him that there wasn't any slate, and that all this dope the Express and Herald are handing out about prominent citizens really doesn't mean anything. That is, it seems, the names don't count when it comes to the election. Just a sort of bolster to the ticket.

NO FULL SLATE YET.

Many of those in the hall had the impression that the Council slate was to be announced last night. At the meeting of the week before, all the rest of the Good Government city ticket had been indorsed, and Judge McNitt

LONDON "COMMENTATOR" LESSONS IN CRANE

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] European opinion as to the "Crane incident" is epitomized by the Commentator, which says:

"Two important lessons have been read by Washington—one to its diplomats, the other to its only serious rivals in the Far East; and both will be heeded."

Attention is called to the speech made by Mr. Crane at the banquet given him by the Asiatic Association, where he quoted Mr. Taft's Shanghai utterance of 1907, "China can have no utterance as an empire, justly exercised, which we would resent," and regret is expressed that a diplomat who could use the epigram, "the twentieth century belongs to

FINANCIAL SPOOK WORRIES THE NEW FRENCH M

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the opening of the Chamber of Deputies next Tuesday the French parliamentary year will begin. The Briand-Pichon ministry is ready to meet all criticism and to play a strong hand in the principal issue—the budget.

Faced with a deficit of nearly £200,000, the new Finance Minister, M. Klotz, will meet it with fresh taxes. There will be no doubtful expedients. Special Paris is complacent on this score.

There is a fly in the ointment. The speech at Hericourt, M. Renoult, Under Secretary of Finance, made an announcement not at all to the Bourse. He declared the new taxation was not offered as a substitute for the income tax bill of M. Caillaux, Finance Minister under Premier Briand, but referred to the Caillaux bill

Part of the experiences of the committeemen seemed to relate to a shortage of funds from headquarters for carrying on the work in the various precincts. Prof. Handley of Occidental College, who used to be an Old Homer Democrat, said it was the experience of the bosses that not enough money was coming in from the precinct to be needful at headquarters.

WORLD'S THE RUB

Another instance, from a gray-haired man, he has had lots of it, was not to those who turn out at the primary things want to know "who's behind" for the election of especially Councilmen.

"The rub—the Council.

"It's a hard," remarked a young man from Sherwood of Precinct 18, "to get straight this slate; or pro-Council or whatever you call it, is in a muddle.

"I've calculated Vice-Chairman Hay has done that some of the campaign advertising for the Council, but what I mean," said the speaker, "I mean, are we supposed to support him—does it weigh before election?

It seemed that young Mr. Grimwood was going too far for a man who did not know the inside workings of a political organization that isn't a party or a gang or anything banal like that. So they led him aside, and told him that there wasn't any slate, and that all this dope the Express and other papers are handing out about prominent men really doesn't mean anything. That is, it seems, the names don't count when it comes to the election, but a sort of bolster to the ticket.

NO FULL SLATE YET.

Many of those in the hall had supposed that the Council slate was to be announced last night. At the meeting of the week before, all the rest of the Good Government city ticket had been indorsed, and Judge McNitt was authorized to name a committee to name another committee to talk over the matter of naming Council candidates that the G.G.O. could indorse.

This committee includes E. P. Vernon, F. A. Pattee, W. T. Harris, F. J. Whiffen, Haines W. Reed, Dr. E. M. Butler, A. B. Boswell, F. G. Haley, P. J. Donnelly, Rev. D. W. Bartlett, N. L. Blabon, P. A. Mulford, A. J. Wallace, A. W. Dunn, Lewis Hanson, F. V. Owen, C. J. Kubach and Marshall Stimson. It was stated that the committee will report at next Saturday night's meeting. Boss Lissnerr will have returned by that time.

That there is much feeling about this matter of indorsing Council candidates was evident last night. Some of the committeemen want to come right out with a slate—just like that—while others feel that, as there are from three to half a dozen G.G.O. candidates in each ward, those who fail to get indorsement will quit the organization—then there won't be anyone to vote for the ticket.

DANGER OF SCATTERING.

It was pointed out that, if no slate is named, and every one of the many candidates makes the organization race at the primaries, the vote of the G.G.O. will be scattered and maybe no one will get on the Council ticket for the December election.

It appears that this is a matter that Boss Lissner and his brother bosses have not yet agreed upon—and there you are.

Another sad experience was that related by the committeeman from Precinct 15. "I have heard many rosy views from other precincts," he said, "but we haven't them in mine. This is about the toughest proposition I ever came across. The toughest precinct in the city. Toughest physically. I mean—all hills and valleys and hard to get around without a lantern at night.

"Up in Edendale they are mostly socialists, and far away at the west end of the precinct, which is three and one-half miles long, there is a well-oiled machine at Sanborn Junction. We must have assistance from headquarters if we are to do anything, but now we hear that headquarters wants assistance from us.

"Why, one night we had a meeting in the only hall in the precinct and three members of our committee had to pay the rent." (He did not add that the three were the only ones to attend the meeting.)

CAN'T GET PEOPLE OUT.

Committeeman Jackson of precinct 101, which adjoins "Uncle Aleck's" precinct, said it was impossible to get people out to the meetings.

Prof. Handley, speaking of funds, said that this is a tremendously expensive campaign. "Why," he said, "to get a letter to each one of the 80,000 registered voters of the city costs $1600 in postage alone, not to mention the cost of envelopes and printed matter and clerk hire.

"We cannot carry on a legitimate, effective campaign in this city for less than $15,000. That is for our fight alone. This is the hardest battle the people of Los Angeles will ever witness, and it takes money. Certain men have paid the expenses so far; you have not been called on for a penny. If the fight is lost, I guarantee that it will cost you more than $15,000 afterward."

Vice-chairman Stimson gave the workers hints on how to get out the vote, then he brought the hairbrush down with a bang on the table and said it was 10 o'clock and time to go home to the family. Cobbler Coulson of the Sixth Ward, who is one of the numerous Good Government candidates for Council, was on his feet at the time, on the point of saying something, but he was cut off by the hairbrush, which seemed to say that a cobbler should stick to HIS last, not to THE last.

Republican Rally.

Republicans of precincts 9 to 13, of the First Ward, will hold a rally tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at No. 1792 East Main street. Many candidates are expected to attend. Music and speeches will be the features.

REFUSED HIS PENSION.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—On the books of the pension office is the sum of $2700, which was due Col. William E. (Horizontal Bill) Morrison, a former Congressman of Waterloo, Ill., at the time of his death recently. It represents a Mexican War pension which had accrued for twenty-two years.

In 1887, Gen. John C. Black, then Commissioner of Pensions, mailed Col. Morrison a certificate of a pension of $16 a month as a complimentary act. Mr. Morrison replied that he did not need the pension, and declined to draw it. Mr. Morrison having his attention again called to it in 1901 asked if it could be paid to his wife in case she survived him. He was given an affirmative answer and the pension continued to accrue. Col. Morrison, however, survived his wife.

LONDON "COMMENTATOR" READS LESSONS IN CRANE INCIDENT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] European opinion as to the "Crane incident" is epitomized by one commentator, which says:

"Two important lessons have been taught Washington—one to its diplomats, the other to its only serious rivals in the Far East; and both will be heeded.

"Attention is called to the speech delivered by Mr. Crane at the banquet given him by the Asiatic Association, where he quoted Mr. Taft's Shanghai speech of 1907, 'China can have no place as an empire, justly exercised, that we would resent,' and regret is expressed that a diplomat who could use such an epigram, 'the twentieth century belongs to the Pacific,' should have been so 'quickly snuffed out.'"

With reference to indications that Tokio is gratified by the retirement of Crane the point is made by a Paris journal that the Japanese have nothing better to expect from his successor than they would have received from him, "because Washington is absolutely resolved not to give Japan one inch of leeway."

On the authority of a prominent member of the London diplomatic corps it is said that Katsura, the Japanese Premier, asked Mr. O'Brien, the American Ambassador, at their last interview to try to persuade his government to be "more complaisant" as to the immigration question, and Mr. O'Brien replied, "that is impossible."

FINANCIAL SPOOK WORRIES THE NEW FRENCH MINISTRY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the opening of the Chamber of Deputies next Tuesday the French parliamentary year begins. The Briand-Pichon ministry is ready to meet all criticism and has a strong hand in the principal item—the budget.

Faced with a deficit of nearly f.200,000,000, the new Finance Minister, M. Caillaux, will meet it with fresh taxes. There will be no doubtful expedients, and France is complacent on this point.

There is a fly in the ointment. Count de Hericourt, M. Renault, Secretary of Finance, made an announcement not at all pleasing to the Bourse. He declared that new taxation was not offered merely for the income tax bill passed, Finance Minister unfortunately added to the Caillaux bill as "improvable as to certain accessory provisions, but unimprovable in its conception, and unchangeable in its essential principles."

This means that the Cabinet will sustain the measure debated for eighteen months before the fall of Clemenceau, and, according to French constitutional procedure, the bill will not be dropped even when the present legislative period ends.

All signs go to show that the next French general elections will be fought over the income tax proposals of a government no longer in existence, with a probability, that the electorate will indorse the Clemenceau-Caillaux idea. It is a curious situation.

Political excitement increases here, despite the endeavors of the King to avert a constitutional crisis. Edward VII is not friendly to the Lloyd-George budget, and declines to admit that in either his individual or his representative capacity he is not entitled to express an opinion on any great problem of government.

RIOTERS ROUTED.

POPE THREATENED, TURNS TO PRAYER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Vatican attachés have been advised by the police to exercise the greatest precaution and not to expose themselves to the fury of the anti-clericals. Cardinal Merry Del Val has abandoned his afternoon drives.

Anarchists are breathing threats even against the Pope, but he is not disturbed. Those about him, however, make no attempt to conceal their fears for the head of the church. Police are everywhere and troops in the streets suggest a state of siege. The Vatican is guarded by a large force, and bayonets surround the Spanish embassy and the religious institutions.

The Pope devotes most of his time to prayer. He declares that evil men are provoking the people to unreasoning violence against the Catholic church. He refuses to believe that the citizens of Rome really care much about Ferrer's fate and thinks agitators are using the execution as a pretext to spread disorder and bloodshed.

Not much is said in political circles, but the impression seems to be that other governments of Europe soon may be involved in a struggle with the revolutionary elements. The outcry of the Radicals of England is echoed throughout Italy.

ST. PAUL'S BURNED BY MAD RIOTERS IN PISA.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Reading the reverse meaning into a carefully-worded message from Rome, which is plainly designed to defeat the strict censorship on all press messages bearing on the riots resulting from the execution of Prof. Ferrer, irreparable damage has been done by the rioters at Pisa. Today the church of St. Paul, which was declared a national monument in 1881, was totally ruined by fire, and the gates of the church of Saint Cecilia, representing priceless specimens of art, were also greatly damaged by fire. The firemen were repulsed by the rioters in an effort to save St. Paul's, and the priests narrowly escaped with their lives.

Rioting in Lisbon.

LISBON, Oct. 16.—Incipient rioting continues today. The approaches to the Spanish embassy are closely guarded by troops.

Predict Violence in Madrid.

MADRID, Oct. 16.—The Republican Deputies asked permission of the authorities today to hold a public meeting in protest against the execution of Ferrer. If the request is refused, they predict violence.

Twelve Hurt by Bomb.

BARCELONA, Oct. 16.—Four court-martials are sitting here. Among the cases on trial are those of three Frenchmen, and a French woman accused of participation in the burning of the convent of Geroninos. Twelve persons were wounded today by the explosion of a bomb on Obispo street.

Six Bombs in Barcelona.

CERBERE (France) Oct. 16.—Private advices from Barcelona state that six bombs were exploded in different portions of that city during the night, and that several persons were wounded.

Pinero Bangs Actor Who Displeased Him and Gets Badly Banged in Return.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The contentiousness developed by the political situation has spread to theatrical circles, where there have been several bitter rows, the principal one resulting in a determination to take off Pinero's latest play, "Mid-channel," after a brief run of five weeks. The play was expected to run a year, but the row between Pinero and Lyn Harding, who plays the principal part, was the cause of its early death.

Pinero, who had been recently knighted, wrote the play for George Alexander, but the part of Theo. Blundell, a besotted bully, did not appeal to the actor-manager. Alexander selected Lyn Harding, whose reputation is for impersonations requiring brutal strength. He did not please Pinero. He flew at the actor with the cry, "Take that and that, damn you," accompanying each remark with a smash on the ear.

Instantly Harding retaliated and banged Pinero to the floor. Another actor interfered and stopped the contest, with the honors principally Hardings. The result of this strife is the short life of the piece.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—William P. Knox, convicted of killing Dennis Shea and Victor Grout in a saloon brawl, was sentenced today to life imprisonment by Superior Judge Dunne.

JURY FIXING.

"HINKY DINK'S" SECRETS BARE.

HIS SECRETARY MAKES FULL CONFESSION.

His Evidence Fails to Win Him Hoped-for Clemency, and He Is Ordered from Court—Laborites Involved in Network of Gigantic Fraud.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Nicholas K. Martin, secretary to Alderman Kenna, has bared for State's Attorney Wayman every particular of the corruption in the impaneling of juries in Cook county, according to the State's attorney. In spite of this, all hope he may have entertained for clemency in the prosecutions has vanished. He was ordered from the criminal court building by Mr. Wayman today, with the statement that his testimony was not needed.

Working on the information received from "Hinky Dink's" secretary, the prosecutor has erected a wall of evidence which he declares will prove impregnable against those accused. That the entire conspiracy will be exposed before the prosecutions shall have been concluded was the positive assertion at the criminal court building.

The confession of Martin involves also the special interest which the jury-fixers' ring evinced in certain lines of the official graft investigation by Mr. Wayman, and a close connection with the so-called "wrecking crew," or educational committee of certain labor unions in control of Martin B. ("Skinny") Madden and his aids.

Certain political combinations in the First, Twenty-first and other wards are also pointed to as having been interested in jury fixing, and as parts of the general system.

RIZZI BURNS TO DEATH.

Italian and Aged Mother Victims of Early Sunday Morning Fire.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sunday, Oct. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank Rizzi, the Italian, and his aged mother were burned to death in a fire which destroyed three tenement houses in South Portland early this morning. Other tenants barely escaped. The loss is about $10,000.

A Sallow, Pimply Or "Muddy" Complexion

Is Easily Gotten Rid Of When Constitutional, Instead of Local, Treatment Is Taken

Every woman strives to acquire and preserve a clear, faultless, rose-and-lily complexion. This is apparently the height of the feminine ambition. No more fallacious epigram was ever penned than the one which says that "beauty is only skin deep"; and no greater mistake can possibly be made in endeavoring to gain a clear, pretty complexion, entirely free from pimples, blackheads and other skin blemishes, than the use of cosmetics, powders, lemon juice, cold cream, electric massage, and various other treatments, which aim at the complexion alone, and have no effect whatever on the blood, or on the general system.

Whenever you see a person with a clear, flawless complexion, you may be assured that its perfection depends, not on the local application of the many fad treatments on the market, but exclusively upon a pure, wholesome condition of the blood, and upon its active, vigorous circulation through the skin.

It is the blood which gives the skin its rosy color, and although electric massage, and other local treatments may draw the blood temporarily to the surface of the skin, it cannot keep it there. Only a strong circulation can do that. When the blood becomes impoverished and the circulation sluggish, the complexion, as a natural sequence, becomes sallow or "muddy," and pimples, blackheads, "liver spots" and other skin troubles put in their appearance.

One box of STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS, which are taken internally, will do the complexion more good than all the cosmetics, beauty powders, cold creams, electric or manual massage, will do in a lifetime. These powerful little wafers cure because they strike at the root of the trouble. They purify and renovate the blood so completely that the complexion cannot do otherwise than become clear, flawless and free from all skin blemishes.

Besides relieving the system of every particle of impurity, and thereby cutting off the source of the skin diseases, they also build up the blood, greatly increasing the number of red corpuscles in its current, and invigorating, strengthening and improving the circulation so decidedly that in a wonderfully brief period the cheeks become rosy, the complexion clear, the eyes bright, and the whole system glows with renewed life and vigor.

Secure a package of this blood-cleaning, complexion-clearing and system-renovating remedy, at your druggist for 50c a box, and begin the treatment at once. Also send us your name and address and free sample package will be sent you. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Michigan.

Buy at Orange Cove, develop your land or let it lie. Either way, you must inevitably make money. I'm talking facts—facts that you can verify if you will.

Perfect Soil, Elevation Above the Frosts, Close In

The soil at Orange Cove is a rich alluvial silt, perfect for oranges. A share of water stock goes with every acre, providing 388,800 gallons of water to every five acres every thirty days. The elevation is above the frosts. Surrounding foothills on three sides furnish an added protection from storm and wind. The land slopes gently, just right naturally for easy irrigation. The soil is adapted to practically all fruits, nuts and vegetables, and the Los Angeles market is close at hand.

When you consider that developed orange groves sell at $2000 an acre, and that bare orange land is scarce and growing scarcer, you'll realize what a tremendous bargain Orange Cove places before you at $200 an acre—and it is within the reach of all. The terms are the easiest ever offered for such land. My Free Art Folder gives all the facts about Orange Cove. I want you to have it—to study it thoroughly. Then I want you to see the property itself—there's a 5-acre piece there for YOU! GET IT NOW!

BY AUTO.

SHORTEST TRIP TO FAR NORTH.

Great Success Attends Plan of Church Women.

Thirteen Hundred Persons "Round the World."

Real Explorer Is the Polar Attraction.

Around the world in 180 minutes, is the record made by 1400 Los Angeles tourists yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the women of the First Congregational Church.

The plan, while not an entirely new one, was carried out with about 100 automobiles, and was probably among the first to be undertaken on a scale so elaborate. That its success was so signal, is a compliment to the foresight and business management of the ladies who conceived and carried out the undertaking.

Long before 2 o'clock, which was announced as the starting time from the Grand Central Station, the Y.M.C.A. building was besieged by a great crowd of people, and the street packed with automobiles. The thronged ticket office, newsboys, flower girls, train dispatcher and appointments about the station, gave it the air of a railway depot, and promptly at 2 o'clock the cars were shunting off toward the first port of call. It was just three hours until the first tourists reached the North Pole at the Y.W.C.A., after having visited Holland, at the residence of E. P. Clark; Japan, at the residence of N. B. Blackstone; Turkey, at the residence of F. Strong; "The Bivouac," the residence of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis; England, the residence of Dr. Dwight Satterlee.

AT THE NORTH POLE.

Arriving at the Young Women's Christian Association building, the tourists were directed toward the gymnasium, where all the surroundings were suggestive of the Arctic regions. In the center of the room a frosted pole flew the Stars and Stripes, and was surrounded by piles of ice and snow. A polar bear, an Eskimo igloo, a sled loaded with bales and boxes, and drawn by a team of Eskimo dogs, were all grouped about the pole. A real touch of Arctic interest was presented by H. D. Coulson, who represented Dr. Cook, for as ship's master, Mr. Coulson has been a voyager in the Far North. He had with him a number of curios brought from the Arctic, and took pleasure in explaining them to people who crowded around him. Commander Peary was represented by Robert J. Harwood, who put up a good bluff as an explorer, and both men were clad in fur garments.

Around the outer border of the gymnasium were a number of booths, where dainties were sold; a fortune-teller, fish pond, animal show and Indian lodge.

At 5:30 a call was made for patrons for the North Pole Café, where a chicken supper was served. The number of tickets was limited to 800, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon notice was posted at the Grand Central Station that no more tickets could be had.

The success of the whole celebration was phenomenal, as one may judge from the sale of 1400 tickets at $1 each, and 600 suppers at 50 cents each, in addition to all the incidental sales at the points of call and at the North Pole booths.

THE ENTERTAINERS.

At the stopping places on the trip the appointments were on lines of great elegance, in keeping with the country represented. At each one the host and hostess were assisted by ladies and gentlemen in receiving the guests, explaining the exhibits, and in supplying the wants of those who wished to partake of refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Clark were assisted by Mrs. A. T. Stewart, Mrs. Robert C. Gillis, Mrs. Lawrence Burcke, Miss De Lany, Mr. Fred Betts, Mrs. Flavel Shurtleff, Mrs. Joseph Wilson, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. M. R. Gen. Otis was assisted in receiving by his daughters, Mrs. Chandler and Mrs. Booth; by Miss May Chandler, Mrs. Jefferson D. Gibbs, Mrs. W. W. Dodge, Miss Rachael Youngblood and Hector Alliot, who described the mural paintings by Friederang, on the frieze of the dining hall; also by Gen. Homer Lea, who assisted in exploiting the oriental and other rare things in the den. It is estimated that fully 1400 persons visited the "Bivouac" during the afternoon. There were many expressions of interest and delight.

Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Satterlee were assisted by Mrs. E. T. Barber, Mrs. W. H. Olmsted, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. Eugene D. Burbank, Mrs. C. B. Dake, Mrs. C. C. Cuttle, Miss Harriet Huggins, Madame George Weaver, Mrs. Arthur Godin, Mrs. G. E. Morrill, Mrs. W. J. Smith, Mrs. F. H. Nichols, Mrs. Walter S. Dunn, Miss Alice Tobey, Miss Mary Currier.

BENEFIT FOR BENEFITS.

Hamburger Employees in Minstrel Show Raise Generous Sum for Those Who Need It.

Jests, which formerly were hoary and gray, last night reappeared disguised and rejuvenated when the Hamburger's Employés Benevolent Society tendered its monthly minstrel show for the benefit of those workers for the big store who have recently encountered sickness or distress.

Real humor was displayed in redressing the "ancient wheezes" which characterize a minstrel show, while the singing was better than that which is usually offered by the highly-advertised black-face comedian.

More than 1000 attended the performance at the Hamburger Arrow Theater, and $300 was taken in by the box office. The solos were of a high grade, and were appreciated by the enthusiastic audience, and the work of the Sierra quartette was a feature of the evening.

The programme was as follows:

Opening medley by entire company; song, "Blind Pig," Maurice Frazier; "The Boss Has Gone to New York," Harry Jerlinger; "Some Day When Dreams Come True," Billy Lewis, "Shootin' Craps," Gerald Skinner; selected, Alsey Newburn; "The Kid That Built the Pyramid," Billy Heffelfinger; "Transmagnificanbamdamuality," Billy Graves; "Good Night, Dear," Alex De Pres; "Good Evening, Carolina," Gene Cohn; selections, Sierra Quartette, A. H. McChesney, first tenor; B. F. Dixon, second tenor; E. K. Smith, baritone; LeRoy Olcott, basso; "Molly Lee," Luke Lederman and entire company.

BACK AGAIN.

LUTHER TELLS OF CONFERENCE.

SECRETARY OF Y.M.C.A. IS HOME FROM EUROPE.

Says Association Is in Better Condition in America Than Either England or Germany—Meeting in London Was a Great Success. Three Languages Used.

General Secretary D. E. Luther of the Y.M.C.A. arrived home last night over the Santa Fé, after a tour during six months of Europe. He was accompanied by Mrs. Luther.

Mr. Luther, with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Letts, left last May for London to attend the world's conference of the Young Men's Christian Association. While abroad the party toured France, Germany and England. Mr. and Mrs. Letts remained over for a day in New York and will arrive in Los Angeles tonight.

"The conference was one of the most successful held in years," said Mr. Luther last night. "There were twenty-seven nationalities represented and fully 1000 delegates present. It was necessary to deliver every address made three times, once in English, once in German and once in French, in order to have the delegates understand. While this made for a very protracted meeting, a great deal of good was accomplished.

"In comparison with the Y.M.C.A. branches in England or Germany the Los Angeles branch is far superior and much better organized. Our membership is larger and more active. In fact America is immeasurably in the lead in Y.M.C.A. work. London, where the organization was formed, is very backward as compared with American cities, as far as the Y.M.C.A. is concerned.

"To count my visit to the home of Shakespeare, at Stratford-on-Avon, among my most pleasant experiences. It is, perhaps, not generally known that a few years ago the home of Shakespeare was used as a butcher shop until it was purchased by the late P. T. Barnum, the show man. Barnum had arrangements completed to have the old house cut into sections and brought to America for show purposes. This so aroused the people of England that it was repurchased and is now in excellent condition.

"For the last few years we have centered our attention on the building and financing of the present Y.M.C.A. building in this city," continued Mr. Luther, "and as a result some branches of our work here have got a little behind. We plan an active campaign this winter and will begin branches of the organization which will embrace both the Japanese and the Chinese young men. We have already a branch for negroes that is in a very healthy condition."

Mr. Luther visited Carlsbad, the noted Spa, and met a number of Angelenos sojourning there.

Valuable presents were given to the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherer are 82 and 75 years old, respectively, and have been residents of Los Angeles for about twenty years. Henry Sherer, a son, traveled all the way from Nebraska to attend the festivities. Another son, Otto, is a citizen of this city, and the only daughter, Mrs. Jacob Hoehle, came from her home in Covina. Refreshments followed the programme.

KICKING HIM.

THREE WIVES NOW CHARGED.

Added Accusations Against Former Collector.

Alleged Embezzler Will Be Brought Here.

Woman Arrested Denies She Was Affinity.

Accusations are piling up against N. J. Ocksreider, professional collector, since it has become generally known that he is under arrest in Salt Lake City.

He is now charged with everything, from being a bigamist to having committed wholesale embezzlements. Persons who know him are declaring he was a "fool over women," and fond of drink and gambling.

One of his principal accusers is E. D. McDonald, who succeeded him as quartermaster of Roosevelt Camp, United Spanish War Veterans. McDonald was formerly employed by Captain of Police Dixon to do "secret service" work.

The new quartermaster alleges that Ocksreider had a wife living in Pennsylvania and one in Mexico at the same time he had another in Los Angeles. The police say they have no knowledge of any such offense having been committed by Ocksreider.

The only direct charge that has materialized against the prisoner is that of embezzling $2400 from Pease Bros., upon which he was arrested.

According to persons who believe they know, he met Mrs. Bertha Sonnenberg, who was taken into custody with him in Salt Lake City, through the Western Fraternal Association. She was employed as a solicitor and he was a member of Stag Lodge No. 1.

As soon as the local detectives learned she had been detained they wired the Salt Lake City police to release her. There is no charge against her here.

Detective Home will leave for Sacramento today to get requisition papers for Ocksreider. As soon as he gets a Governor's warrant he will go to the Mormon city to get the alleged embezzler.

WIFE AT DEATH'S DOOR.

Mrs. N. J. Ocksreider is lying at death's door in a sanatorium on Second street, near Oregon avenue, Santa Monica. She has been there a week, her ailment being valvular heart disease. Her condition had been improving until night before last, when it suddenly became worse, and it was thought she could not live through the night. All knowledge of the predicament in which her husband found himself was carefully kept from Mrs. Ocksreider, and her change of condition for the worse is explained as being the result of the mysterious operation of mental telepathy. The unfortunate woman has in past years spent some time at Santa Monica and has a number of friends there. Her condition last evening was reported as showing considerable improvement, although it is not thought she could stand a second attack such as she underwent Friday night.

Mrs. Sonnenberg Denies.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Bertha Sonnenberg, who was taken into custody here yesterday with Ocksreider, was released tonight and left on an early train for Los Angeles. Before leaving she refuted the allegations against her that she is an affinity of Ocksreider.

"I am not now and never have been an affinity of Mr. Ocksreider. The only thing I have done or will do for him is to see that he has a fair trial on the charge brought against him in Los Angeles. I want to go back and meet the many friends I have and prove to them that I am not guilty of the charges which have been made against me. I did not come to Salt Lake in company with Ocksreider, nor was I a party to any deal which he may have made in this city.

"I left Los Angeles over three weeks ago for Chicago to meet my divorced husband. I did not meet him there so returned to Salt Lake where I met him. I met my former husband in this city about two weeks ago and agreed to return to settle up our business matters. I left for Los Angeles the following day and returned here about a week ago. Ocksreider was on the same train coming from Los Angeles. I deny that I am the woman who is mentioned as the second affinity. Let them look for the girl in Los Angeles who signs herself Elinor in letters now in my possession."

TWO HUSBANDS IN COURT.

Santa Ana Judge Releases One, But Other Goes to Jail for Threatening to Kill Wife.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SANTA ANA, Oct. 16.—Prolonged spreen resulted in bringing two husbands into court today. One is Louis Korse of Orange and the other Frank Allen of Santa Ana.

On Thursday night Korse took a notion that his wife was leaving him. As she started to visit her sister, Mrs. Jennings, Korse fired five shots from a 22-caliber rifle into the air. He followed her to her sister's rooms in the Ehlen & Grote Block, and when refused admittance, Korse fired a bullet through the door. He was taken to jail. Thoroughly repentant Korse asked that he be given a suspended sentence and a chance to reform. Justice Prieffer gave him a ninety-day suspended sentence. Korse is an apiarist and went on a spree because a quantity of honey soured.

Allen, a painter, threatened to kill his wife. Owing to long misconduct, Justice Smithwick ordered him to jail for thirty days.

PARKER DOUBTS COOK.

eral times since for the amount due, have received $100, leaving a balance of $325 due me at this date.

"In about one month after Barrill and I returned home from our trip with Dr. Cook in 1906, Barrill laughed and told me that he and Dr. Cook never got to the top of Mt. McKinley."

MILLER'S AFFIDAVIT.

Walter P. Miller in his affidavit says he was with Prints on the side trip during the time in which Dr. Cook says he went to the summit of the mountain.

His testimony continues:

"Dr. Cook and Barrill took the launch and went down the Yetna, announcing their intention of ascending the Shushitna, the Schuletna and exploring the Talshetna glacier for a possible route for future attempts to ascend to the top of Mt. McKinley. Prints returned to the Shushitna station; on September 22 we met Dr. Cook and Barrill at the station and thence we all came together to Seward.

"I was called East by Henry Disston of Philadelphia, the backer of the expedition, to whom I related all the circumstances of the trip.

"So far as I am advised Barrill is the only man who has personal knowledge as to whether or not Dr. Cook ascended to the summit of Mt. McKinley.

"In May, 1908, I met Edward N. Barrill at Missoula, Mont. He then informed me for the first time that he and Dr. Cook had never reached the summit of Mt. McKinley. I then said to him: 'Where were you?' and he remarked, 'we were only on the first ridge this side of the mountain.' I asked him about his picture shown over opposite page 227 in Dr. Cook's book, and he replied, 'that is my picture, but that is not the top of the mountain.'"

BEREHER'S AFFIDAVIT.

The affidavit of Samuel Bereher, after describing the early experience of the party, tells of a trip which he and several other members of the expedition took from their "base camp." He said:

"On July 22 we reached our nearest point to the mountain, the point being, as R. W. Porter said, fourteen miles from the summit. On this trip we were mapping and taking observations of the country.

"At our last camp, the elevation was in the neighborhood of 5000 feet. From that point I could readily recognize all the pictures shown by Cook in his magazine article on the ascent of the mountain with the exception of the picture shown as being the summit, and the one on page 330, which are such as might have been taken at elevations of 5000 to 6000 feet.

"Pictures that I recognized could not have been taken at an elevation of above 7000 feet.

"The point located by Edward Barrill as being the point claimed as the top of Mt. McKinley from my position had an apparent elevation of approximately 7000 feet.

"From our camp I had a view of nearly the whole route as stated by Edward Barrill. I was present at all times when Mr. Barrill made his affidavit of even date herewith, and all the facts stated in this affidavit covering the period I was with him are correct.

RECOGNIZED PHOTOS.

"From my point of view I recognized all the points mentioned by him, and from my knowledge of the conditions as existing there it would have been impossible for the climb of the mountain to have been made in the time as claimed by Dr. Cook.

"The reason for my making this affidavit is not from any personal animosity or ill will against Dr. Cook, but from a sense of justice to the public."

TIME TOO SHORT.

John F. Shore says: "During the summer of 1907 I was conversing with Oscar F. Blankenship, who told me that while near Mount McKinley he knew of Dr. Cook's alleged ascent of the mountain, but that from his very short absence from the launch it was not possible for him to have made the ascent and return in that time.

"Blankenship is now a forestry service man at Stahekin, Wash. Since having this conversation I met S. P. Bereher and talked with him about the matter. He said to me: 'That is right, but he said they were not saying much about the feat, that the ascent had never been really made.'"

MAY BE FATALLY HURT.

Aged Woman Falls from Car Step and Is Taken to Hospital in Serious Condition.

Mrs. A. M. Bruner, aged 69, fell from a Gardena car at Third and Broadway last night, striking the pavement with such force that she is believed to have been fatally injured. Her hip was fractured, and she was suffering severely from shock when Dr. Fred Haigh, who was standing near by, had her taken to his office in the Byrne building for immediate attention. Later, Mrs. Bruner was taken to the Clara Barton Hospital, where at a late hour she was reported to be resting fairly comfortably.

Mrs. Bruner lives on Magnolia avenue, Gardena, and was coming to Los Angeles. She was alighting at Third and Broadway, when the car is said to have started before she was fairly on the street, throwing her to the pavement.

REVOLUTION.

PLACES BLAME ON CABRERA.

NICARAGUA GOVERNMENT MAKES OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Says President of Guatemala Inspired Revolution and Furnished Insurgents With Arms and Ammunition—Denounces Him for Violation of Washington Peace Treaty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Nicaraguan government in an official statement today placed the entire responsibility for the present revolutionary movement in the eastern section of Nicaragua on the shoulders of Estrada Cabrera, President of Guatemala. Cabrera, says the official statement, not only aided and abetted the revolutionists headed by Gen. Estrada, but furnished them arms and ammunition.

Furthermore, the statement says, the revolutionary movement could not have possibly gained its present headway, but for the active and material support of the President of Guatemala. The statement concludes with a denunciation of Cabrera for violating the peace treaty signed at Washington and all loyal Nicaraguans are called upon to stand by the government.

The government has received advices to the effect that the rebels are not gaining ground on the eastern coast and the stories of revolutionary victories sent out from Bluefields by the Estrada junta are officially denied. President Zelaya is confident of annihilating the rebel forces as soon as the government troops meet them in battle.

Several towns on the shore of the lake have been occupied by the revolutionists. Serious fighting is expected soon in the vicinity of Managua."

Painful Dyspepsia

A Form of Indigestion Caused by Gastric Irritation from Undigested Food in the Stomach.

No kind of dyspepsia is better marked than that known as "painful indigestion," and it is also a very common affection. Pain, generally of a dull character, is felt after meals, and along with the pain, soreness at the pit of the stomach often exists, and in some cases the soreness is permanent. The tenderness is commonly restricted to a spot in the middle line of the body, immediately below the breast-bone.

It often extends upward under the bone, which consequently feels sore on pressure, or the tenderness is felt toward either side. This tenderness is commonly associated with an unpleasant feeling of heat—"a burning sensation"—as it is termed by some persons. There is also a "gnawing" and "dragging," as well as various other anomalous sensations complained of after taking food, and generally within an hour after eating.

As might be supposed, the intensity of the symptom is proportionate to the quantity and quality of the meal. When the stomach is empty, a sensation of craving or emptiness gives most trouble. This often causes a false appetite, which, by inducing the person to eat heartily, aggravates the sufferings. Thirst generally causes much annoyance; heartburn, waterbrash, acidity, nausea and headache are not infrequent attendants. The tongue is usually coated and from a mere inspection of this organ the condition of the stomach can often be correctly told.

It is a common error with persons who suffer from stomach pain caused by indigestion and gastric irritation to use such drugs as chlorodyne, Hoffman's Anodyne, and other "pain killers" for relief. Such treatment is a great mistake. While these drugs afford temporary relief to the dyspeptic pain, they have no effect whatever in removing the cause.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS remove the cause. By completely digesting all the food in the stomach, there is no further possibility of the occurrence of this disagreeable form of dyspepsia with its painful manifestations, and other concurrent symptoms. All of the irritation of the stomach-lining and stomach-nerves as the result of the undigested food lying in that organ and undergoing fermentation and decomposition, is quickly done away with.

But not only is the form of dyspepsia which is accompanied by pain cured through the use of these digestive tablets, but also every other form of indigestion, as there are many kinds in which stomach pain does not occur, but where there are many symptoms equally disagreeable, discomforting, disconcerting and discouraging.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain in a highly concentrated form, powerful anti-dyspeptic ingredients, which digest rapidly and thoroughly food of every kind, including proteids, nitrates, carbo-hydrates, etc. A single grain will disintegrate and digest 3000 grains of food.

Purchase a box from your druggist at once (price 50 cents), and get rid of the pain, discomfort and other disagreeable symptoms of dyspepsia. Also send us your name and address for free sample package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

People... Who Care

We want to reach the people who do care about the kind of dental work they have done. Particular people who are looking for a response to their own innate sense of refinement and beauty. That response they will find most eloquent in our dental work. It speaks a language sure to appeal to them and speaks loudest after it is worn for a few years, for then it discourses not only of beauty but comfort as well.

$3 A Month

Not Catarrh Alone, But

ALL DISEASES

$3 A Month

DOCTORS SHORES & SHORES Are often asked if the $3 rate applies to Catarrh alone; or does it include Asthma, Lung Trouble, Stomach, Rheumatism and Heart Disease; or a complication of CHRONIC DISEASES. We want it distinctly understood that no matter what your disease, $3 pays the bill for one month—including treatment and medicines.

FRANK MOLNAR
RECOMMENDS DRS. SHORES & SHORES' CATARRH TREATMENT

MR. FRANK MOLNAR, WHO LIVES AT 646 SAN JULIAN ST., SAYS: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for the past two (2) years. My nose would stop up first one side and then the other and phlegm would gather in my throat, causing irritation and coughing. My nose stopping up at night caused me to sleep with my mouth open, which distressed me greatly. I lost in weight and flesh until I was greatly run down. There was a continual noise and buzzing sound in the ears and my hearing was very dull. At the end of two (2) months' treatment I can truthfully say that I am greatly improved in every way, and I gladly recommend Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment to any one in need of the same.
(Signed) "FRANK MOLNAR."

Another Week

We want every sufferer to have the chance to try our wonderful new treatment, and you well know that $3 is a very small price to pay for expert medical treatment for one month—and not a penny to pay for medicines. To all who apply this week we will TREAT YOU UNTIL CURED for $3 a month. Many are cured in one month. It may be possible to cure you in the same time.

We Never Deceive

We value the reputation we have honestly won in all these years we have practiced medicine in California. We masquerade under no fancy titles, but, as honorable American citizens, we do business in our own name, and you can always meet Drs. Shores face to face. When we take your case we make an honest effort to cure you.

Rheumatism

If you are hobbling about with rheumatic joint, or suffering torture from inflammatory rheumatism—come and let us explain our theory and treatment for this painful affliction. It is different from other treatments and cures when others fail. It will pay you to investigate.

"DRS. SHORES CURED ME OF A BAD CASE OF CATARRH (12) TWELVE YEARS AGO. WELL EVER SINCE."

Mrs. Ellen Smith, 2216 Cove Ave., Edendale, Los Angeles, says: "Drs. Shores & Shores cured me of a bad case of catarrh of the head and throat twelve (12) years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble since then. I had all of the usual symptoms of catarrh for years. My nose would stop up. Throat sore and dry. My eyes were weak and watery, and I would hawk and spit a great deal. My stomach was also affected. In fact, it was all through the system. I had awful headaches and was run down in every way. I TOOK TWO MONTHS' TREATMENT FROM DRS. SHORES and in all the twelve (12) years since I HAVE NOT HAD THE SLIGHTEST RETURN OF THE TROUBLE, and have felt perfectly cured, and I take pleasure in making this statement. Any one doubting it is at perfect liberty to call on me and I will gladly tell them of Drs. Shores' wonderful treatment that cured me.

CHRONIC CATARRH, STOMACH AND LIVER TROUBLE.

O. A. Dunman, 1413 Buena Vista St., Los Angeles.

Mr. Dunman says: "For fifteen (15) years I have been a victim of CATARRH. I have always had weak lungs. For the past four (4) years I was always short of breath. Would choke up and wheeze. I always had a pain in the chest and headache. My nose would stop up until I was compelled to breathe through my mouth, and I would hawk and spit a great deal, especially when I would take cold, which was a great deal of the time. I also had trouble with my stomach and liver. I would bloat up and was always constipated. I was weak and run down in every way. This was my condition when I began Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment. I can say they have helped me in every way. I feel like a new man and take great pleasure in recommending Drs. Shores to all sufferers, for they have done wonders for me. Anyone doubting this testimonial is at perfect liberty to call on me, for I feel sick people should know of Drs. Shores' great skill.

SOME CLASS.

MANY ENTRIES IN AUTO RACE.

Fourteen Machines Sign for Big Portola Event.

Big Cash Prize and Trophy for the Winner.

Apperson Jack Rabbit Will Represent South.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The following entries for the Oakland Portola Road Race were announced today by the Race Committee of the Automobile Club of California:

The Reliance Automobile Company, Pope-Hartford, No. 1, entered by Consolidated Motor Car Company; Lexington, No. 3, entered by F. L. Burkhardt; Chalmers-Detroit, No. 4, entered by Fred Schear; Stearns, No. 5, entered by M. J. Laymance; Maxwell, No. 6, entered by Maxwell-Briscoe Pacific Company; Stearns, No. 7, entered by Frank Miner; Pope-Hartford, No. 8, entered by Consolidated Motor Car Company; Apperson, No. 9, entered by L. T. Shettler; Lozier, No. 10, entered by S. G. Rayle; Stevens-Duryea, No. 11, entered by Pacific Motor Car Company; Sunset, No. 12, entered by Victor Automobile Company, San José; Buick, No. 13, entered by the Howard Automobile Company; Auto Car, No. 14, entered by Walter C. Morris.

These machines are all the entries received before the official closing time, which was October 14, and while there are several other cars that are expected to enter, they will be made under the pay entry rule of the A.A.A. This rule provides that cars entering after the official closing time set for the entries of machines will not receive a refund of their entry fee.

Practically all of the fourteen entries are on the course now. The official time set for practice is between the hour of 6:30 and 7:30 a.m., every day until the race. All the drivers are rapidly learning the condition of the course and the speed of their cars and by the time the race is called the contestants will be familiar with every part of the course. With these fourteen contestants, the race promises to be the highest class event ever held in the West. There are no cheap cars among the competitors and some of them are recognized throughout the country as being some of the fastest cars in the world.

In fact one of them, the Apperson Jack Rabbit, which was sent up here from Los Angeles by Leon T. Shetler, is the holder of the record for the stock car road race, having established this record by winning the Santa Monica road race when the car covered over 84½ miles per hour for 200 miles. With such cars as the Apperson, the Stearns, the Buick, the Pope-Hartford, the Lozier, Chalmers-Detroit, and the Stevens-Duryea, the chances for new records being made are excellent.

Probably never in the history of automobiling has there been so much value to the prizes offered for the contesting machines and drivers. Not only have the merchants of Oakland offered the unusually large cash prize of $2000 for the winner of the big race, but they have also donated a trophy equal in every respect to the famous Vanderbilt Cup. This trophy is worth over $2000, being made of solid silver, handsomely engraved and representing Oakland and Alameda counties with artistic drawings around the base. The cup stands over four feet in height and is a model of the designer's art. This trophy alone will be worth the skill and endurance of any driver, and when it is seen that besides this cup the winner of the race will receive $2000 cash, it easily is understood why there has been so much discussion and enthusiasm among the agents and drivers to compete in this contest.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

REDLANDS CLIMB.

MILE HIGH CLIMBERS MAY END MOTOR RACES IN DEEP SNOW.

FOUR automobile events will be the feature of the Mile High Hill Climb at Redlands Thanksgiving Day. These are for stock cars, stripped and fully equipped; Class B, for stock chassis only, will be dependent on piston displacement; the other two events will be divided by price quotations at factory.

The final event, the free-for-all, will be the attractive race of the day. In this a number of fast Los Angeles cars will start. The committee has been promised the support of several of the local dealers, who say they will enter cars.

There will be two motorcycle events. These are to be made more interesting than last year, as a large number of motorcycles are entered. The course offers special advantages to the bikers, who can show their speed along the steady climb. The motor bikes end their race at Casa Bianca, four miles from the finish.

All of the races will be started from the intersection of Orange street and Citrus avenue, instead of at the head of Orange-street hill. This eliminates one right-angle turn as the cars leave the main street, which was the danger point in last year's climb. It was here that Harris Hanshue came to grief.

Considerable interest attaches to the Redlands climb because of the special advantages offered the motorist to show a car on the difficult grade. From a gradual ascent to the summit of the high hill the cars are sent, first on the "high," then for a long stretch on the "intermediate," and for the last tug on the low gear. There is not a hill in the country where a climb can thus be held.

There is a possibility that the cars may have to finish in the snow this year. Early rains are promised and the Oak Glen summit is usually snow-clad in November. This will only add to the spiciness of the meet.

The Phoenix race will be disposed of. The cars entered in the northern meets will have returned, and there will be nothing to mar the attendance at Redlands for the Thanksgiving climb. The local dealers at Redlands are a unit in favor of the climb and will enter cars.

The reason of our great success is due to the uniform high grade work done by us.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now not again shall I have that ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and quick satisfaction.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., H. W. Hellman Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable, is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "I" didn't hurt a bit."
C. SPRECHER,
Printer and Publisher, 115 Winston st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted twenty teeth for me, and did it absolutely without pain. I have had a great deal of experience with other dentists, and can truthfully say that Dr. Schiffman's method is best of all. I highly recommend him to everyone.
T. B. ROSECRANS,
Soldiers' Home.

For all the past fourteen years Dr. Schiffman has been doing my dental work. In all they extracted and replaced by means of crown and bridgework some twenty odd teeth. The work is very satisfactory and I highly recommend him.
H. A. WITTICK,
St Mary st., Pasadena, Cal.

Have had molar tooth extracted by Dr. Schiffman. It was a complicated task, but work was done very successfully and I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman to any needing dental work.
REV. W. E. BLAIR,
District Supt. Children's Home Society of California, 224 Daisy ave., Long Beach, Cal.

Have had several teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain.
M. J. MASON,
With Fairbanks-Morse & Co., 124 S. Los Angeles st.

Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me, four years ago, which proved satisfactory. I came in today and had my teeth examined and found that everything was just like new.
MRS. A. SCHILLING,
564 W. 42nd st.

I have had two plates made by Dr. Schiffman and after a three months' trial can truthfully say that they are entirely satisfactory.
T. H. BREWSTER,
President Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Co., 220 West 41st st.

I have had teeth extracted, plate and bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman. I am delighted with the work and advise nervous women to go to Dr. Schiffman.
MATHILDE M. PHELPS,
1255 S. Figueroa st.

Dr. Schiffman is considered expert. By experience I find his work painless and perfectly satisfactory.
H. C. ROYER, M.D.,
332 S. Spring. Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman has just fitted a tooth for me and he also put in a crown and a bridge about five months ago, all of which has given me complete satisfaction. My work was all done painlessly.
S. E. MILLS,
No. 520 Ave. 20.

Dr. Schiffman extracted two worthless teeth for me and replaced them by bridgework, which was done to my entire satisfaction and without any pain whatever.
MRS. JUSTICE ROSE,
327 E. 36th st.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all the different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill in extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his methods of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel and Motel Potter, Santa Barbara.

I have had bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman and I am pleased in every way.
MRS. CLEVELAND,
1115 E. 12th st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted three teeth for me without pain or discomfort. He also fitted three teeth, from which I suffered no inconvenience whatever. I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman for all kinds of dental work.
PROF. J. J. WHITE,
St. Vincent's College.

Dr. Schiffman performed a most successful operation in the placing of a porcelain crown, most natural to life. I am very well pleased and satisfied. The work was executed without pain. Dr. Schiffman does as he advertises.
JENNIE ENGERS,
1218 Figueroa st.

I have had two difficult gold fillings put in by Dr. Schiffman and can say that they are entirely satisfactory.
GRACE HALLIDAY,
Spaulding Station, L. A.

Being a stranger in this city and not knowing any dentist, I am certain I found one of the best in Dr. Schiffman. His work is very satisfactory and should be highly recommended.
KATHRYN BUCKLEY,
1000 Temple st.

Dr. Schiffman made me a partial upper and lower plate and they are both very satisfactory in every respect, after a test of eight months.

SAVES TWO FISHERMEN.

Redondo Beach Life Guard Rescues Men Whose Boat Is Overturned in Very Heavy Sea.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

REDONDO BEACH, Oct. 16.—Through the heroic and quick action of Life-guard Walter Barton, Joe Bisbee and Ralph Redeker, fishermen, whose boat was caught in a tide rip and overturned, were saved from drowning, late this afternoon.

An unusually heavy sea was rolling and as the fishermen attempted to land on the beach north of the old bathhouse the boat was caught in the strong tide rip and rolled over. Barton was off duty at the time, but was near the beach. He raced to the scene of the accident, stripping off his clothes as he ran, plunged into the breakers and grasped Redeker, who cannot swim.

As Barton reached the shore with Redeker, Bisbee yelled for help, as his strength had given out in the heavy sea. When the life-saver reached him he was unconscious and had been carried out far beyond the breakers. Freeth and Crum of the lifeguard corps were summoned by telephone, and within a minute from the time the message was sent they reached the scene, a distance of four blocks from the bath-house. They at once began the work of resuscitating Bisbee while Barton again swam out and recovered the boat.

Highest Village in Europe.

"The highest village in Europe" is the inscription on a post card which shows a group of wooden cottages on a bleak hill, with no sign of vegetation in sight and having as a background a range of ice-covered mountains. The name of the place is Cumeaz, in the Canton Wallis. It lies 2047 meters above the sea level, "where Monte Rosa raises its gigantic head into the clouds." The village consists of four families, and the latest census gives it a population of twenty-six. "The storms of spring and fall and the snows of the winter months," says the sender of the card, "make life a dreary one, and still the people look happy, and doubtless they are so."—[New York Tribune.

QUALITY QUALITY

DENTISTRY

I am making teeth and replacing lost ones for the MOST PARTICULAR CLASS of PATIENTS in Los Angeles. For the class of patients who know what is best and who recognize superiority in painless, up-to-date dentistry, remember, I replace ONE, TWO or SEVERAL teeth WITHOUT A PLATE. They stand the critical test of comparison WITH PERFECT NATURAL TEETH. This work is NOT expensive. When all your teeth are out, a plate is your only recourse. If you are particular and desire to appear your best, I can make you a set of teeth which cannot be duplicated elsewhere in Los Angeles. If your mouth is older than the balance of your face, my Restoration Plate will make you appear younger by years, will correct hollow and sunken cheeks and smooth out the lines of age. If you wish the genuine and no substitute, come to my office. I make over dozens of sets sold to people who cheated themselves by not giving my method an investigation. Save the money you pay for imitation work by first getting the genuine. Every patient here gets a square deal, the kind of deal that makes friends.

Hours—8 to 6 daily; Sunday, 10 to 12.

PASADENA.

NEGRO HOLDS UP TWO GIRLS.

Local Visitors to Chicago Victims of Ruffian.

Lives Threatened by Man Who Steals Hand Bag.

Big Preparations Made for Fall Flower Show.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Oct. 17.—A dispatch from Chicago, received last night, says: By his bravery and prompt action at a critical moment, Deforest Hulburd, a prominent figure in the younger set of the North Shore, son of Charles H. Hulburd, a wealthy broker, probably saved from serious injuries at the hands of a negro bandit, Miss Susie and Miss Edna Browne of Pasadena, who were the victims of a daring hold-up in front of the Hulburd residence.

Although the robbery, one of the most sensational and daring recorded this season, occurred over a week ago, the facts were kept from the public until today by the police. The two young women, well known in society circles of the California city, are the guests of friends at No. 678 La Salle avenue, and the daughters of F. F. Browne, publisher of the Dial.

Young Hulburd routed the bandit and gave chase. The negro had already threatened the lives of the women victims, and escaped with a hand bag and its contents. The young women, according to Mr. Browne, since their arrival in Chicago, have been accustomed to taking nightly walks along the lake shore. On the night of the holdup they were returning to the home of the friend with whom they were stopping when a negro stepped from behind a clump of bushes and snatched at the hand bag carried by Miss Susie Browne. The young woman cried for aid and her sister also screamed for assistance.

"Shut up and give me that purse, or I will kill both of you," said the bandit as he fought for the possession of the hand bag. Both young women struggled desperately. Then Hulburd appeared and routed the man.

FOR "MUM" SHOW.

Great preparations are being made for Pasadena's "mum" show, which will be held at No. 80 South Raymond avenue, October 28, 29 and 30.

The proper name is the Fall Flower Show, and it will be given under the auspices of the Pasadena Gardeners' Association.

Nowhere in the world are more beautiful chrysanthemums and dahlias grown than in Southern California, in the East, where many fall "mum" shows have gained almost national reputation as great society affairs, the flowers for exhibition purposes are all grown under glass while in Southern California they are raised in the open. The local show should equal any in the country.

Premiums will be given on over 200 varieties of flowers and vegetables. The judges will inspect before the general public is admitted and after three days of exhibition the flowers exhibited will be sold.

BRICK YARD CASE.

The brick yard case had another airing yesterday. The first was held in the Council chamber Tuesday. Then the people living in the southeastern part of the city presented a petition for an ordinance to do away with the Simons plant, located in the Oak Knoll district. The last play will be held at the Council chamber next Tuesday when a vote will be taken on an ordinance to declare the brick plant a nuisance and order a discontinuance of its operation.

Yesterday forenoon the Mayor and members of the Council took a trip to the yard to see the plant in operation and size up the amount of dust, smoke, noise, etc. When they reached the works they were met by the Simons brothers, members of the Southeastern Improvement Association and about fifty women of the neighborhood who had gathered to tell their troubles.

On behalf of the improvement association Rev. W. H. Cornett, president, stated that the plant ruined the sale of property in the district, prevented civic advancement and the smoke was most dangerous to the health of the community. Most of the women present agreed with him and added that the dust coming from the works was certainly annoying if nothing else.

In defense, Joseph Simons stated that the roads all about the works were oiled, there was absolutely no dust, and that the smoke coming from the brick kilns was simply the residue from the oil burners, and as a matter of fact is very healthful. He stated that it was a sure cure for tuberculosis, asthma and all forms of pulmonary troubles.

He also stated that the move on the part of the Improvement Association was a ryse of some real estate dealers to have the city force a discontinuance of the brick plant within the city limits, so that they could sell property.

After patiently listening to the arguments for several hours, the Mayor and members of the Council, without giving any expressions as to their impressions, returned to the city.

WANTS TO CLIMB M'KINLEY.

Paul Reinwold, the well-known mountain climber, who holds many medals for his daring performances in both Europe and America, is anxious to personally meet Dr. Frederick Cook, the noted explorer, and accompany him to the top of Mt. McKinley.

Today he addressed a letter to Dr. Cook, stating that he is satisfied that he can accomplish the task, and will be very glad to meet Dr. Cook at any time and accompany him on the trip. Reinwhold states that he is no "piker," and that if he and Dr. Cook make the journey there will be no doubts in the minds of every one but that they made the ascent, because they will be very careful to bring back evidence of a convincing nature.

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY.

Real estate was more active during the past week than for some time. Sales for October are much better than a year ago, and the prospects for the coming winter are ahead of those for three years.

There is much building going on in all parts of the city. Permits taken out thus far in October show a decided increase over a year ago. Many high-class residences are in course of construction, and more are being planned.

The William R. Staats Company reports sales of Oak Knoll property to the amount of $30,000 during the past week, with several more big deals in the course of being closed. Mrs. Jane Louise Tienne of Altadena bought one of the most beautiful sites in Oak Knoll, with 161 feet frontage and 400 feet back. She states that she will build a $15,000 home this fall.

Jane M. Phillips sold lot No. 34, Oak Knoll, to Marguerite E. French. The purchaser will build a handsome home this winter. Other sales are: For Mrs. Mary Coryell, lot No. 4, Oak Knoll, to Samuel D. Smith; also lot 31, to Miss Harriet E. Pyle, and lot No. 50, to L. A. Macomber of Pasadena.

At the last meeting of the school board a resolution was passed asking for quotes on a tract located as near the center of the city as possible for the new High School, which will have to be built soon. The resolutions call for a tract of from six to ten acres. So far no offers have been made.

The new Maryland apartments on Los Robles avenue, east of Colorado street, are well under way, and the contractor expects to have the building completed within a couple of months.

The Maryland Hotel Company has given a contract to the Frank G. Hogan Company for another bungalow, in the Spanish style, with four large bedrooms.

D. M. Martin has been elected manager of the Rio Colorado Land and Irrigation Company, composed of Pasadena and Chicago people. The company owns 40,000 acres of Colorado River bottom land near Needles, and will reclaim the entire tract by irrigation taking the water from the Colorado River.

GOLF AND TEA.

The Annandale Country Club had the first big crowd of the season yesterday. Many tea and dinner parties were given by various members. Mrs. John R. Fotes of Pasadena, entertained a party of six; W. T. Bishop, Jr., of Los Angeles, a party of nine; W. C. Tatterson of Los Angeles, six; W. H. Lockwood of Pasadena, four; Mrs. J. A. Barnard of Pasadena gave a dinner to a number of Pasadena and Los Angeles friends in honor of Willson Sloane, Jr., of Buffalo, Miss Austin and Sir. Copps of Ft. Worth, Tex.

There was a big list of entries in the regular Saturday afternoon golf club tournament for the club cup handicap. Frank D. Rider and Dr. West Hughes tied with a score of 83. Other scores were: C. Eckford Thompson, 70; B. O. Kendall, 72; C. William Reynolds, 72; Collin Stewart, 73, and F. D. Turner, 73.

PASTOR IS MARRIED.

Dying Request of a Woman Leads to Romance in Which Aged Whittier Clergyman Figures.

WHITTIER, Oct. 16.—A dispatch from the East, received tonight, says: "A romance, the result of the dying request of her husband, culminated at Shoburn, Minn., in the marriage of Mrs. Henrietta Dunn of Syracuse to Rev. M. L. Tibbetts, pastor of the United Brethren Church, Whittier, Cal. The bridegroom is 76 years old; his bride is ten years his junior.

When Mrs. Dunn's first husband died, eight years ago, he requested that a silver cup belonging to him be presented to his old friend Tibbetts. Mrs. Dunn was never able to locate Tibbetts, but the latter, when his wife died, a year ago, heard of Mrs. Dunn's whereabouts, and wrote her. The correspondence led to an engagement and marriage. Rev. and Mrs. Tibbetts have left for Whittier."

SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 16.—Mayor Dudley will send to the City Council, Monday, the nomination of W. H. Atwill for membership on the Board of Fire Commissioners, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Horace G. Dunston. The prospective Commissioner has had experience in the management of fire departments, having served for two years as member of the Board of Fire Commissioners in his native city, Toledo, O.

The Southern Pacific Railroad is to rebuild its depot in the near future.

A new enterprise has been started here in the shape of a modern pressed brick plant. Brubaker Bros. are the owners.

One boat and a portion of another belonging to the British bark Holt Hill, Capt. Bolderstone, from Hamburg, October 19, for San Francisco, were washed ashore at different points on the Sussex Coast, England, today. The bark arrived at Deal, near Dover, yesterday afternoon. She reported that her boats were swept overboard during a storm.

EXPLAINED.

WIFE'S FEARS ARE RELIEVED.

GETS LETTER FROM HUSBAND WHO DISAPPEARED.

Long Beach Woman May Go to San Francisco to Join Sick Spouse. Mayor Lauded at Meeting of Charter Party—American Avenue at Last to Be Macadamized.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 16.—W. Scott Cummings, who disappeared from his home in this city last Friday night, is in San Francisco. His wife received a letter from him this morning. He says he is ill and that he does not intend to return to Long Beach. Mrs. Cummings may go to San Francisco to look after him, but not until local Elks have heard from the lodge in that city regarding Cummings.

There is a mystery about the affair. "There are some things we cannot understand," said an intimate friend today, "but everything will come out all right for the man and for her." Cummings's home life was happy and he had no trouble with his employers.

POLITICAL MEETING.

The charter party held its first meeting of the campaign at Stewart Hall, last night. Committees were appointed on permanent organization and on platform and rules. The regular convention will be held at the Auditorium on the night of the 29th inst., and the ward meetings to nominate Councilmen next week. From present indications Mayor Windham will receive a unanimous call to run for reelection. At the meeting the Mayor was eulogized for his business administration.

MONEY NEARLY RAISED.

Counting the four-acre site, donated by the Palos Verdes Company, the Chamber of Commerce Committee has raised $9000 of the $14,000 necessary to secure the location on the harbor, of the Switch and Signal Company. A further canvass will be made Monday.

J. S. Westfall, foreman on the Muhlhardt ranch, who last week attacked John Buhbee, a ranch hand, with a section of gas pipe, has been held to answer in the Superior Court for deadly assault. His bond has been increased to $1000, which Westfall was unable to give.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

William Charleston, the burglar, captured Wednesday night, was caught on the 13th of the month, by Chief Williams, who carries star No. 13 of the humane society. His first meal was the thirteenth furnished to the jail by the restaurant this month. Dr. Cook, whose house he entered the night he was caught, lives in the 1300 block, and the day was the thirteenth anniversary of Desk Sergeant Kutz's wedding.

STREET TO BE PAVED.

The City Council this morning ordered the improvement of both sides of American avenue, from Anaheim road to Hill street, by paving with oil-rock macadam. This improvement has been pending for a year, but there were many obstacles to overcome, because of the Pacific Electric right of way through the center of the thoroughfare, which is the south end of the Long Beach-Los Angeles boulevard.

The driving of piling along the west side of the harbor channel, north of the bascule bridge, is about complete, and the work of putting on the sheet piling will begin at once. The rock, dumped along the west side, is beginning to show above high tide and rock will now be dumped in the recently built extension of the west jetty.

J. H. McGilora died this morning at the family home on East Eighth street. He was a native of Illinois and was 52 years of age. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

Old Mission olives and olive oil has been awarded the Grand Prize of Merit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

BEAUTIFUL PARK PLANNED.

Monrovia Board of Trade Idea for Fountain Generally Approved. City Politics.

MONROVIA, Oct. 16.—If the plans of the Board of Trade materialize, Monrovia Central Park will be a most beautiful retreat. The rainbow fountain idea, which originated with the Board of Trade, has been generally approved and will probably be carried out. Plans are being formulated for tri-weekly band concerts at the park during the winter and weekly concerts during the summer. Powerful electric lights will be installed to illumine especially designed prismatic fountains, which will be supplied with city water. Public subscriptions will be solicited to help defray the lighting expenses, if the municipal funds prove to be not sufficient.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

Funeral services for the late Mrs. Jennie Church, who died Thursday, will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at the residence of her son, Arthur S. Church, in Duarte. Mrs. Church resided here for nearly a quarter of a century, having come to this city from Northern California in the early eighties. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Her son is an orange grower of Duarte. She leaves three daughters and another son, who lives in Grass Valley.

NO DICTATION.

No politics and no organization interference in the nomination of city officers was the sentiment of last night's meeting of the Board of Trade. A motion by G. A. Barry, indorsing the administration and virtually urging the reelection of City Trustees, whose terms are soon to expire, received no seconder. Since its rehabilitation to civic usefulness, several years ago, the Board of Trade, as a body, has decried all attempts to utilize it as a partisan or personal agent. Had the motion been confined to an indorsement of the administration, it might have carried. As a matter of fact, at least 905 of the Board of Trade members earnestly desire, as individual electors, that the Trustees accept renomination, and will work for their reelection. As members of a civic organization they declined being placed in the position of seeming to dictate.

The total number of cars of oranges shipped for this year was 1056, of which 677 were navels and 42 miscellaneous, not counting the Valencias. This netted the growers the handsome sum of $457,000, with the returns for eighty cars still to come.

INDIAN DANCES AND PARADE.

Preparations for Opening New University Fine Arts Building at South Pasadena This Week.

SOUTH PASADENA, Oct. 16.—Preparations are under way for opening the Fine Arts Building of the University of Southern California on the Arroyo next week. The exercises will take in three evenings under the direction of Prof. W. L. Judson. The first evening will be given up to Indian dances, and a lecture by George Wharton James, on the second night, the snake dance of the Hopi tribe will be portrayed in the stereopticon pictures, and on the third evening there will be a grand parade of students and others in Spanish costumes.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raymond of the Raymond Hotel, who have been visiting at Riverside, are again at home at "Rose Cottage."

Acts of vandalism committed at the public library recently have impelled the Board of Library Trustees to take steps to prevent a recurrence. Hereafter all offenders, if caught, will be severely dealt with. Pictures have been torn from magazines and books and magazines carried away.

The final ordinance for a change of grade on Elm avenue, between Mission street and Garfield avenue, was read at the last meeting of the Board of Trustees. A petition was also presented for a change of the grade on Garfield avenue.

An all-day meeting of the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church was held yesterday at the home of the president, Mrs. John Hunt, No. 1300 Lyndon street. Luncheon was served at noon.

Old Mission olives and olive oil has been awarded the Grand Prize of Merit at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, Oct. 16.—It is probable that the validity of the contract recently entered into by the City Trustees with H. W. Eichbaum will be questioned. The contention is made that the Trustees had no authority to make an agreement of this character covering so long a period. A further claim is that such a contract could not be properly made without soliciting bids. Eichbaum is to take charge of the asceptic tank, garbage incinerator and electrical department of the city for a period of five years for $550 per month. As the terms of the majority of the members of the present Board of Trustees expire next April, it is held that this contract cannot bind their successors.

"HOW I STAINED MY HAIR BROWN"

Society Woman Wants to Tell Readers How She Stained Her Faded Hair Without Using Hair Dye.

"I think the readers of your paper ought to get the benefit of my experience," said a well-known society woman in an interview. "It is in regard to staining hair. I am now going on to forty years of age, and some months ago my hair was nearly all gray, faded, and falling out, and I used to bleach my hair besides. I tried various hair dyes, but I found, as nearly every other woman has found, that by using these dyes you can't conceal the fact that you have dyed your hair. And besides, my hair began to fall out worse than before, because of the poisons in the hair dyes. And then I had to use the dye almost every week or ten days so as to turn the color of the hair near the roots.

"Finally I decided to try walnut-tint hair-stain. Well, you see what a beautiful rich brown my hair has now, and you'd never think I stained my hair at all. It has grown out remarkably fluffy since I have used it. I apply it with a comb in a few moments only once a month. It stains nothing but the hair, never harms it in the least, and makes it grow out luxuriantly. It stains the hair evenly from tip to root, so that experts cannot tell that you have stained your hair.

"Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is what I used. She is the only one who manufactures it. If you want to try it first, you write her for a sample package of her Walnut-Tint Hair Stain, and enclose twenty-five cents in stamps or coin to help pay postage and packing, and you will get it by return mail in plain, sealed wrapper. Address her, Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 890 Groton Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. She will also send you free her very interesting book on hair."

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain has the advantage over hair dyes of containing no copper, sulphur, lead or other poisons which cause hair falling, and has no oil, no sediment, and no grease. It is for gray, faded or bleached hair. Any shade can be obtained from a beautiful rich brown to almost black. It does not rub off on the clothing. One bottle should ordinarily last a year.

It is sold at drug stores generally at one dollar a package. Send for the 25-cent trial package today.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is recommended and for sale in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Co., 320 S. Spring St., 625 So. Broadway, and Fifth and Broadway.

Tuberculosis

"I am convinced that in Mercurochrome I have a specific for tuberculosis," says U. S. Naval Medical Bulletin, Washington, Government Printing Office. This statement, which could be made no stronger, is considered by the most incredible results obtained at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Las Animas, Colo., where a careful and scientific investigation of the treatment of tuberculosis by Intravenous injections of Mercurochrome was conducted. The Report for the year 1908 made to Surgeon-General Rixey, U. S. Navy, and published in the Government Bulletin, sums up the results as follows: Of 83 patients to whom Mercurochrome was given 51.81 per cent were cured, 36.14 per cent improved, and 12.04 per cent died. Of 78 patients treated without Mercurochrome 14.10 per cent were cured, 41.02 per cent improved, 42.52 per cent died. The whole number of cases treated was 477. Of 161 were in the advanced stage. Surprising as the results are, a letter (August 11) from the Surgeon-General of the Navy to the writer says that a few of the patients have died since the report was published, but even these have decided benefit from the treatment. Mercurochrome is a new chemical compound, discovered by Dr. W. Morgan, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, which is a powerful germicide, but is not poisonous. It is now being used in the treatment of tuberculosis, cancer, leprosy, syphilis, and other diseases. Physicians who desire to investigate this remedy can obtain literature and information by addressing the Mercurochrome Chemical Co., 1 Madison ave., New York City.

When a lantern was brought, and he discovered his hand lying between the rails he picked it up, and sobbed: "Oh, I've lost my hand!"

He died shortly afterward at the County Hospital.

CHILD'S TERRIBLE DEATH.

Reyes Dias, 11 years old, was incinerated in a fire, which destroyed the Dias home, in the west part of town, at an early hour this morning.

His father, Lauris Dias, and a little brother, 6 years of age, were horribly burned. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The flames spread quickly to the entire building, and, when the neighbors were aroused by the crackling of timbers, most of the house was destroyed.

The father and younger son escaped as the roof was falling. The remains of Reyes Dias were found on his cot, the boy having been smothered by smoke while asleep.

ESCONDIDO, Oct. 16.—Dist.-Atty. Utley will weigh the evidence which has been secured during the last ten days, in the case of the Escondido reservoir fires, in order to determine whether arrests shall be made on the charge of incendiarism. The evidence has been collected by representatives of the State forestry department, assisted by the local peace officers.

ORANGE.

ORANGE, Oct. 16.—The Orange Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association has begun a campaign for cheaper gas. The city is supplied by the Orange County Gas Company, which also furnishes Anaheim and Fullerton. Anaheim has gas for $1.25 per 1000 cubic feet, Fullerton $1, Santa Ana with the Edison Electric Company $1, and Orange pays $1.50. The merchants have petitioned the City Trustees to order the gas company, as it has a right to do under the franchise, to reduce its rate to $1.

DISASTROUS.

ONE IS KILLED, FOUR INJURED.

FIVE VICTIMS OF EXPLOSION OF NATURAL GAS.

Dynamite Blast Forces Immense Pocket Out of Santa Barbara Water Tunnel in Santa Ynez Mountains, Which Is Ignited by the Open Lamps of the Workmen.

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 16.—A disastrous explosion of natural gas occurred in the city water tunnel in the Santa Ynez Mountains at 3 o'clock this morning, killing one man and seriously injuring four others. The men comprised one of the shifts boring the tunnel at that point. They had just set off a heavy charge of dynamite. As they started to return to clear away the debris, they ran in an immense pocket of gas, which had been forced out by the blasting. Their open lamps exploded the gas, and the men were hurled twenty feet toward the end of the tunnel.

John Bolitti, unmarried, was killed. The injured are: Joseph Foxen, laborer, right leg and left arm broken; condition very serious. A. H. Tiffany, shift boss; badly burned from the waist up; serious. Thomas Martiniz, laborer, two ribs broken, badly bruised; not serious. Daniel Rogish, laborer, badly burned about the back, breast, arms and head; serious.

The men were more than a mile from the mouth of the tunnel when the explosion occurred. Four hundred feet of the tunnel was wrecked. The rescue of the injured was affected by another shift of laborers at the mouth of the tunnel, after thrilling experiences. Seven hundred feet in the men encountered gas, which extinguished their safety lamps, and they made their way to where the injured men lay through suffocating gas that threatened to overcome them. They succeeded, however, in bringing all to the surface.

FIGHT AT TUNNEL.

As the result of a fight at the south portal of the city water tunnel yesterday, Juan Perris, a mucker, has a painful wound on the side of his head and a torn hand, and Dan Logan, a fellow-laborer, is a fugitive from justice. Following an argument about a change in the place for hanging the laborers' clothes, Logan made a vicious attack on Perris with a poker. Before the other men could intervene, Perris had been knocked down, jumped on and stabbed with the sharp point of a miner's candlestick. Perris was brought to town, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Stoddard, while Sheriff Stewart and Deputy Arkley hurried to the foothills. Logan had disappeared into the bushes, and the officers, who searched long, failed to round him up. Logan was a new man at the tunnel works, but the Sheriff has a good description of him.

EXTRAORDINARY SERVICES.

Attorneys' Fees Fixed by Superior Court for Work in Settling Estate. Ventura Bean Crop Safe.

VENTURA, Oct. 16.—Half of the lima bean crop of Ventura county has been threshed and stored. There are 100,000 sacks of beans in the Saticoy warehouse. The great Schiappapietra rancho, which hauls its product there, has not begun to send in beans yet, although threshing on the ranch has been going forward busily. All the beans in the eastern half of the belt are safe.

FIXES ATTORNEYS' FEES.

Superior Judge Clarke, in fixing the fees of Attorneys Barnes and Selby, E. M. Selby and George Farrand, for extraordinary services in connection with the settlement of the compromise of the Schiappapietra will contest, said from the bench: "It appears that in this matter there is an estate of nearly $3,000,000, and that it has taken practically all the time of Barnes & Selby and E. M. Selby for the last year and a half; and that considerable further time will be required before the matter can be wound up. I think it would be fair and adequate if a fee of $25,000 for extraordinary services be allowed. In the application of George W. Ferrand, who has not devoted nearly so much time to the estate, the allowance to him will be $2500.

"It is my understanding that this will include all services performed, unless something unforseen arises and the estate is not distributed, as it is now expected it will be. This is probably much less than counsel might have received elsewhere, and I think that numerous attorneys could be found who would testify that a sum much larger would be correct, and it is within our knowledge that in some jurisdictions the fee would be much larger than that. But this seems to be in line with what has usually been allowed in this court for services of this character."

ROCK NOT UP TO GRADE.

Upland Trustees Bring Contractors to Time—Auto Speeders Warned. Orange Grove Sold.

UPLAND, Oct. 16.—The City Trustees have expressed dissatisfaction regarding the grade of rock being used by the contractors, Rose & Wilson, on the macadamizing of Euclid avenue. They made a ruling that if the use of the stone was continued the work would be rejected. City Engineer Sourwine said today that the matter had been adjusted and that work is now progressing satisfactorily. A three-quarter-mile strip of the street will soon be open for use.

The reckless speeding of automobiles on the county road, through Cucamonga, has resulted in Supervisor Reid erecting signs limiting autoists to ten miles an hour. In the city the laws are violated daily.

The San Bernardino Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers is to convene at the Congregational Church at Ontario Tuesday and Wednesday. The churches of San Bernardino, Riverside and Imperial counties will be represented. Morning, afternoon and evening sessions will be held.

Reports from San Antonio Hospital are that Miss Edna Purvis and little Jennie Slugg, both of whom underwent recent operations for appendicitis, are rapidly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Schmidt, formerly of Arnold, Kan., have arrived and will build a home in the eastern section.

Rally day of the Methodist Sunday-school is set for the 31st inst.

Ralph Sikes of Claremont, formerly of Upland, and Miss Eleanor Davis of Lordsburg were married in Los Angeles Thursday evening. After a short trip to the North the couple will return to Claremont, where the groom is engaged in business.

C. N. Brundage has sold his orange grove of twenty acres, corner of Twenty-second street and Euclid avenue, to J. A. Kennedy of Pomona, the consideration being $22,500.

Redlands Rancher Tumbles from Load of Hay and Wheels of Wagon Pass Over Body.

REDLANDS, Oct. 16.—Frederick W. Hodges, aged 48, was killed this afternoon by being run over by a heavy wagon.

Hodges, who owned a mountain ranch near here, was riding on a load of hay. He fell off and two wheels of the vehicle passed over him. He died within a few minutes of the accident. He formerly lived at Pasadena.

MAY IDENTIFY BODY.

OXNARD, Oct. 16.—The body of the man washed ashore near Hueneme, day before yesterday, is thought to be that of Henry Holley, of Los Angeles. Holley, who is unmarried, lived with his brother-in-law, George Hoffman, at No. 3904 West Second street. Two weeks ago he started north on a business trip and has not been heard from since. Mr. Hoffman sent a description of Holley to the police here.

You can Know by an easy, comfortable change to

POSTUM

Coffee is a hidden but powerful enemy to one's progress in life. Its subtle, narcotic poison, weakens heart, interferes with digestion and has a definite and destructive effect on the nervous system. People who are content to load themselves with impediments to progress, who refuse to supply body with food and drink of the kind needed to make up for the daily disintegration of nerve and brain tissue, must stand aside in the race.

The ones who are properly fed will surely win the laurels.

Postum furnishes the gluten and phosphates of grain needed by Nature to nourish brain and nerves with food. When made right, that is, boiled 15 minutes after boiling begins, it has a delicious taste similar to the mild, high-grade Javas, but with none of the bad effects of coffee.

There are those who are entirely careless as to what goes into the stomach, but the one who would make all his movements tend towards health and possible greatness can know by a personal test.

BREVITIES.

The price of a pair of glasses.—It is impossible to fit all kinds of glasses for the same price, as modern scientific optical research has given us a larger range to choose from. It is our custom to test the eyes enough to determine the defect, then tell you the price. This service is entirely free and you are at liberty to give an order or not, as you please. We now easily correct optical defects with simple lenses that a few years ago were thought incurable. You hear very little any more of persons giving up school or a profession on account of their eyes. The scientific optician can correct such defects with proper glasses. Blindness is not so common now, thanks to modern eye glasses, although we put our eyes to far greater strain than our forefathers did. We fit first quality simple reading lenses in guaranteed gold filled frames for $1.50. We make special prices on astigmatic and toric lenses. We also fit the new kryptok invisible bifocal lenses at special prices. Our glasses are guaranteed to fit. We will replace them free of charge if they don't give satisfaction. J. C. Fleming, 531 S. Broadway, successor to Clark's optical dept.

JOY RIDER.

AUTO CRASHES INTO A CAR.

DRIVER MUST ANSWER TO MULTIPLICITY OF CHARGES.

Intoxication, Violation of Speed Limit, Reckless Driving and Carrying Concealed Weapon, Some of the Offenses Named by Detective Who Made Arrest.

H. T. Randall of No. 2124 Elsinore street, a salesman, out for a "joy ride" in his own automobile, tried to ram a Hooper-avenue car off the track at Fifth and Spring streets last night. He wrecked his car and the chances are that Monday morning, when he is taken into court, he will have to answer charges of intoxication, exceeding the speed limit, reckless driving and carrying a concealed weapon.

Randall, said to be very much the worse for drink, was bowling along Spring street at a good clip. The Hooper-avenue car passed in front of his auto, and, according to the report, Randall was unable to make the least move to stop his machine.

The auto struck the car about the center, smashing in the hood and lights and doing other damage, but not injuring the street car to any extent. Randall was thrown violently forward, but the wheel caught him in the stomach and threw him back into his seat.

Detective L. Rico arrested Randall. The car was found to be still fit enough to travel under its own power, and a chauffeur was called by the officer, who took the car and owner to the police headquarters. A Colt automatic of large caliber was found on Randall's person. He once had a permit to carry a weapon, but this expired about a year ago.

WILL TEST BOYCOTT.

Labor Unionits Submits to Arrest to Find Out How Much Disturbance Is Permissible.

One "test case" disturbance of the peace and arrest was the net result of the second night's boycott on the Regal Theater in Main street.

Chief of Police Dishman had notified the labor unionists that there must be no disorder, and this was backed up by the detail of Sergt. Long and a squad of eight men to the vicinity of the boycotted place, their instruction being to keep the crowds moving all the time.

Carrying out an arrangement, Harry Bayleus, a young unionist, stepped to the sidewalk in front of the theater and yelled, "The Regal is unfair!" He then turned to Patrolmen Green and Bennett and was arrested.

The prisoner was followed to the station by several of the leaders, and after a consultation with Chief Dishman, he was released on a $10 cash bail. The boycotters said they wanted to make a test case to determine how far they could go in boycotting "unfair" places.

"I don't care," airily said Bayleus at the station, when discussing his case with the officers. "That'll make me solid with the union, see? It boosts my game." He was told to appear for trial at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The theater last evening was crowded to its capacity.

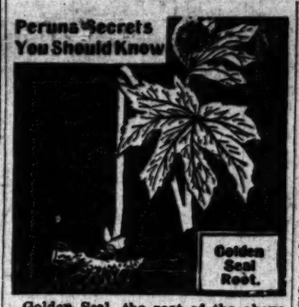
Peruna Secrets You Should Know



Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.
Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

How to Get Rid Of Catarrh
A Simple, Safe, Reliable Cure. Costs Nothing to Try.
Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no end to the suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive home treatment discovered by Dr. Hartman, and used for over thirty-five years in successfully treating catarrh all over the world.
His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, ointment or inhaler, but is a most thorough treatment that acts on the blood. It cleans out the blood, stomach, liver and lungs so that you can breathe freely and sleep without the stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the delicate mucous membranes and stops the discharge, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose, hawking and spitting, and at the same time will not poison the system and stomach, as internal medicines do.
If you want to test this method without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 526 Walton Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you a trial package by mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal deafness, hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet on catarrh. Write him immediately.

STEINWAY

The Greatest of Pianos

Steinway & Sons not only produce the greatest Piano, but have developed a selling method that protects every Steinway Owner in his piano investment.

In The Purchase Of A Steinway You Are Absolutely Protected—

The value of every Steinway Piano is a fixed, permanent matter. Every Steinway Owner has an instrument of supreme quality—and a definite asset as well, upon which he can realize at will. Steinway & Sons have fixed Steinway prices at a fair measure of Steinway worth. These prices have been published to the world—and every Steinway Representative pledged to their maintenance. Other piano makers leave to their Agents the actual selling prices of their pianos; and these are varied, sliding up and down, according as the piano buyer can be influenced. Not so with the Steinway—Steinway prices are permanent, absolutely the same to all. And because they are a true measure of Steinway worth—Steinway values are permanent.

Steinways At Eastern Prices Obtainable Only At This Establishment—

We are Sole Steinway Representatives for Southern California and Arizona. New Steinway Pianos are obtainable only at this Establishment. We sell Steinways at Eastern prices, with a small added charge to cover the cost of freight and handling.

Grands, Vertegrands and Uprights, $575 to $1650, on terms of $15 monthly up.

No discounts, no large valuations on pianos taken in exchange for Steinways—this is impossible—your old piano taken for what it is actually worth—and no more. Steinway prices are fixed—an honest measure of Steinway worth.

HEADED ARIGHT.

COLONISTS FOLLOW CALL OF THE WEST.

Thousands of Families Flock to Land of Summer Skies to Build Storm-Free Homes—Railroads Are Taxed to Meet Rush.

TWENTY thousand colonists are being whirled as fast as steam can move them to Los Angeles and Southern California—a hurricane windup to a record-breaking season. The thirty days ended the 15th inst. saw more than 75,000 people enter the State through the various western gateways, all bent upon acquiring homes or settling upon those already secured. These figures are advanced by high railroad officials.

From Chicago and the East all transcontinental trains are moving in three and four sections. The exodus out of Chicago and Kansas City on the 14th and 15th inst., the last two days of the low colonist rate, was unprecedented and taxed the equipment of the railroads to handle. Santa Fe, Salt Lake and Southern Pacific trains are moving in double sections and the requisitions for coaches indicate the closing days of the run will see these roads handling eight to ten trains each daily until all the homeseekers are landed in this city. These are gathering from all parts of the United States, and centering Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, Ogden, Salt Lake and Texas points, will flock into California in a solid stream of trains under double heads and in many sections.

Officials are at their wits' ends to provide sufficient cars to move the increasing stream of colonists. The operating departments are besieged with requisitions for passenger equipment—anything that has wheels and will not spill the crowds. These requests, in many instances, are hard to fill, and applications come from division superintendents for permission to use the old-time and practically obsolete coaches—lamp-lighted and of ancient days.

Tourist sleepers are in such demand that it is necessary to return these coaches East in solid special trains under rush orders. Many people are traveling without regard to sleeping accommodations—apparently, their one desire is to "get to California, anyway, but get there."

And these colonists are not coming merely to look around and spend a few days' sightseeing. They come to invest, and they do invest, as the great demand for acreage in this section and in the fertile San Joaquin Valley shows. And most of them have money with which to buy and to improve, if they take unimproved land, as many do.

RUSH OF TRAINS.

The Salt Lake has been handling heavy crowds daily for several days but the number of extra coaches required during the closing days has been something unlooked for.

Over this road from the 14th to the 15th insts., approximately forty extras have been provided.

On the 14th the Denver and Rio Grande turned over five extra cars, and the Union Pacific two; on the following day the Salt Lake received from the Union Pacific two, and from the Denver and Rio Grande four extra tourist sleepers; yesterday the Gould line turned over six more coaches, and the Harriman road two; today eight will be delivered by the Denver and Rio Grande, and five by the Union Pacific, and tomorrow the last-named will turn over three more.

According to Clarence Mann, city passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern, that road will deliver record-breaking crowds to the connecting lines.

Harry L. Hull of the personally-conducted tours of this road, reached Los Angeles with a special of seven cars and other representatives with large numbers during the week ended. Regular trains are bringing in from three to four hundred each trip, these operating in two and three sections.

Forty-five cars a day is the Santa Fé's contribution to this great crush of homeseekers, through Chicago and Kansas City, with indications that the last two days will necessitate a couple of additional coaches.

The colonist rush has set old railroad men to talking of the early days, when California was settling and before the wondrous wand of progress had touched the desert and caused the roses and the fruits to blossom and ripen into garden spots—days when tourist sleepers were unknown and interstate commerce commissions no dreaded bugbears.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

In the late 80's, before the Santa Fé was built into Los Angeles, straggling tourists were finding their way into the rich valleys of Southern California over the Southern Pacific, the only rail route to the Coast. In February, 1886, the Santa Fé ran its first train into Los Angeles, using the Southern Pacific track from Colton, and in May, 1887, completed its own line into the city and came in over its rails. The rate-making power was then in the railroads and competition was keen.

Santa Fé agents were industrious, and soon a considerable number of colonists were diverted to that line. This precipitated a rate war that was the forerunner of present-day colonist rates.

The battle for control of California transcontinental passenger business was so fierce that at one time the rate from Kansas City to Los Angeles was made as low as 50 cents, and from Los Angeles to Kansas City $1, with a corresponding low rate to other eastern points.

This rate, however, lasted only a few days, then a temporary truce was effected. But during the two days the rate was in force the railroads were swamped with thousands more passengers than they could handle, and coaches reached Los Angeles crowded like trolley cars during the evening rush hours.

There was no set time for the "colonist season" in the early days. Whenever a road decided it wanted more business than it was getting it reduced rates to the Coast and started things. This was in the days when combinations and compacts were unhampered by restrictions of law, and "gentlemen's agreements" and other of the more polite terms of the present day, meaning the same thing, were unnecessary.

Under vastly different conditions of travel then, was the colonist business in its infancy, and it has thrived and steadily increased from the initial train until today, with equipment increased a thousand fold, and thousands of new coaches added annually, the railroads are finding it hard to take care of the traffic.

VAST DIFFERENCE.

The colonist who steamed slowly behind wheezy engines across the wind-swept plains of Kansas and Nebraska, in the pioneer days, knew little of the comforts and convenience of colonist travel of today. Then, each passenger carried his or her mattress, sheets, pillows, curtains and a sufficient stock of provisions to last until the end of the trip. It took about six or seven days to travel from Kansas City to Los Angeles, and the sledding was pretty rough. Tourist sleepers were practically unknown, and the seats were of wood, without cane or plush cushions; upon these hard slats the homeseeker would stretch his little mattress, smooth out his pillow, hang his curtains, and iron the creases out of his back in a vain endeavor to sleep. Today the colonist is assisted by a porter into a sleeper, practically the same, except for interior furnishings, as a standard Pullman. Hot and cold water is to be found in every car. Comfortable berths and each coach containing ranges and dishes where coffee can be made and light cooking done; and it doesn't require six days to make the trip from Kansas City to the Coast, either.

THE OLD RATE WARS.

Many Los Angeles railway men took more or less part in the old colonist rate wars. Charles White, of the Southern Pacific, was joint agent for the Santa Fé and Southern Pacific at the old River Station before the Santa Fé moved over its own rails, and has seen many thousands seeking and finding homes in the State.

W. H. Brewer, assistant to the general manager of the Coast lines of the Santa Fé, was then stationed at Kansas City, and started many a man on the road to fortune by singing the praises of Southern California. J. F. Held, chief clerk to J. J. Byrne, assistant general traffic manager of the Santa Fé, was here during all the early rush. Held says the traffic was big from the start; he has watched it expand until it has grown out of all proportion to the early days, when even a normal travel of today would have swamped all lines beyond any hope of taking care of the business. And despite the fact that conditions were different, equipment poor, power limited, and roadbed rough, California lured the thrifty to her shores. Then, as today, the homeseekers came to invest. Some of them had money; many did not; but all had indomitable will and pluck and perseverance, and the blossoming gardens of Southern California bear witness to their handiwork.

With the years, not only has the RAIL TRAFFIC FEELS STING.

Steamship War Cuts Into It, and the Southern Pacific Postpones San Francisco Limited Indefinitely.

The question whether the steamship war is taking business from the railroads, between this city and San Francisco, has been apparently answered by the withdrawal and indefinite holding up of the new daylight limited, planned by the Southern Pacific, which was to have been started on the 20th inst. Ever since the steamship war begun Southern Pacific officials have been loud in their declaration that the fight was not affecting rail business a particle.

The Southern Pacific caused the Pullman Company to gather the necessary equipment for the new train, and everything was in readiness for its inauguration. Then it notified the Pullman Company that the train would not be put on before the 24th inst., some minor details of the schedule remaining to be arranged. It is now asserted that the date of the new service is indefinite.

This indicates that the steamship war is cutting deep into the overland passenger business. Present trains are running light. With the Seattle fair and Portola business practically over, there is a strong likelihood of the proposed new train being held up until either the water fight is disposed of or until spring, when the travel will be heavier.

Boat traffic continues heavy, but there has been a distinct slackening during the last few days. Bookings are still a week ahead on all the Pacific Coast, North Pacific and Schubach and Hamilton vessels, but at the Independent office, which has caught the overflow of both these companies, it is not difficult to get berths.

State and government officials are closely watching the fight to see that no overloading of vessels occurs, and, while still heavy, traffic is showing the effect of the thirty days' rush.

From now on the fight is one of endurance. It is a traffic duel to the death. There has been no indication of a compromise. By those in close touch with the situation the assertion is made that no quarter will be shown, and one will be forced to withdraw. This will, of course, be the weaker company.

ON GOLDEN WEDDING EVE.

Death Takes Hale Old Man While Celebration Is Planned in His Honor.

Within a few days of the goal of the anniversary of his golden wedding, Bernard Krohn, No. 3113 Normandie street, died yesterday, just when members of his family and many friends were preparing a celebration in his honor.

The deceased is the father of H. G. Krohn, of Brauer & Krohn, and was himself a well-known and prosperous business man of Davenport, Iowa, prior to moving to Los Angeles in 1905. He was born in Ellinstrom, Schleswig Holstein, Germany, April 3, 1835, and came to America in 1858, and went to Iowa, where he lived for forty-seven years, and built up a large furniture manufacturing institution. He was 74 years of age, and the North American Turner Bund recently presented the vigorous old man with a fifty-year diploma, which is awarded to those who have been active gymnasts in the society for half a century. Up to a short time before his death, Mr. Krohn took hearty physical exercise, and could perform in the gymnasium with agility.

He leaves a widow and eight children—Bernhard Krohn, Jr., of Hood River, Or.; Robert Krohn, Portland, Or.; Mrs. H. G. Braunlich, Davenport, Iowa; Misses Meta and Clara Krohn, Mrs. W. R. Thompson, H. P. Krohn and H. G. Krohn, all of this city.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.

A meeting of the Conference Committee of the Associated Charities has been called for the 19th inst., in the Chamber of Commerce, preliminary to the annual meeting of the central body. At this meeting the plan for an industrial department will be discussed, as a site has already been chosen.

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities will be held next month at which suggestions will be made along many lines. At the annual meeting officers will be elected and the annual reports made by the heads of the various departments.

NOW WILL YOU BE GOOD?

HERE'S SOME GAYETY WITH THE CANDIDATE.

Devices of the Political Campaigners in Los Angeles—The Soulful Method and the Rushaboy Style of Capturing Votes Contrasted.

SOMETHING over 100 worthy citizens, struggling for public office, have made an alarming discovery.

That, in this new kind of city election, the honors go, not to the worthiest, but to the best advertised.

Since some political Dr. Cook came back with this data, the antics of our candidates have been suggestive of a bevy of soubrettes.

Every time you see a candidate, you see a person who is trying to conjure up some startling stunt that will impress his name on the cerebrum and cerebellum and the medulla oblongata of the voter on election morning.

Something—however crazy—to make the voter, as his eye wanders down the mile-long list of candidates, brighten and quirk; something to make him exclaim, "I remember this chap; he is the one who bit a bulldog at our Woodcraft Picnic."

It isn't so much that there's method in their madness; there's madness in their methods. Consider them!

The most startling thing Doc Howton can think of is to turn highbrow." On the whole, there couldn't be anything much more startling.

Doc still goes around and harangues the old gang at the union labor meetings, but in a new way. He now appears before them in the light of a kind old savant, with a patient, spirituelle smile, willing to be a Councilman for science sake. He makes them speeches that sound like a Harvard professor of psychology having a verbal wrestling match with Spencer or Prof. Huxley.

Every time he spits out a word that his gang can't understand, he makes a new vote; as they can't understand any of the words except the "ands" and "thes," he is doing finely.

SAINTLY "DOC."

In order to provide the necessary stage effects, the doctor has issued some campaign cards, adorned with a photograph, in which he seems to be attempting to look like Saint-Cecelia-at-the-organ. His hair is combed straight back in an Annie-Besant pompadour and a sad and beautiful light plays about his brow.

Howton has opened an office in the Copp building, which is inhabited by a soulful young man. When you inquire for an absent candidate at any of the other headquarters, they tell you that the boss has just stepped out to get a high ball; but when you inquire for the Doc, the soulful young man tells you, in a gentle, low voice, that "the doctor is attending a convention of the Society For the Propagation of Psychic Phenomena."

On the street he appears with an air of gentle abstraction and carries a copy of Browning. For a watch charm, he wears a tooth of the poet, Omar Khayyam. He prespires perfume and for the next twenty-five days will be positively the most refined—and the most amazing—person on the civilized globe.

Uncle George Smith leaps out of bed every morning with a cry of dismay, "Only twenty-eight days more; only twenty-seven days more."

Snatching up a bale of cigars, Mr. Smith makes a dash for the city's busy marts of commerce. He arrives coincidentally with the janitors, and by the time he gets the janitors solid, the elevator boys begin to come in.

By the time the private secretaries and the blond young lady typewriter experts arrive on the scene, the lord of the Smith clan has given away enough tobacco to finance a Cuban revolution.

Oscar Farish runs himself for Mayor as though he were placing a real estate addition on the market.

He begins with the billboards—something tasty and attractive by way of a catch line. It sounds much like a real estate sign. Only where the real estate sign says, "Why pay rent, when you can own a home?" Oscar's signs say blithely, "We need a young and energetic man for Mayor."

He peeps down at you in the street cars; he stares at you with a bright smile from the big billboards, looking young and energetic.

Every time the electric car motormen and conductors are paid off, Oscar is there at the steps of the pay car with a large box of cigars (candidate brand) and a bundle of cards. He never says anything but, as each man climbs up to get his pay, Oscar shakes him solemnly and silently by the hand. This silent handshake is a new and somewhat impressive campaign device.

When Oscar puts his pulsing hand in yours, it is said to thrill you to the marrow, as he fixes you with his young and energetic eye.

At Candidate Mushet's headquarters, a young man tells you severely, but piously, that "Mister Mishet is at his office in the City Hall, attending to the business of the city." At his office in the City Hall they tell you he is somewhere else, presumably tending to the business of being elected.

Mr. Mushet has a high-power intellect; but he is not what you would call a mixer.

Rising to the requirements of the situation, however, he has started out on the joyous career of a social cut-up. The effect is something weird. He goes to the picnics and imprints cold, chaste kisses on the brows of girl babies and boy babies and merrily shakes hands. It makes one think of an old bull elephant trying, with painstaking solemnity, to play hop-Scotch.

Nearly always, he is accompanied by his silent partner, H. Ivor Thomas, candidate for City Auditor—the job now held by Mr. Mushet. Mr. Thomas is not exactly what you would call cold. He is merely like an iceberg.

Thomas is an expert accountant. He is the kind of man a big corporation would be glad to pay big money for keeping its accounts; but he would draw very small pay as a comedian.

On account of his qualifications, Mushet is anxious that Thomas should be his successor; so when he goes to picnics, he takes the silent Thomas along.

Mushet says, "This is Thomas; he's for Auditor; the Mayor's mine." Whereupon, H. Ivor Thomas icily bows and Mushet bows and they are ready for another picnic.

UNCLE ALECK'S SUSPICIONS.

Uncle Aleck Alexander goes on the principle that possession is not only nine points of the law; but generally the tenth point. He is afraid to leave the Mayor's office even for a picnic, lest somebody should slip in. Sometimes he is obliged to attend a meeting of the Police Commission; but he slips out every once in a while to see if some caitiff could possibly have mooched the Mayor's chair while he was not looking.

That he has the Mayor's chair fitted with a burglar alarm is the firm belief at the City Hall.

Uncle Aleck is so filled with suspicion that he is afraid to go campaigning. He is more suspicious of his friends in Our Set than he is of his enemies, the Republicans.

He is aware that the Republican

COMPROMISE of

END OF FIGHT FOR FORTUNE.

Legal Heirs of "King of the Tenderloin" Win,

"Nurse" and "Lady Friend" to Get But a Third.

Fat Fees Go to Attorneys on Both Sides.

The fight for the fortune of old Bartolo Ballerino, late "king of the Los Angeles tenderloin," has been compromised.

The old Chilian's widow and children, who were cut off with $5, will receive two-thirds of the estate, which is valued at about $350,000.

The legal heirs, who will each receive a one-twenty-seventh share, are the following sons and daughters: Merced Ballerino de Cariga, Mary Ballerino de Olivas, Rachel Ballerino de Fish, Ricardo, Austin, Joseph, Phillip, Fred and Adele Ballerino.

Mrs. Delia Garrison Quien, the nurse and "lady friend," to whom Ballerino willed nearly everything he possessed, has been induced to accept a third interest in the estate. Before the division is made between the heirs and Mrs. Quien, certain bequests made in Ballerino's will must be paid, by the terms of the compromise. They are as follows:

To J. M. Elliott, $5000 instead of $10,000, as stated in the will; to The Home of the Good Shepherd, $5000, as in the will; to G. F. Conant, $1000, instead of $2000, as in the will; two other bequests of $500 each, to friends of Mrs. Quien, will stand as in the will.

FAT FOR ATTORNEYS.

It is stated that the attorneys for the heirs will receive a fee of about $100,000, to be divided between Thomas L. Winder, Gage & Foley, who participated in the $500,000 fee in the Lucky Baldwin estate, and H. H. Appel.

Inasmuch as the old man's will was signed by four doctors, as witnesses, and was accompanied by a special certificate of sanity, the heirs have no complaint over the size of the fee required to virtually nullify such a fortified will.

Mrs. Quien was represented by Waldo M. York and John M. York. In an interview yesterday, she indicated that her attorneys will receive less than the attorneys for the other side.

By the terms of the compromise, Mrs. Quien will be allowed to retire from the fight with the honors of war. The disputed will, which she was accused of getting from the old man by foul means, will be admitted to probate on Monday. That is the date set for the beginning of the fight over the will. Had the contest occurred, it would have been one of the most sensational that ever took place in local courts.

Old Ballerino, who was 80 years old at the time of his death, was the owner of the greater part of the former Tenderloin district of this city. He was a most picturesque character.

STONE WORSHIP ALLEGED.

In the contest filed by the heirs against the will, it was alleged that the old man was possessed of a strange delusion that he had talisman, which had the power of giving him everlasting life. It was some sort of a stone image. It is asserted that old Ballerino worshiped it, as a fetish with strange rites.

During the last years of his life, he seemed to become infatuated with a woman by the name of Delia Garrison. She asserts she had been only a nurse to a poor old man, but the heirs allege that she was a woman of bad character and exercised a malevolent influence over the man, inducing him to cut off his children, one of whom was a blind boy, to beggary.

It was asserted that, by promising to take care of him tenderly until his death, she got him to make a will, giving her the whole estate, with the exception of some trifling bequests. It was rumored at the Courthouse yesterday that this will contest would not be tried on Monday, some sort of a compromise having intervened. None of the attorneys on either side would admit such an arrangement.

Former Judge York, when asked if the case had been compromised, said that there was "nothing in the record to that effect." The other lawyers were as "mum" as a collation of oysters.

ADMITS COMPROMISE.

Mrs. Quien, however, was more communicative. At first she declined to discuss the case, but finally admitted the compromise and stated the terms of it. She said that she would receive a third of the estate and the legal heirs two-thirds.

Asked what she had to pay her attorneys, she said, "I wouldn't care to say; but (ruefully,) they got about enough, I can tell you that." She laughed and added, "But, anyhow, I didn't get stuck like the other side did."

Mrs. Quien gave a hint as to the motive of the settlement, when she begged not to be "roasted," in connection with the charges made against her in the contest by the heirs.

"I am now married," she said, "to a very fine and important man, and I want to be let alone."

Although the value of the Ballerino property is somewhat problematic, Mrs. Quien stated that, in her opinion, it is worth at least $350,000 and will probably run to $350,000.

He Was Bored.

Martin Beck, the vaudevills impresario, was talking in the smoke-room of the liner about bores.

"Dash, the steel man," said Mr. Beck, "has a short way with bores. One tackled him last month on the plazza of a hotel—talked straight ahead to him for thirty minutes about grand opera.

"Dash, the instant there came a pause, said earnestly:

"'I tell you, sir, there's no lobsters like Maine lobsters.'

"The bore started.

"'No doubt,' he, said; 'no doubt. But what has that got to do with what I was talking about?'

"Dash heaved a yawn.

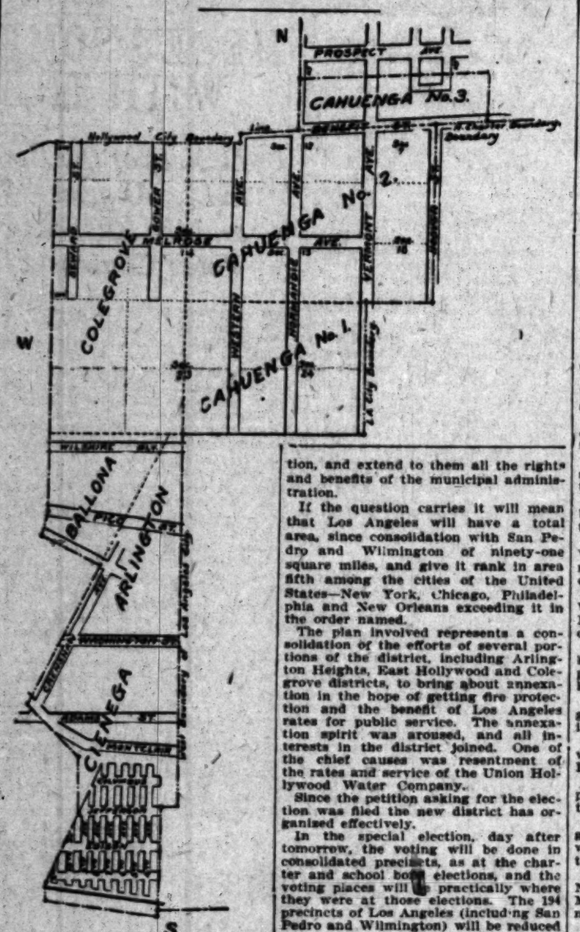
"'By the way,' he said, 'what were you talking about?'"—[Minneapolis Journal.

Thrift of the Chinese.

With their wonted acute perception of the possibilities of things, the Chinese have taken advantage of the anti-mosquito campaign in the French concession to enrich themselves. One of the methods adopted to destroy the embryo nuisances is to pour kerosene on the waters of the various creeks and pools, and as a consequence most of them now carry a surface covering of oil. The Chinese, who do not view the work in the same light as the foreigner, have recently commenced skimming the creeks of the floating oil and using it for their own purposes.—[Siamese Weekly News.

EXPANSION ELECTION.

LOS ANGELES FIFTH IN AREA IF ANNEXATION IS VOTED.



Knocking at the Door.
Accurate map of the section seeking to become annexed to Los Angeles in next Tuesday's election.

ANOTHER big increase in the area, population and wealth of Los Angeles appears to be scheduled for ratification at the special election to be held Tuesday, when the proposition to annex ten square miles west of the city is to be voted on.

This region, if voted in, will not only bring the increases named, but add approximately 1200 voters to the city's list, who will have the right to participate in the primary election for city offices November 10.

The annexation, if it carries, will add $12,000,000 of taxable value to the city, which will bear its share of the new issues of harbor and power bonds and all other municipal debt; it will add about 10,000 to the city's population, and extend to them all the rights and benefits of the municipal administration.

If the question carries it will mean that Los Angeles will have a total area, since consolidation with San Pedro and Wilmington of ninety-one square miles, and give it rank in area fifth among the cities of the United States—New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and New Orleans exceeding it in the order named.

The plan involved represents a consolidation of the efforts of several portions of the district, including Arlington Heights, East Hollywood and Colegrove districts, to bring about annexation in the hope of getting fire protection and the benefit of Los Angeles rates for public service. The annexation spirit was aroused, and all interests in the district joined. One of the chief causes was resentment of the rates and service of the Union Hollywood Water Company.

Since the petition asking for the election was filed the new district has organized effectively.

In the special election, day after tomorrow, the voting will be done in consolidated precincts, as at the charter and school bond elections, and the voting places will be practically where they were at those elections. The 194 precincts of Los Angeles (including San Pedro and Wilmington) will be reduced to seventy-four. Six precincts will receive the vote of the territory that it is proposed to annex.

The voting places for San Pedro will be:

Precinct No. 1—Malgren's grocery store, Ancon and First streets.

Precinct No. 2—City Hall, Beacon-street entrance.

Precinct No. 3—Eleventh and Palos Verdes streets.

Terminal Island—New firehouse, near Terminal Tavern.

Wilmington—City Hall.

The voting places in the territory to be annexed are:

Cahuenga No. 1—Schoolhouse, Third and Cahuenga streets.

Cahuenga No. 2—Lincoln School, corner Canal and Woodard streets.

Cahuenga No. 3—No. 1600 Edgmont street.

POLICE BREAK UP HONEYMOON.

MARRIED ONLY ONE DAY YOUNG COUPLE IN JAIL.

Girl Is Ward of Juvenile Court and Its Dignity Is Outraged Because Its Permission Is Not Asked for Wedding of Woman It Is Expected to Reform.

The honeymoon of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Blanchard—just one day old—had an abrupt ending when the couple was taken in custody by the police yesterday.

The trite old saw, "Marry in haste and repent at leisure," has a true application in this case. They became engaged after they had seen each other just five times and were married in less than twenty-four hours after the betrothal.

Miss Leona Roy, or Mrs. Louis Blanchard, who became a bride on short notice, and got in trouble with the authorities, as did the bridegroom.

The bride was formerly Leona Roy, a well-developed girl of 17. She had been wayward and as a result was made a ward of the Juvenile Court. Good behavior won her probation, but she fell back into her old ways and the probation officer began looking for her.

He found that she had met Blanchard, who was employed at Hotel Alexandria, and went to him to get information as to her whereabouts. Blanchard declared he did not know where she was, but promised to help the officers find her. He did, but not in the way they expected.

When no trace of her could be found, her picture was published in the Police Daily Bulletin. Hugh Scott, who prints it, saw the photograph and recognized the girl when he met her on the street in company with Blanchard. He took them to the Police Station.

Believing they had outwitted the police, they smilingly declared they were husband and wife, having been married by Justice Ling on Friday afternoon. But they got in worse trouble than ever. The girl was taken to the Detention Home and Blanchard was locked up on a charge of having assisted in the delinquency of the girl.

When Mrs. Blanchard knew they were going to be separated and both held in custody, she tearfully told her story.

"I was introduced to Blanchard on the street two weeks ago," she sobbed out. "I saw him five times before we were married. Thursday night I was sitting in Central Park when he came along. He told me the officers were looking for me because I had violated my probation.

"He told me the easiest way out of it was to marry him and then they would let me go. I told him I would have to tell my mother first. I went to her and she said she would have to see the man. She saw him and said he looked all right and gave her consent to our marriage.

"We went to Judge Ling's court yesterday and were married. I wanted to be a good girl and didn't know I was doing anything wrong when I got married."

It is possible that the court will set aside the marriage as the girl was a ward of the Juvenile Court and had no right to marry without official consent until she was of age.

Carnegie's Silent Prayer.

Andrew Carnegie's splendid philanthropy was being praised on the piazza of an Atlantic City hotel.

"Mr. Carnegie," said an aged Pittsburgh clergyman, "is as profoundly religious as he is profoundly charitable. All the same——"

He smiled.

"Mr. Carnegie attended some years ago one of my business men's weekday services. Seeing him in the congregation and unaware that he was not used to praying extempore, I said after the first hymn:

"'We will now be led in prayer by Brother Carnegie.'

"Mr. Carnegie rose, very red and flustered.

"'Let us engage, first of all,' he stammered, 'in a few minutes of silent prayer.'

"We all obediently bowed our heads and closed our eyes, and Mr. Carnegie, tiptoeing out, escaped."—[Washington Star.

NEAR TERRIBLE COLLISION.

Carload of Stanford Students Narrowly Averts Being Smashed by a Runaway Oil Car.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 15.—A head-on collision between a runaway oil car and a passenger car loaded with students, on the new electric line, was narrowly averted yesterday afternoon. The oil car was left standing on the grade, back of the engineering buildings, and the brakes failing to hold it, it started down the track. The runaway had attained considerable momentum when the crowded passenger car rounded the curve at Encina gymnasium.

Several students, realizing the danger, signaled the motorman of the passenger car, and he reversed the car and sped down the track until the runaway was boarded and stopped. The passengers on the car were panic stricken.

Geoffrey F. Morgan, '10, of Los Angeles, and William C. Achi, '12, of Honolulu, have been awarded the first prize of $10 in the annual song and yell competition. "Songs of Stanford" is the title of the winning composition. Morgan wrote the words and Achi composed the music. Fifteen songs, original in words and music, and fourteen written to adapted music, were submitted to the committee.

The Student Affairs Committee has decided to take no action regarding several noisy demonstrations that were held on the campus two nights early in the week. The Student Executive Committee is investigating the disturbances. On both occasions the "peerades" originated without any apparent motive. Fire-arms were discharged and the crowd was boisterous.

The 200 students enrolled in the law department were the guests of the law faculty at a "smoker" at University Inn tonight.

"The Road to Yesterday" has been selected by the Masquers for presentation in Assembly Hall, November 19. The cast is to be selected next week.

The sophomore class has decided to give its annual play on February 25.

The junior "plug-ugly" committee has selected November 5 as the date for the annual extravaganza. The show will be given on a temporary stage, to be erected on the baseball diamond. This will be a return to the old custom, from which a departure has been necessary during the last two years on account of rainy weather. Several students are preparing to submit manuscripts for the show. A prize of $25 will be awarded to the person whose manuscript is voted the best.

RESTORES OLD WAR HISTORY.

J. H. McCutcheon, for nearly forty years a resident of Los Angeles, who fought in Company H, Twenty-fifth Virginia Regiment, under Stonewall Jackson at the battle of Gettysburg, has succeeded in finding the owner of a portfolio, containing many of the incidents of the war. It contained the name of Edward E. Moore, Company B, Second Wisconsin Regiment. After the war Mr. McCutcheon endeavored to locate Moore, but failed. A few weeks ago he met a man at Long Beach who knew Moore in Wisconsin, and gave McCutcheon the address. Through this it was learned that Moore had died at Rock Island, Ill., eight years ago, but that his widow, now Mrs. Frank Young, still resided there. After a short correspondence, the portfolio was sent to Mrs. Young, who has just acknowledged receipt and has expressed her intention of publishing a number of the recorded incidents, which appear to shed additional light to some of the great events of the Civil War.

The Greer-Robbins Company announces that the six-cylinder Mitchell will leave the factory for Los Angeles within the next ten days. Much interest is being manifested in this new model to be placed on the market by the Mitchell Company. The new car has a powerful as well as perfectly silent motor.

AUSTIN STRIKES.

Omaha Capitalists Are Working at Bannock—Galena Also Rich.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

AUSTIN (Nev.) Oct. 14.—The recent finding of gold in two places in the territory south of the main cañon at Austin is taken to mean that there is strong likelihood that every silver camp has its Bannock, even as old Galena, fourteen miles south of Battle Mountain. Galena has been a great producing camp in years past. It was a flourishing camp. It had its declines and most of the buildings were hauled to Battle Mountain for old lumber. A month ago just over the ridge from Galena, gold ore of amazing richness was discovered. It was so rich that ten feet below the surface where the ledge was disintegrated by the elements, $3000 worth of the yellow metal was scooped up in an old coffee pot. At eighteen feet the gold-impregnated streak, when struck with a big sledge hammer bent instead of breaking. Omaha capitalists have entered upon a feverish programme of development at Bannock. The gold strikes south of Austin offer a fair parallel. In the Golden Eagle lease on the ground of the Austin Manhattan Company, ore that assays $97 gold, has been broken at a depth of fifty feet. Further west and still on the property claims have given encouraging gold showings. In line with the gold showings, made on the active Manhattan-Austin ground are the estates of the Austin Central and Nevada Equities Company. It is believed that the slopes of Marshall Cañon contain as much enrichment in gold as the slopes of Lander Hill do in silver.

The following Franklin deliveries were made last week: W. H. Willebrands, Dr. W. B. Kern, Dr. J. Lee Hagadorn, Ed Arnaiteen, Ray Costerisan and Councilman E. L. Blanchard. This makes the second Councilman to purchase a Franklin, Clampitt already having one. A carload of Franklins will arrive this week, one to each modal.

It is "in the interests of scientific truth" that Peary is knocking Cook. But the public seems to be strangely tainted with Missourian madness.

We can't recall the name of a single man in history who had a chance to make good and who failed to do so quite so miserably as Robert E. Peary.

SAN FRANCISCO'S CARNIVAL.

The old carnival spirit of California will be in full swing at San Francisco during the present week. The long-heralded "Portola Festival" is at last due, and the careful, intelligently directed and expensive preparations of many months are about to blossom forth for the edification and delight of the people.

The historic spectacle of the discovery of the harbor of St. Francis will be reënacted with every faithful detail reproduced. The first Spanish Governor of the Californias, Don Gaspar de Portola, accompanied by his little army, his officers gay in velvet, gold-laced jackets and slashed breeches, his leathern smocked soldiers, his muleteers, neophytes and retainers will once again climb the brown loma from which they looked their first on the peerless bay and the hills of glory that close it in.

To do honor to the occasion ships of war from the great nations of the earth will be present to fire salutes, there will be parades, bands, music and dancing and a very great deal of splendid pageantry. Distinguished persons from all parts of the globe will be on hand to lend their presence to the occasion. A toast, composed by President Taft, will be drunk, not only in San Francisco, but on every spot of the earth where the foot of a Californian treads.

Underlying the celebration there is a deeper meaning. San Francisco has taken this method to show that she has risen from her ashes, victorious over disaster, triumphant after sore travail, not only herself again but greater than she has ever been. Never in all the history of the world has a city performed a greater feat than San Francisco has performed in accomplishing her own rejuvenation in the three short years that have elapsed since the disaster of 1906. May her glory never again be dimmed, and may the Portola Festival meet with the success it so richly deserves.

ANNEXATION ELECTION.

Ho for another special election in Los Angeles! An annexation election on Tuesday next—the proposition being to take into the city a large and growing community to the west of us, described as follows:

"That well-built-up and thickly-settled territory north of Wilshire boulevard as far as Benefit street; from Normandie west to Seward street, and Prospect avenue from Normandie east to Bloum street; and from Hoover street west to Seward. Also the well-built-up territory west of Arlington street, running out from Adams, Washington and Pico streets as far as Crenshaw boulevard, and south to Santa Monica avenue."

The question for the voters of the city to consider is one of expediency. Will it be advantageous to Los Angeles as a whole to admit this territory and assume charge of it? Can we afford to furnish it with fire protection, policing, lights, water and all that in return for the taxes to be expected? The friends of the proposition declare that the taxable property already in sight in the district amounts to about $13,000,000 in value. Certain it is that month by month great additions are being made thereto. It looks as though this valuation might double in a few years, at the rate new buildings are going up.

The conditions are such that it would seem to be a good move for the city to annex this territory and gain about 10,000 population thereby for the next census enumeration. A point in favor is that such an annexation cannot interfere with the general programme for the consolidation of city and county governments, which is the main thing to be kept in the public mind's eye. We should steadily march toward that goal.

DISTURBED EUROPE—FERRER.

At this distance it is not easy to arrive at an exact and just conclusion as to the merits of the execution of Prof. Ferrer, the Spanish Socialist. From the widespread disturbance that has grown out of the killing of the man it looks as if there is ground for suspicion that at least a mistake has been made. It is notable that the excitement created by the death of the Spanish professor spreads throughout the whole continent of Europe.

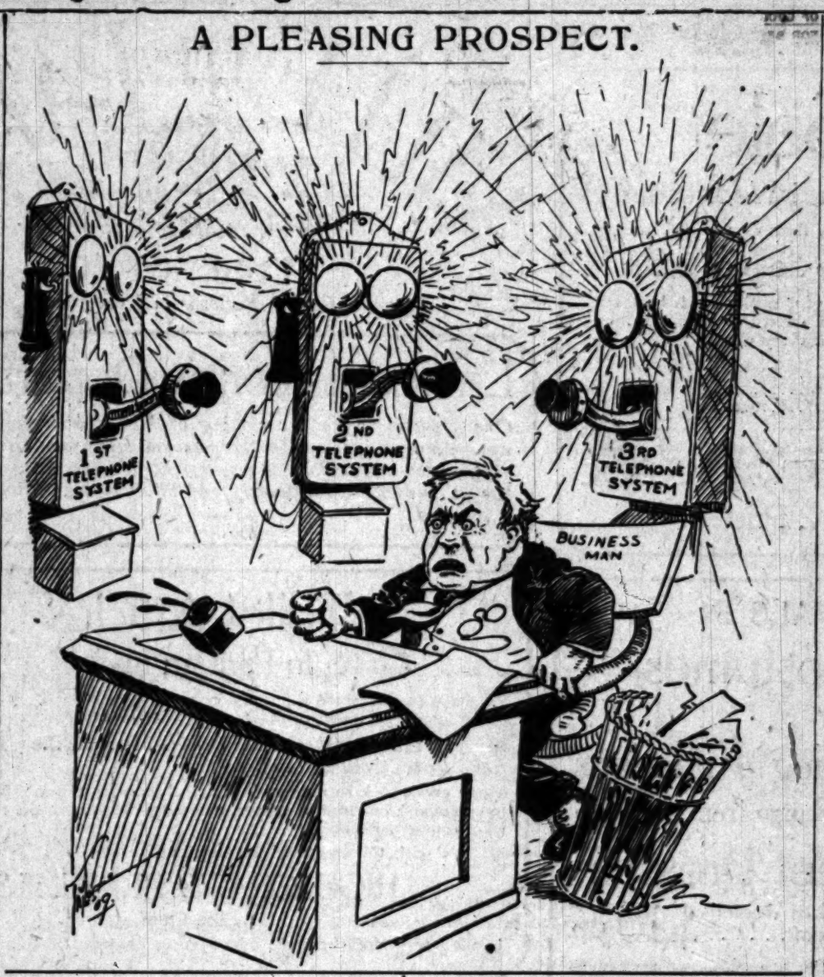
On the other hand we must not fail to notice that the disquiet is for the most part among the numerous ranks of people in all these various countries who are afflicted with more or less acute socialism, or anarchism. Looked at from this point of view we must recognize the readiness in which these people stand to make an outcry and create public discontent upon the slightest provocation. In the present instance it looks very much as if there is a political propaganda working upon the excitable minds of the people, seizing this as mere incident. The embittered feelings are not directed alone to the person of the King of Spain, but embrace in their scope pretty nearly all the heads of government from Madrid to St. Petersburg. The excitement even reaches farther than politics, kings and governments, and is aimed very generally at the churches and their ecclesiastical heads. With the cry of "tyranny" is mingled in fully equal measure the cry of "clericalism."

The widespread agitation arising out of the death of this individual and the vast number of persons involved in it point with unerring finger to the disturbed state of the public mind all through Europe and how imminent an outbreak may be at any time in any of these countries, springing out of any unforeseen incident that may arise. The head that wears a crown has long been said to rest uneasy. Seldom is this truer than in the present conditions ruling through nearly all of Europe.

It is an easy matter for us to sit here under our own free government in a land so teeming with still undeveloped resources and condemn governments in countries where conditions are so very different. The problem of government is a very difficult one in these old countries, as indeed is the problem of life. It is the difficulty of eking out anything like a comfortable living in these congested countries which makes the rulers' task so exceedingly dangerous. There are other influences at work disturbing the minds of the populace and weakening their loyalty toward government which might be avoided and ought to be avoided, but the way is not easy to trace. Undoubtedly militarism in Europe is one of the chief causes of the discontent among the people. There is such a vast proportion of the average classes of population taken away from earning a livelihood, who must be supported by those left to do the work, that the burden is almost unbearable. The very flower of the manhood of nearly every country in Europe wastes its most precious years in the army or the navy. Besides the withdrawal of this last large number of effective men from industrial occupations and the maintenance of them in practical idleness, there are all the other expenses of keeping up the military establishments which weigh upon the people in a manner that we cannot appreciate. With all these comes the persistent enlargement of naval equipment in the different nations, heaping up the burdens upon the backs of the people and bending their necks lower in drudgery that amounts to slavery. The proverb of the last straw breaking the camel's back arises before the mind all the time in contemplating these conditions in the Old World. Thus it is that every incident like the execution of this Spanish professor seems to be the straw that breaks the back of the burden-bearer and brings chaos.

There is almost constantly in Great Britain an army of unemployed people amounting to nearly 1,000,000 individuals. Of course, in some cases these are people who do not find work because they do not look for it, but in the great majority of cases they are a burden upon society because there is no work at which they can earn even the scantiest livelihood. Besides this large number of actually unemployed there are at least twice as many more who by the most untiring, persistent efforts barely earn enough to keep soul and body together. In London there are all the time 200,000 women whose average earnings amount to 24 cents a day. Knowing that indigency prevails less in England than almost any country on continental Europe, we must realize the difficulties that beset the people to get bread at all and therefore the perplexities that beset governments in controlling this horde of the half-starved.

A PLEASING PROSPECT.



FIGHT AGAINST BLASPHEMY.

It is really a thing worthy of approbation that eighteen religious societies took part in a promenade in Jersey City the other day as a protest against blasphemy and for the cultivation of reverence for sacred names and things.

Now we propose to leave the religious side of this to the churches and to look at it from the standpoint of common decency. It is said that the word "bigot" is a corruption of an oath so common in the mouths of English soldiers on the continent in Middle Ages that, coupled with the Anglican insular conceit, a narrow-minded person got the appellation. The Celt has been noted for his religious disposition, but at the same time he has cultivated the habit of blasphemy to a lamentable degree. There are more oaths in the English language than in all the other tongues of all the other races of the world put together.

Elderly men can look back to their childhood and remember the time when an oath in the mouth of a young person was a rare thing and universally condemned. It is conceded by all intelligent persons that the habit of indulging in blasphemy is anything but characteristic of a gentleman. It is no mark of refinement to be forever ripping out expletives involving the use of the most sacred names known to mankind and calling down imprecations on the heads of our friends as well as our enemies. At the present time you can scarcely pass through the streets at any time in any city in the country and not hear gross blasphemy tearing the air all around you. It comes from the lips of men and from those of boys. To go a step farther, we can recall the time when an oath in the mouth of a woman would have shocked a hardened sinner. Lamentable to say, this is no longer true. Women indulge in blasphemy, and even girls.

Of course, on the part of these societies there is a deeper root to this opposition to blasphemy. Religious people naturally hold in reverence the sacred names of the Deity and it is one of the sins forbidden in the decalogue which set rules for men's behavior 1500 years before the Christian era was ushered in. Whatever a man's religious opinions may be, he has no right to inflict pain upon his fellows. The man may be an agnostic or an outright unbeliever, but when he blasphemes, using these sacred names in his oaths, he is inflicting pain upon all within hearing who reverence the names thus taken in vain. The New York Sun has been conducting a discussion as to what constitutes a gentleman. There is one thing that lies at the foundation of a gentleman's character, and that is regard for the feelings of his fellow-men. There are statute laws against using blasphemous expressions in public, but the fact that they are seldom enforced shows how lax our views are upon this subject.

CONSERVING NATIONAL RESOURCES.

America has been so rich in natural resources that she could afford to be prodigal in her gifts. The great business before our fathers and grandfathers was to induce brain and muscle, capital and enterprise, to come in and develop the natural riches that lay broadly all over the country. The gift of the public domain to any person who would make use of it was the wisest possible conservation of our resources in times past.

But conditions have changed. The public domain is reduced from a continental area to a comparatively insignificant amount of land, and that which is fit for tillage is very insignificant. With changed conditions came changed policies. It is deemed necessary at the present time to cut off immense slices of the public domain, mostly mountain region, to be kept in the possession of the Federal government forever. The purpose is to protect the watersheds, and thus prevent floods in time of storm and drouth in times of small rainfall, and also to furnish woodlands that will produce timber for all coming ages.

As to that part of the public domain not embraced in these national reserves, it will probably be found the best policy to permit those enterprising citizens of the country who will do so to possess themselves of the property in fee simple at properly graded prices. This policy would go with everything connected with the lands in question, not only the soil for tillage, the woods for either preservation or removal, but all water powers and other wealth accompanying the land. We have mining laws controlling the developing of mineral riches, and as to these there is talk of a change of policy. Heretofore the mineral lands have been cut off from agricultural use entirely. The proposed change is to permit the miner to go into the ribs of the earth and take out the mineral riches, leaving the surface to the farmer for grazing or agricultural purposes.

As to the permanent resources in the public domain, a different policy will be necessary in dealing with everything on these reserves as the policy of reserving them is new. Possibly the asset of most importance in these reserves after the woodlands is the water power. There was nothing improper in past times in granting in fee simple to American citizens the use of watercourses excepting those that were navigable. The value of a mill site was not worth the conserving of the property. But with the development of electrical power a waterfall becomes a very valuable asset. It would be, evidently improper to hand this over to person or corporation in fee simple for use forever.

Sweden has found it necessary to deal with this matter since the introduction of electricity as a motive power. The legislative body of the kingdom has limited the granting of franchises for water power to an extreme period of eighty years. That is two full generations, and under ordinary circumstances would probably be a period long enough. Of course, we must remember the difference between America and Sweden. That is an old country with its civilization developed about as far as can be, and its natural resources pretty well used up. With us there are waterfalls at remote distances from population, the use of which might be granted under proper conditions for a longer period than eighty years. In many instances it would be a full generation before much use could be made of them at all, two generations before they would pay, and therefore it would be impossible to dispose of them at all unless the term of use was a long one.

It might be better to fix a rental price upon some of these facilities and thus provide a certain amount of constant revenue for the country for all time to come. In that way the future would share in the benefits of the public domain as well as the present. In such cases the leases should run only for a given period of years, with the right of renewal upon such terms as the government might think proper or as might be fixed by just arbitration. The plants necessary for developing those powers and converting them into electricity and then conveying that power to a distance are very costly. Short periods of time would not justify the investment of so large an amount of money.

This policy is all new to us and will bear a good deal of careful study before the details are actually fixed. The duty of the government is, while conserving these valuable resources to future generations, yet not to stand in the way of their present use or the immediate development of the country.

THE FUTURE AMERICAN.

The baseball games of the past few days for the championship of America have in a wonderful way interested the minds of a vast mass of the people. Not only boys and young men have rooted for the Tigers or the Pirates, but gray-bearded, bald-headed men have split their throats for Pittsburgh or Detroit.

The athletic instructors in Yale University have been gathering statistics for some years past and these have been compiled by Dr. Born, the medical director.

These statistics cover the records of 500 athletes from boat crews, football and baseball teams, trackmen and college students generally interested in athletic sports. They take 1903 and 1908 and compare the results of today with those of five years ago. It is simply taking the last generation of college men and matching them with the present generation. It takes about five years to go through our schools and universities. The statistics show that there has been an average gain of twenty-seven pounds in weight, an increase of an inch and a half in height and of seventy-two cubic inches of lung capacity.

We have only a press dispatch conveying to us the barest outlines of these statistics; but if the inquiries are confined to a study of the individuals and fail to go out and seek the causes for these results they are not so enlightening as they might be. If we were to go back a period of fifty years we would find athletic sports either entirely neglected or absolutely taboo in most American colleges. Intellectual training was all that was aimed at, excepting a little religion in the way of morning prayers in a chapel that would freeze a Polar bear, said in the presence of drowsy students who pulled their overcoats on as they ran from the dormitory to the prayer-room. Humanity was judged to be entirely a matter of mentality with a little bit of spirituality mixed in and the physical nature a negligible if not unknown quantity.

Undoubtedly this greater length of limb, greater chest expansion and weight on the part of the college athlete of the present day, as compared with the past, is the result of a reformed system of training which takes note of at least a dual existence in man, the physical being regarded as of equal importance if not of as much as the mental, if not all. The mothers of the present generation have as much to do with this movement for physique in the race as the fathers. If not, why was the age physical training was neglected in the colleges for men, it was condemned in advance for women. A freckle was looked upon by our grandmothers as something awful, and as to wearing a good coat of summer tan, that would have been a sin. The American woman is about as well trained athlete today as the American man. The girls' schools have gymnasiums as well as the boys' schools, and the girls of our generation live more hours in a day out of doors than their grandmothers passed in a week. They play basketball out of doors. The introduction of tennis and golf in America has been of a large advantage to the coming American race as the most advanced science of our day. The American girl of today can walk. Her biceps are well developed. She is not averse to a game of baseball on occasion, and she can even put on the gloves and give me or her sister but her brother a pretty sharp blow.

We occasionally hear discussions as to the relative charms of the English game of cricket and the American game of baseball and as to the merits of the latter game as compared with football. Cricket is played in America and played exceedingly well, but it will never become with us so popular as it is in England or ever prove with us a rival for baseball. The English game of cricket requires two or three days to play. A good team will often run up a score of 100 runs or more. The American game of baseball is typical of American character. It is sharp, fierce and quick. A whole side is often out in fifteen or twenty minutes and the whole nine innings are often played in an hour or two. A game never lasts longer than a day. It requires the quickest kind of action and the most determined courage to play baseball well. When it comes to football it is worse and calls for more courage, endurance and stamina than a battle between contending knights clad in armor needed in the Middle Ages. There is a disposition sometimes to condemn baseball as too fierce and football as too brutal. After all, physical courage is a pretty good thing to have private in mankind. It may be that some men have a great deal of physical courage and very little of the moral kind, but taking one case with another close observers will not fail to come to the conclusion that physical courage and moral courage are pretty closely allied. The heart through which the big stream of real red blood runs is likely to have a man courage to stand up for his principles as well as to stand up in a fight. The man who is afraid of physical pain, whatever else he may have, amounts to very little.

The difference between college training fifty years ago and that of today is very marked in this matter of physical training. Of course, every one has to carry us a little too far, and possibly the athletics of the present day put too much stress upon team work in the baseball field or the boat race, but we would better go slowly in checking the tendency toward physical development. The man with well-developed muscles and lungs has a much better chance for life than the opposite type. He has the better chance for happiness. In the struggle in business the physical giant with the mentality has an advantage over the person whose physique is weak, however strong his mind may be. If there ever comes a need for patriotic service in the armies of the country again, these trained college athletes will prove the worth of the education.

Hard to Please.

A Nebraska farmer's wife has applied for a divorce on the ground that her husband spends so much time kissing her that the weeds are growing over the farm, and the wheat crop is getting ruined. Yet some wives complain that though they have all the comforts and luxuries of life, nothing is worth to them because their husbands are so busy making money to kiss them at all. Which shows how well-founded is the men's rebuttal charge that it is impossible to please a woman—the more American.

"Are you able to manage your husband?"
"I don't have to; my mother lives with us."

THE LANCER.

If it is any satisfaction to Willie Boy, the Piute, who is now trying to slip past the Great Spirit and into the happy hunting grounds, he can know that he has made a pack of fools of the white men.

The spectacle of the Sheriffs of two or three counties raising armies to advance, with armed caution and wondrous circumlocution, upon a rotting eight-days' corpse, seems like a ghastly joke played by this Indian lad against the people he hated.

The mounted hosts, who went out after this one lone Injun, were still coming into Banning at last accounts. The best you can say for the posses who hunted down Willie Boy is that they were mighty well posted as to what constitutes the better part of valor.

Going after an Indian who can shoot the eye out of a rabbit, and who is ensconced in a natural fort, is no joke.

Perhaps it is unreasonable to have expected any man to have reached the wounded deputy, who lay for hours, bleeding to death, in range of Willie Boy's deadly rifle. And probably any one of us would have voted right when the whole posse discreetly retired out of range, and, at the first opportunity, turned tail and went home.

However, it must be confessed that the chase after Willie Boy doesn't shape up very well as a tale of reckless daring on the frontier.

Forth went the posses after the renegade. They found the body of the dead girl, which affected them so that they all gave up the chase and went home.

They started again, and were shot up by the lone Indian, and when it was dark sneaked out again for home. As they were starting, they heard the dull report of a rifle. But every one of the posse seems to have been suddenly afflicted with a fatal lack of curiosity. They did not interrupt their homeward trek. They had lost interest in rifle shots.

And, anyhow, they felt warm with human sympathy for the wounded man. After leaving him dying in the blazing sun all day, without an attempt at his rescue, the whole posse saw it to be their duty to accompany him home.

The truth is, that our boys in the army and navy have made us so blasé to acts of perfectly foolish bravery and reckless daring that we have come to expect it of every one.

I am told that, when they were raising the posses, one of the numerous Sheriff-commanders wanted to enlist the old Indian trailer and hunter, José María Silvas.

José's answer was something painful. He is reputed to have said: "If you will send every one of those damn fools home, and give me $100, I will guarantee to go out and kill that Piute."

Silvas positively refused to go unless he went alone.

He said you might as well hunt a rabbit Indian with a steam derrick as a posse as big as an army.

Lamar Harris of Bohemia.

Lamar Harris, the unfortunate, brilliant boy who ruined himself and made a nine day's temperance lesson, for the world, was a companion of The Lancer's boyhood.

It is a puzzle to me how a man of his attainments and his keen appreciation of some of the finer things of life, could have run after booze and chorus girls.

Somehow the world has an idea that the "Bohemia" you hear about is something odd that its denizens have more fun that would have had St. Anthony in about two minutes.

But alas, there is no such fascinating place. It's all a dream of the stage. On the stage, these merry fellows of the chorus are simply charming; but believe me that the naughty chorus girl in life is a hopelessly dull and tiresome person, who has the manners of a chambermaid and says "Hadn't you ought," and "Usen't you."

Any one who could love a stage girl could love a bottle of ink.

All the rest of life in "Bohemia" is as dull and as tiresome. Believe me, these shrieks of joyous laughter you hear in the Bohemian cafés are over very bum jokes and come out of very uninteresting throats.

What I have seen of this alleged gay life, makes me very sure that Lamar must have been unbalanced in the latter days of his life. Horse play of amusement, and touts and ignorant snickering chorus women were his natural affinities.

Who Spit.

To The Lancer: This is a rather belated comment, but being one of the highly sensitized beings you so often refer to as a woman, I could not refrain from getting in my word on this nuisance question.

The fact is, I like smoke. I never use it myself, but there always seems a lack of some sort in a man who does not smoke, there is always a sense of comfort to me to be in the presence of strong men and the smoke is a part of them. Scandalous, isn't it?

However the thing that is calculated to make my inwards turn outwards is the everlasting spitting (that is not used in refined to say.) In the mornings when one starts out in tune with the infinite, uplifted by the carols of the early-rising birds and larks and all the other nice things of California, the first thing one notices on boarding a car for the business marts is a sound as of a hoist and steam shovel on the platforms, in front, behind, and on every side, or perhaps it is one's good fortune to sit next to a nice gentleman who leans across one and sends a shower of nice tobacco juice out over the rail, which happened to me on several occasions the man in front of you does this and it blows back in your face, and spatters a nice white serge suit which has just cost you $2 to have cleaned, and must be sent again to the cleaner.

There are a lot of fussy women, it is true, but if they are not discounted are those who are utterly lacking in the sense of refinement, I have had my guess.

I am a business woman, was educated in manual training school in contact with boys, and have always worked with men. My profession is such that it has rather set me apart from women. I like men and judge them usually from a man's standpoint and am not narrow-minded. But this question which I have set before you is one that all my ability to shut out of my life and thought things which have no relation to it has not been able to quite ignore. Yours very truly,

ONE OF THEM.

Several times I had the honor of going the rounds of the tough saloons with Francis Murphy and there were none of that kind of doings.

Murphy used to walk up to the tough dive-keepers with his hand out. "Old man," he would say, "I know you must have some fellow who is hanging around here and drinking too much and making his family go hungry. Won't you send him around to my meetings?"

And invariably, they responded. One big Dutchman said: "Mr. Murphy, I know a fellow like that. I have tried to make him brace up. I don't want to wreck his home. He'll be there Sunday next if I have to bring him handcuffed."

Raymond, aged 5, returned from Sunday-school in a state of evident excitement. He strutted around the room as if about to burst with importance. The sympathetic eye of his mother was not slow to observe this.

"What's the matter, Raymond?" she asked.

"Oh, mother," exclaimed the small boy, his eyes sparkling, "the superintendent said something awful nice about me in his pray,' this morning."

"What did he say?"

"He said, 'Oh, Lord, we thank thee for food and Raymond.'"—[Woman's Home Companion.

PUBLIC SERVICE OFFICIAL DOINGS.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Six fire alarm manufacturing companies have sent exhibits of equipment to Los Angeles for demonstration before bids for a new system are received—the first of the kind in the country.

The case of Rosalind O. Butterfield against John T. Harris, involving the ownership of the patent of the Harris electrolytic process for the treatment and purification of water, was heard in Judge Hutton's court yesterday.

A. P. Diffenderfer of Covina, charged with stealing four mules from the Mountain View Ranch, was arrested in Oakland yesterday by Los Angeles officers as he was going into a bank to get his check cashed.

W. M. Flemming touched the heart of Deputy Dist.-Atty. McCormick with his story that he stole to provide for his sick wife and succeeded in getting the burglary charge, which had been lodged against him, reduced to petty larceny, yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

SIX KINDS OF FIRE ALARMS.

CITY'S TEST BRINGS OUT WIDE COMPETITION.

First Time That All Manufacturers Have Assembled With Exhibits to Demonstrate Efficiency of Each. Bids to Be Received by Council Tuesday.

Fire alarms in abundance will sound in New High street tomorrow, when the instruments now being placed in the old Hamburger building for the greatest municipal test of alarm systems ever held and in working order. The test is required under the specifications adopted by the Council, and for which bids are to be received by the Council next Tuesday.

All the companies participating declare no city has ever asked the demonstration that Los Angeles has. Five companies, one European, already are installing their exhibits, and another is expected to report today, as space has been allotted to it. Each has a separate specially built room on the second floor of the building, and the city is providing a watchman to protect the exhibits from injury or accident. Twelve thousand pounds of instruments are being placed, and the exhibit is supposed to represent a cost of $25,000.

The test is the culmination of the long fight of City Auditor Mushet and the Council's "Gamewell" committee—Wallace, Dromgold and Wren—to break the city loose from what they call its heavy annual tribute to the Gamewell company. This is the largest fire-alarm company in the world, and is understood to be facing a serious crisis in the present display, if the predictions of its competitors and the members of the committee are true. The Gamewell company, beginning forty years ago with patented systems, has enjoyed something of a monopoly in American cities, and there is scarcely one of any importance that has not employed its devices.

The present demand for competition is based because the Gamewell equipment is deemed inefficient or obsolete, for it is not so pronounced by those opposing it, but they say the time has come for the city to obtain just as efficient equipment at much less cost. The Gamewell company declares it charges a uniform price to all cities, though this is to be disputed by the committee, which has collected much data from other places.

The real theory of the test is to open the doors to any concern that wishes to compete and demonstrate its system. Responding to specifications that admitted full competition the five leading companies of the world are here to bid and demonstrate.

The one causing most concern, outside of the Gamewell, is the Siemens-Halske Company of Berlin, a formidable competitor of the Gamewell abroad, and which has sent a complete exhibit. It is represented by Dr. Karl Georg Frank R. Bugler and E. Schumann.

The Gamewell company is represented by its San Francisco representative, A. J. Coffee, and has a full exhibit of all its boxes.

The Star Electric Company, controlled by the American District Telegraph Company, a Western Union subsidiary concern, also has a complete exhibit in charge of Morley and Jenney.

E. H. Mersch and his assistants are installing the equipment of the Signal-phone Alarm Company of Milwaukee. The American Signal Company of Pittsburgh is the one expected today.

One of the biggest competitors, the Cregier Signal System Company of Chicago, is represented by the littlest man in the person of N. Banks Cregier. He is the son of former Mayor Cregier of Chicago, and that city is now using his system in connection with its Gamewell system. It was the discovery of the ability to use the Cregier system as an extension of the Gamewell that led to the first steps for a general competitive test here.

The test requires the installation of a system with open wiring of not less than six boxes, non-interfering, and the test includes the liberty of the city making all the experiments it chooses to in determining the security of each Cross-circuiting and all other forms of possible injury to a system will be employed, and each must be prepared to demonstrate its safety.

The bids, which are to be received Tuesday, call for the complete installation of a central station, a switchboard and 100 boxes. This station is to be installed in the University district, and is to be made coöperative with the already established Gamewell system.

Interest in the demonstrations has aroused other Pacific Coast cities, and officials from them are expected to make the most of a visit during the week, as it is the first time all the companies have been brought together under one roof in a fight for supremacy. And this fight, it is contended, is against the long-established Gamewell company, which is accused of keeping its price—$125 per box—far in excess of what it should be considering that its patents are now of doubtful value, in the judgment of the Auditor and the committee.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

AIDS INVENTOR; NOW SUES HIM.

STRUGGLE WITH POVERTY IS EXPLAINED IN COURT.

Woman, Who Advanced Funds to Push Device, Now Asks for Decree That Title to Invention Is Held in Trust for Her—Alleged Agreement Is Denied.

The trials and tribulations of an inventor, struggling with poverty, were shown in a series of letters read in Judge Hutton's court yesterday. This was during a hearing of the action brought by Rosalind O. Butterfield against John T. Harris, to enjoin the defendant from disposing of what is known as the Harris Magneto Electrolytic Process for the treatment and purification of water and other liquids, and for a decree that Harris holds the title to the invention in trust for the plaintiff. The hearing occupied all of yesterday, but was concluded at the night session of the court. The decision was reserved.

The complaint alleged that in February, 1905, Harris, who was in need of funds, secured a patent on the above process. He had no money to support his family, and was unable to secure patents in foreign countries. He solicited the aid of the plaintiff, it is said, to furnish funds to meet his expenses and to advance the interests of his device. Between February, 1905, and September, of the same year the plaintiff advanced $1000 to allow Ha. is to acquire additional patents and to open an office in New York.

In September, 1905, she asserted, Harris entered into an agreement with her to assign all rights in the invention, and all rights to patents protecting its sale, except two United States patents, already assigned to the Magneto Electric Company and the Acme Holding Company, to her, and to sell her a one-fourth interest in the stock of the Acme Holding Company for $25,000.

Mrs. Butterfield, relying on the defendant's agreement, says she paid him $2000, under the impression that he had transferred his rights in the Acme corporation.

Between September, 1905, and January 1, 1907, the plaintiff says she paid Harris more than $10,000, which was applied to securing patents in foreign countries and pushing the business in the United States. Among the projects was the erection of a practical operating plant, with a capacity of 50,000 gallons daily, for the treating and deodorizing of sewage at Venice; a company was afterward organized to build such a plant with a capacity of 500,000 gallons a day at Santa Monica.

The defense was a general denial of the allegations of the plaintiff in so far as they related to the agreement to sell an interest in the patent to the complainant. It was not denied that certain advances had been made to Harris.

QUICK ACTION.

ON ALLEGED COVINA THIEF.

Under Sheriff Wright received word yesterday from Under Sheriff Claude Mathewson, at Oakland, that he had taken A. P. Diffenderfer into custody, just as the latter was entering one of the banks in that city to get a check cashed. This was also followed with the information that Mathewson would start south with his prisoner immediately. And thereby hangs a story showing how an industrious thief was quickly placed within the toils of the law.

On October 2 last, Diffenderfer stole four mules from the Mountain View ranch, Covina. At the same time two sets of harness disappeared. Diffenderfer lives at No. 914 Date street, this city. It is alleged that he came to Los Angeles, where he purchased a wagon of the Hawley-King Company, for $150, paying $20. At the time he sold he was working for an asphalt company.

The animals and wagon were driven to San Diego, and Under Sheriff Wright was soon on his track. On the Mission road he missed the fellow, but reaching San Diego, Wright learned that a contractor named Goodbody had recently purchased four mules that answered the description of the stolen stock. He went to Goodbody's place, and found the mules, and at the same time was informed that a man tallying with the appearance of Diffenderfer had sold the whole outfit for $1670. Part of the transaction was in money and part in a check on an Oakland bank. Diffenderfer saying that he was going North anyhow shortly and was willing to accept the paper.

Then Under Sheriff Mathewson was dispatched to Oakland, and the arrest of Diffenderfer just as he was about to receive the money on the check followed.

SWIFT AUTO RACE.

THEN A DAMAGE SUIT.

Jean Barneche entered suit in the Superior Court yesterday against C. A. Bennett and Dr. Warren Horton, to recover $5000, alleged to be due on account of injuries received on the road between Los Angeles and Palms, July 23 last, in a collision between a buggy, in which the plaintiff was riding and an auto driven by Bennett.

It is alleged that the accident to Barneche occurred during a mad auto race, in which three large machines were engaged. The occupant of the buggy was knocked down, his vehicle wrecked, and the injuries sustained were of a most serious character. It is asserted that as soon as Barneche was struck Bennett disappeared, and has not yet been located. Dr. Warren Horton, who is coupled with Bennett in the complaint, was sent by the latter, it is alleged, to care for the injured man, but he would not reveal the identity of Bennett. It is further said that when Horton called upon Barneche he tendered him $5 in full settlement of the claim, an offer that was indignantly rejected. It is the hope of the attorney filing the complaint to be able to secure some information in regard to the mysterious Bennett when the action comes for hearing.

APPEAL CASES.

HEARING POSTPONED.

In Judge Willis's court yesterday the case of R. W. Mattoon, charged with battery, July 5, and sentenced to thirty days in jail, appealed from the docket of Justice Chambers, went over for two weeks.

William Dunn of Glendora, charged by Mira L. Eckles with tearing down her fence, who was fined $150, and who filed an appeal from the court of Justice Glover of Azusa, will be heard on the 30th inst.

William W. Smith was fined $25 by Justice Williams, for a violation of the pure-food laws, and his case was transferred to Department Twelve, to be heard at the same time that nearly a dozen cases, appealed from Justice Long's court, will be settled.

The case of J. O. Roach, fined $50 by Justice Glover of Azusa, for building a fire before first securing a permit, was argued and submitted to the court.

The appeal of Willard Sharpless from the court of Justice Rose, where he was sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment on the charge of battery, F. F. Marcotti being the complaining witness, was continued until the 30th inst.

The same action was taken on an appeal from Justice Rose's court, by E. W. Myers, who, on June 27, was fined $100, or to stand committed for 100 days, for alleged violation of the liquor license ordinance.

SISTER GETS BROOCH.

ANOTHER SELLS THE WATCH.

Frank Patton, charged with burglarizing the residence of Nina McClintock, pleaded guilty in Judge Willis's court yesterday, and he filed a petition asking for his probation. The crime was committed in December, and the accused has been in jail ever since.

When asked what he had to say in his own behalf, Patton informed the court that he was employed in one of the department stores of the city just before the holidays. One evening, after work, he met another boy and neither of them had a cent, he said. They walked out into the Westlake district, and his companion said he must have money from some place. They came to a house and the other boy went inside, while he waited on the pavement for him to come out. In a short time he emerged with a lot of jewelry, and they then went to the Bimini Baths, where the loot was planted. A week later Patton said he went out to the place to see if the other fellow had taken the property away. He found that he had not, and he proceeded to appropriate a brooch and watch. He gave the brooch to his sister, he declared, and he sold the watch. The case was continued for a week.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporations were filed by the Investment Building Company, capital stock $200,000, incorporators Ralph M. Watson, Fred Baker, Victor B. Stewart, H. C. Gardette and George B. Watson, amount subscribed $16,000; Harvey Building Company, capital stock $15,000, incorporators J. T. Harvey, Louise A. HEIRS UNKNOWN. Frank Bryson, Public Administrator, filed a petition in the probate court yesterday, asking that he be appointed administrator of Thomas Bowe, who died at No. 1019 Slauson street, October 7. Bowe conducted a saloon at Phoenix, Ariz., and was the owner of eight houses and five lots in Pasadena. The petition recites that the estate is worth in excess of $10,000. The deceased was a member of the lodge of Elks of Phoenix, and his remains were buried here yesterday, by the local organization.

SUIT FOR MAINTENANCE. Louise Brunner of Alhambra brought an action in the Superior Court yesterday against Herman Brunner, for separate maintenance, and an allowance of $1000 a month for the support of herself and five children. She alleges that her husband has an income of about $2000 a month, and that since last June he has refused to contribute anything to her support. On several occasions he accused her of being unchaste, and treated her cruelly.

LING'S COURT. George Van Roosen and George Williams, charged with leaving a camp fire burning in the San Gabriel Cañon, were discharged on the statement of the boys that they had turned the fire over to three other lads at the time of its discovery.

HORSE-STEALING CHARGE. The examination of Ray Schofield, who was brought in from Covina to answer the charge of horse stealing, was set for Wednesday afternoon. It is alleged that Scofield took an animal belonging to J. E. Watkins, by whom he was employed, and that other horses have disappeared mysteriously from that vicinity recently.

WILL PROBATED. The will of Nancy Wyatt, aged 73, of Lordsburg, was offered for probate yesterday. It disposes of an estate valued at about $10,000. It is all bequeathed to James W. Wyatt, the husband, but, in case he does not survive the testator, the property is divided among children and grandchildren.

VERDICT FOR INJURIES. A jury in Judge Houser's court returned a verdict for $1000 yesterday afternoon, in favor of the plaintiff, in the action brought by Harry Stephens, against the Pacific Electric Company, to recover $2000 on account of injuries received at Compton, last January, while operating a grinder, that exploded, through the negligence of the defendant, it was alleged. Stephens was an employé of the company, and was engaged in grinding the rust from the rails at the time of the accident.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

STEALS TO AID HIS SICK WIFE.

STORY OF BURGLAR TOUCHES DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Culprit, Who Confessed to Entering House and Taking Money and Jewelry, Will Be Allowed to Plead to Charge of Petty Larceny—Light Punishment Is Sufficient.

For the sake of the sick wife, for whom W. M. Flemming of San Pedro committed burglary, Deputy District-Attorney McCormick tempered the severity of the law yesterday. Notwithstanding his confession that he is guilty of burglary, Flemming will get only the punishment imposed for petty larceny.

Flemming was arrested on a charge of having broken into the home of a Mrs. Parl, and having stolen some money, a watch and a ring set with a small diamond.

The police say he admitted the accusation, but averred that he had committed the crime to raise money with which to buy food and medicine for his sick wife. He repeated his story when taken before the attorney. McCormick was [illegible] extenuating circumstances of the case and thought that a light punishment would be sufficient.

Flemming will be arraigned in Police Court Monday on a charge of petty larceny.

WITHIN SPEED LIMIT.

RECKLESS DRIVING, ANYWAY.

"Jack" Lankershim, son of Col. J. B. Lankershim, charged $50 to his "automobile expenses" yesterday, when he was found guilty of reckless driving. The millionaire's son paid the fine in a matter-of-course manner and left the courtroom with Attorney John W. Mitchell, who had defended him.

Young Lankershim was charged with having cut around the corner of First street and Boyle avenue at a dangerous rate of speed. He declared he was well within the speed limit and consequently had committed no offense.

"A man may keep within the strict letter of the law in this respect and still may drive in such a reckless manner that he makes the streets dangerous to pedestrians," the justice told him before imposing sentence.

HORSES FEAST ON ROSES.

GARDEN OWNER COMPLAINS.

Objecting to a neighbor's horses making a pasture of his rose garden, George J. McGrath, No. 947 King street, called on the Prosecuting Attorney yesterday to seek relief.

According to McGrath's story, the horses, which belong to Fred Kohler, have a fondness for roaming in his yard. He says they paid him a visit two weeks ago, and, as a result, his flower garden was seriously damaged. The owner of the animals made reparation. Friday night the horses again indulged in a feast of rose petals and petunias.

The case was taken under consideration. If Kohler will give the attorneys assurance that there will not be a repetition of the depredation, it is likely that no complaint will be issued.

Jumps Board Bill.

Pete Sentous neglected to pay his bill, when he surreptitiously left his boarding-house, and for his oversight was fined $30 by Justice Rose yesterday. He did not have enough money to pay the fine and was sent to the workhouse for a month.

MYSTERY.

BROTHER FAILS TO CLAIM BODY.

STARTED FROM MARYLAND WITH SEVERAL HUNDRED DOLLARS.

Wife There and Friends Here Have Kept Telegraph Wire Hot With Messages, But no Trace Has Been Found—Well-to-Do Mining Man Is Buried Here.

What has happened to John Bowe of Krellin, Md., who left his home ten days ago, to attend the funeral services over his brother, Thomas Bowe, which were held yesterday afternoon at the parlors of the Sutch company, under the auspices of the local lodge of Elks?

Thomas Bowe, well known in mining circles, who had resided in Los Angeles during the last seven years, and was considered well off, died on the morning of the 6th inst., at his home, Central and Slauson avenues. Dr. W. Duffield, who was a personal friend of the deceased, and had attended him in his sickness—gangrene of the lungs—immediately notified the brother in Maryland. He received a telegram the same day, stating that John Bowe had left Krellin for Los Angeles.

When five days had elapsed and he failed to put in his appearance, and no further word was received from Mr. Bowe, Dr. Duffield telegraphed again to Krellin. Mrs. Bowe, in reply, stated that her husband had left on the 6th inst., and that he should be in Los Angeles. Careful inquiry at the large hotels failed to reveal his presence here.

Each day, Dr. Duffield sent a message, inquiring of Mrs. Bowe for word of her husband, but none came. Finally, it was decided to hold the funeral services, and the Elks and members of the Jefferson Club took charge of the arrangements. The body was placed in the vault at Rosedale Cemetery, after short services at the funeral parlors, and Dr. Duffield proceeded to notify the Los Angeles police department of the strange disappearance of the brother.

From a telegram by Mrs. Bowe in Maryland, it was learned that her husband had carried several hundred dollars with him on the trip, expecting to pay any special expenses which might arise after reaching here. No description of the missing man has as yet been obtained, and, as a result, it will be hard to locate him.

Thomas Bowe, for many years was proprietor of the Ford Hotel saloon in Phoenix, Ariz. He owned a number of houses and vacant property in this city, eight houses and five lots in Pasadena, property in Phoenix and some mining stock. A rough estimate, by some of those who knew the deceased, places his estate at about $50,000, with some incumbrances.

He was married, but since coming to Los Angeles, had been divorced. His wife soon after these proceedings, was married again, and her present name or whereabouts are not known here. Frank Bryson, Public Administrator, has taken charge of the estate until the brother is located.

Why Do Men DRINK?

When you stop to think of the terrible results which come to men who indulge to excess in intoxicating beverages, well may you ask, Why do men drink? The fact simply stated is "A victim of the Drink Habit can no more resist liquor than a man with ague can stop shivering." Drunkenness is a disease and must be treated as such. The wives and mothers of those who drink intoxicants will be glad to know there is a remedy which will restore their loved ones to lives of sobriety and usefulness. Many thousands of grateful women praise Orrine for its benefits. Orrine has been known to effect a cure after all other means failed.

Paxson & Rockefeller, 24 West Park St., Butte, Mont., tell about a case of drunkenness of 25 years' standing. Read what they say: "A gentleman well known to us, who has been a hard drinker for twenty-five years, stated he had been entirely cured by Orrine. We consider this a remarkable case, as this gentleman has been treated three different times at a well-known sanatorium. This and other cases that have come to our knowledge gives us confidence in your preparation, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it to those needing a reliable cure for intemperance."

Orrine is prepared in two forms. No. 1, a powder, [illegible] tasteless and colorless, given secretly in food or drink. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to cure themselves. Orrine costs only $1 a box. The guarantee is in each box. Write for Free Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to Orrine Co., 919 Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. Orrine is for sale in this city by The Owl Drug Co., 329 So. Spring St., Fifth and Broadway; 635 S. Broadway.

They know Orrine is a reliable and efficacious remedy for drunkenness and they will not offer you a substitute.

Royal Wilton Rugs

Most Beautiful and Serviceable of All Floor Coverings

If you have in mind a new rug for your living room, dining-room, hall, den or bedroom, our conscientious recommendation would be to buy a "Royal Wilton." For artistic beauty of design and color, and excellence of wearing qualities—we know of no rugs to surpass them. They are woven, from specially selected worsted, by a process which insures a close, firm, heavy, solid fabric—that will outwear any ordinary rug. The yarns and dyes are imported from Persia and are similar in character to those used in the finest Persian Kirmanshah rugs.

But the marvel of these rugs is the ingenious blending of the rich hues—and the individuality of the beautiful designs—many of them truly Oriental in inspiration.

Our selection of these Royal Wiltons is the most extensive anywhere west of Chicago. Many beautiful soft color effects in browns, greens and self toned blues are shown for the living room—and exact reproductions of the famous hand-made Persian Sarouks for the dining room and library—and dainty chintz effects in ivory, rose, blue and other dainty tones for the bedroom. They come in a wide range of sizes, from the small rug at $3.50, up to the large room sizes at $35.00, $50.00, $55.00 and so on.

We invite you to come and see them—and do not feel that coming will obligate you to buy. We want you to know how beautiful these rugs are—and we want you to satisfy yourself that our values are unsurpassed in Los Angeles.

We're Selling Out

A Wholesale Jewelry Stock

Under Wholesale Prices

Single handed—the Geneva bought the $200,000.00 stock of the J. P. Trafton Company—the well-known pioneer wholesale jewelers of Southern California. The price we paid was low—so low, in fact, that we can now turn around and sell this stock to the retail public—at the very price the J. P. Trafton Company paid the manufacturers for the goods—which prices are, in most instances, 25 to 30 per cent. less than jewelers would ordinarily pay wholesale for the goods. It goes without saying that this is a very rare buying opportunity. It is unquestionably the biggest bona fide sale of high-grade jewelry ever known in the West.

SHORT CROP OPENS NEW ORANGE AND LEMON SEASON.

Early Estimates Indicate Falling Off from Normal Output—Big Decrease from Bumper Yield of Year Just Closing, But Quality and Size Promise Better Prices—Twenty-two Millions for Growers.

FROM a bumper crop of approximately 38,000 cars for the season just closing, the Southern California output of oranges and lemons apparently will drop to a trifle less than 30,000 cars for the season 1909-10. Careful estimates by experts indicate that the crop for the season about to open will be from 15 to 30 per cent. below the normal, which is placed at 35,000 cars. The extremely hot weather of several days last summer in various parts of the citrus belt caused the slump, great quantities of fruit falling from the trees.

While the coming yield apparently will be much smaller than for the season which will end on the 31st inst., the net returns probably will be fully as great to the growers. The fruit promises to be of better size and quality, and it is not at all certain that the present estimates are correct. Made when the fruit is green and hard to see on the trees, the guess as to the output is too low rather than too high.

Interesting and fairly accurate figures on the crop returns of the season 1908-1909 now are available, the shipments for the last half of October being estimated. The following statement tells the tale:

Carloads of oranges shipped	31,900
Carloads of lemons shipped	6,100
Total carloads of citrus fruits	38,000
Gross returns to orange shippers	$18,374,400
Gross returns to lemon shippers	3,952,800
Gross returns on citrus fruits	22,327,200

In every section of the citrus belt the reports are that the crop for the season 1909-10 will be much smaller than that of 1908-09, which was the greatest in the history of the industry, though it is believed that smaller crops in previous years have brought larger net returns to the growers.

Some of the principal growers, and others who are accustomed to the making of estimates at the opening of each season, express the opinion that the green fruit now on the trees will develop into a yield that will approximate from 75 to 85 per cent. of a normal crop.

A few think that, because of the larger size of the oranges and lemons, the total shipment by boxes and carloads will reach almost the normal of 35,000 carloads. This is an optimistic view, however, and is not generally shared.

The smaller crop in sight is due entirely to the extremely hot weather that prevailed at different periods throughout the summer in various parts of the citrus belt. The heat caused much small green fruit to fall, and there were fears for a time that the "spell of weather" would be very disastrous to the growers.

NEW FRUIT SHOWS WELL.

With the return of normal atmospheric conditions, however, the fruit left on the trees is showing up well, and another month or six weeks it will have colored to an extent that will assure a more accurate estimate of the yield.

There has been a considerable increase in the number of bearing trees, particularly in Tulare county, and many additional acres have been set to citrus fruits throughout the entire area. On the other hand, especially in Los Angeles county, there has been a constant encroachment of residence subdivisions. This has not been great enough, however, to offset the new citrus acreage, and large additions will be made to the ordinary crop this season because of the thousands of new trees just coming into bearing.

A new factor in the marketing situation comes into play with the new season. It is the organization of the Florida Orange Growers' Exchange, patterned after the successful California institution. Many Florida growers visited this State a few months ago, seeking pointers on methods of marketing their crops. As a result about one-half of this season's yield in the Southern State will be handled by the new exchange.

HELPS LOCAL GROWERS.

Local shippers look upon the Florida exchange as an aid to California growers. Though the Florida fruit is pretty well out of the way before large shipments are started from California, there always has been more or less demoralization of the eastern market because of the hit-and-miss manner in which the southern fruit was handled. Hereafter there will be an intelligent handling of at least one-half of Florida's output and the markets will not be glutted as often as has been the case in the past.

It has been estimated that Florida's citrus yield for the season just opening will be 7,000,000 boxes, of which a large proportion will be grape fruit. This is a total of about 16,000 cars, of which maybe 6000 cars will be grape fruit and 12,000 cars oranges, as compared with approximately 32,000 cars of oranges from California for the coming season. Florida ships no lemons. Reports from Florida in the last few days are that the recent hurricane ruined from 25 to 50 per cent. of the orange crop.

Of the California crop, the Fruit Growers' Exchange now handles approximately 60 per cent., a steady increase from about 33 per cent. ten years ago. Of the 24,000 cars shipped in the past season, the exchange handled 25,000, practically controlling the market and giving the growers the benefit.

SWATS LEMON INDUSTRY.

Because of the apparent intent of the railroads to increase the freight on lemons there has come a check to what at first bid fair to become a boom in that industry, following the action of Congress in advancing the tariff on that fruit one-half cent a pound. The freight rate on lemons to Minnesota, the Dakotas and Manitoba already has been advanced 15 cents on each 100 pounds, and, though the necessary notice of an advance in rates to other points has not yet been made, the fear of it has prevented the conversion of thousands of acres of suitable land into lemon groves.

This advance of 15 per cent. in the freight rate on lemons will eat up a good share of the benefit that was expected from the addition of one-half cent a pound to the duty on lemons from Sicily. Under old conditions, Sicilian lemons were placed on the New York market at a cost of $1.84 a box, while the California lemon reached the same market at a total cost, counting value of fruit, of $2.23—a difference of 39 cents a box in favor of the foreign grower.

The increased tariff reduced the advantage of the foreign grower to but 6 cents—which could have been overcome by the California fruit because of its superior quality.

But the increase of 15 per cent. in freight rates will increase the cost of the California lemon on the New York market to $2.45 a box, as against $2.26 a box for the Sicilian fruit—thus giving the foreigner an advantage of 19 cents a box. Better than old conditions, but not enough better to induce the planting of several thousand acres more to lemons in this, the only section in the world, except Italy, in which the fruit may be grown successfully.

EXPECTATIONS DASHED.

Though the season rapidly approaching its end was a record-breaker in the matter of carloads of citrus fruits shipped, the returns have not been as satisfactory as they promised to be at the opening. Had the prices which prevailed at the outset continued through the season, growers would have been rolling in wealth.

Oranges shipped in December, 1908, when the first big movement for the season was made, brought local growers about $1.53 f.o.b. cars, California. In December, 1907, the return was $1.40 a box. In January, 1908, the return was about $1.60 a box, as against $1.50 the year before. In March of both years the returns were about the same.

After that the balance turns in favor of the year 1908, when much higher prices were received for late fruit than in the same months of the present year. In June, 1908, the average return on oranges was $2 a box; this year it was less than $1.50 in June.

Shippers who moved their crops early this season received the best returns, while those who held on for higher prices, as they had done in previous years, were forced to take what they could get. This ate desperately into the total returns for the season. The shippers who before had got the best of it got the worst, and vice versa. The late crop of the past season was not of a quality to command high prices. Even the Valencias, which usually have taken the gilt edge of the into market, were not as good as in former years, and there also was a deterioration in the quality of lemons.

SEASON'S AVERAGE RETURNS.

It is said that the average return to the grower on the season's crop will be close to $1.50 a box on oranges and $2 a box on lemons. Out of these returns the grower pays all charges up to the time the fruit leaves on the trains for the East—interest on investment, cost of water, labor in irrigating, fertilizing, picking, packing and the like. Just how much is left to the grower after going through this mill is something that he alone can state.

There have been exceptional cases, of course, where fancy returns have been received by growers in favored sections, or who have taken particular pains with their fruit. There have been other instances—very few—where the grower has found himself "holding the sack," an empty sack.

However, the figures show that more than $22,000,000 will have come into Southern California by the close of the season, which is a pretty good stimulus for the circulation.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY.

FOURTH TO HALF DECREASE.

The Los Angeles county orange crop for the season, 1909-10 will be from 25 to 50 per cent. short of last year. Some orchards will have nearly a full crop, while many others will have less than half a yield. Navels will fare better than Valencias.

The cause for this great shortage was the excessive heat about the middle of June.

While the crop will be short in quantity reports show that the quality will be the finest ever known in Southern California.

A conservative estimate from Pomona, Covina and Azusa shows that these districts will have about 75 per cent. of last year's crop. Pasadena, Monrovia and other districts show a much greater percentage of shortage.

The general condition of orchards is excellent.

The accompanying reports from various parts of the county tell the tale in more detail.

DUARTE-MONROVIA.

The orange output of the Duarte-Monrovia district in 1909-10 is conservatively estimated at 525 cars. The crop will exceed the average but will be 30 per cent. below that of last year, when 750 carloads were shipped. Loss from "splits" will be slight. Fruit is of fine appearance, smooth and clean, but runs large. Weather conditions favoring uninterrupted growth may increase the present estimated yield by 15 or 20 per cent. Many growers, considering the size factor, estimate the crop at 600 carloads. Exchange shipments are placed at from 400 to 425 cars, as compared with 690 this past season.

The percentage of decrease in yield in comparison with last season's crop is practically the same in all varieties. Unless fruit matures with unprecedented rapidity and cannot be held, local shipping in any amount will not begin until after New Year's Day, when eastern markets will be clear of Florida oranges. Shipping late and prolonging the season has been the local practice since the Florida output became adequate for the fall and holiday trade.

The district has reached its maximum citrus development and the fifty acres of trees coming into bearing about offset the loss through subdivision in Monrovia.

GLENDORA.

With the advance of the season the prospect for a fairly good orange crop is improving. Experienced growers of the Glendora district now estimate navels at 75 per cent. of the crop of last year, and the Valencias at 90 per cent. The fruit is a little larger than it was at this time last year, due to the lighter yield. From appearances it will color a little earlier than that of the past season. Trees are in fine condition, owing to careful cultivation and systematic care. In size, texture and quality it is believed the fruit will be exceptionally fine.

There are about 300 acres of young trees in the Glendora district, of which 150 acres are from 4 to 6 years old and just coming into bearing. This will increase the total yield considerably. The groves of the district are in five, ten, twenty and forty-acre tracts, held and occupied by individual owners, who have built and are building modern residences.

Because of the increased acreage and yield, the growers of the district have decided that two packing-houses are required to handle the future crop satisfactorily.

SIERRA MADRE.

F. R. Yerxa, one of the largest orange producers here, states that his crop will be larger and better than ever before, because of special care and fertilizing. The crop will be later than last season. Considerable damage was done by the intense hot spell in the early summer.

L. Dietz, another grower, says the crop will be very light, but in most places the fruit will be of good size. The crop will not be earlier than last season's.

J. L. Stevenson, manager of Waldo Ward's extensive orchards, says he expects about half a crop as compared with last season. The heavy hot spell on Decoration Day knocked out many of the oranges. Those on the trees are showing up large, and are developing in a better shape than last year. There is an earlier showing of color.

Carl Pegler reports a much smaller crop, but apparently of better size and coloring. They are ripening very slowly.

About 15 per cent. of the orange-producing belt in this section has been cut up for subdivisions.

CLAREMONT.

The orange growers of this district look forward to the best season in the history of the industry. Fumigation throughout the orchards has been uniform and groves are in healthy conditions. While a few isolated orchards have smaller crops than last year, the majority of the groves are heavily laden with fruit. Last year 650 carloads of oranges were shipped from Claremont. This year, with about one hundred acres of young orchard coming into bearing, the output will be in the neighborhood of 700 cars.

Since last year this district has been divided. The College Heights Orange Association has been incorporated, consisting of all the groves north of the Santa Fé tracks. It will ship under the "Athlete" and "Basketball" brands. All oranges grown south of the Santa Fé line will be shipped by the Claremont Citrus Association, as before.

SAN DIMAS-LA VERNE.

Orchardists of San Dimas and La Verne report large crops for the coming season, and it is anticipated that the packing-houses here will be rushed to their limit. The crop never looked better nor cleaner.

The San Dimas Lemon Association has built a new packing-house, in which 125 carloads of lemons can be stored at one time. This is declared to be the largest lemon packing-house in the world, and its output has an international reputation.

La Verne orange growers have formed a new exchange and have built a packing-house at Lordsburg, from which place they will ship.

During the coming season 540 cars of oranges will be shipped from San Dimas, and 300 cars of oranges from Lordsburg, while 700 cars of lemons will be shipped from San Dimas.

COVINA.

This year's orange crop in the Covina district will be normal, though, on account of the heavy drop during the heat wave in May, the shipments will fall short 20 per cent. of the past season, which aggregated 1655 cars. In sizes the fruit now on the trees will run medium to large; small sizes will be at a premium. Indications are that a large percentage of the fruit will run fancy and choice grades. The crop is slow in maturing and only a small percentage will be fit to move for the holiday trade. General shipments will not start until January 1. In the last two or three years there has been a large planting to Valencias; these young trees are carrying their first crop this season. However, this increase will be more than overcome by the loss from navel groves which have been subdivided for suburban homes.

POMONA.

From present indications, prominent orange growers of Pomona believe that the crop in this locality will be from 25 to 30 per cent. less than last year—or about the same as it was two years ago, last year's output having been above the average. The crop appears to be in splendid condition and the quality of the fruit will be excellent. most of the groves having been well watered and cared for through the summer. In numerous orchards the fruit seems unusually large for this time of year and there will probably be the average amount ready for holiday shipment. Little color is showing now except in the foothill locality north of here. There is, however, abundant chance for a change in condition before December 1, when the Pomona Fruit Growers' Exchange plans to reopen its large packing-house for the beginning of the season's pack.

Some orange producing territory here has been diverted by the invasion of residence subdivisions. The large Ganesha Park tract has extended streets and avenues through eighty acres of orange groves in the northwest part of the city and south of Ganesha Park. Kenoak and Alvarado Court and the Navilla tract subdivisions occupy over thirty acres more of former orange groves, but young groves planted on lands north of here during the past three or four years more than make up for the loss of acreage from the encroachment of homes. The North Monte Vista tract of 400 acres northwest of here is on the market for planting to small groves, sixty acres having already been set out the past summer.

DOWNEY.

It is estimated that the orange crop of this locality compared with last year, will fall short at least 40 per cent. The quality of the fruit, however, is good, is large in size and will ripen about Christmas, no earlier than last season. There will be no increase in bearing trees, but a large acreage has been set to oranges during the last year. No orange producing territory has been diverted by reason of subdivisions.

GLENDALE.

The orange crop for this district is estimated at about 250 to 275 cars. The yield is somewhat lighter than that of last year, which was exceptionally heavy. Some of the growers report that the crop would have been larger but for the hot weather which prevailed while the fruit was setting, causing much of it to fall. The fruit is running somewhat larger than last year and the quality is fine, being equal if not superior to that of former years. Oranges in this vicinity will probably not ripen in time for the holiday trade, the first ripe fruit being expected about January 1, the usual date. The area devoted to orange growing remains about the same as last year. Two or three small young orchards have come into bearing while none of the old ones have been subdivided.

RIVERSIDE COUNTY.

THREE-FOURTHS OF NORMAL.

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 16.—From present indications, the orange crop in the Riverside district, including also Highgrove, West Riverside and Arlington, will be approximately 4500 carloads the coming season. This is about 25 per cent. short of the past season's output.

The hot weather early in June, when the baby oranges were at their critical stage, caused heavy dropping of the young fruit, which accounts for the shortage. This was particularly the case in the old groves, some of which will not have more than half a crop.

Whether the fruit will be early or late will depend upon weather conditions later. At present the crop is about normal in point of advancement. There will be very little fruit for holiday shipment. October estimates necessarily are largely guesswork. If the oranges grow to abnormal size before they ripen, the crop may be as large as last year. If, on the other hand, they stop growing soon, there will be a shortage variously estimated at from 15 to 30 per cent. Orange and lemon shipments the past season amounted to 6000 carloads.

In the neighborhood of 250 acres of new orange groves will come into bearing in Riverside county this year. The crop on these trees will partially offset the shortage in the older groves. About 120 acres of young lemon groves are coming into bearing. Though there has been much building of new homes in the past year, these have not encroached upon the orange producing territory to any appraciable extent.

Navels will be large this year. The quality may not be quite so good as when the oranges run to smaller sizes, but it is too early to predict with any certainty as to this point, and fruit men look for an excellent grade of fruit.

In the Arlington Heights district, the orange crop will probably be as large as last year, in the opinion of James Mills, manager of the Arlington Heights Fruit Company. This section comprises 5000 acres of orange and lemon groves. The orchards look exceptionally well and from present appearances the crop will equal that of last year, which amounted to about 2300 carloads. Though the crop on the older trees will fall below the normal yield here, as elsewhere, the young groves will materially assist in keeping up the average.

The outlook for the Arlington Heights lemon crop is as good as last year, if not better. This district has 400 acres of matured lemon groves, 175 acres of young lemon groves and about 400 acres of yearling groves. A fine crop is maturing for picking this month and in November and December. In the neighborhood of 600 cars of lemons will be shipped the coming season by the Arlington Heights Fruit Company.

It is estimated that the coming orange crop at Hemet will be about seventy-five carloads. This is practically the same as last year's output. The crop on the older trees is below the average, but this is offset by new orchards coming into bearing. The young trees have all the fruit they should bear, and the quality is excellent.

The Moreno orange district will have about fifty cars of fruit for shipment. This is about 25 per cent. below last year's total. In point of quality the crop has never been equaled, the improvement being due to the increased water supply developed in the past year and to the better care given the orchards.

Fifteen-hundred carloads of oranges and lemons were shipped from Corona during the season of 1908-09. Ninety per cent. of this amount is the estimated yield for the season of 1909-10, that fruit shows up well as to quality, but is large in size for this season of the year, indicating that under proper climatic conditions it will color later than usual. Oranges were fairly colored by November 1 last year, but as yet everything is green. Heat will delay coloring but a change to cold, dry weather would hasten the process of ripening.

Eight-hundred acres of oranges and lemons are coming into bearing in the colony. About forty acres of citrus trees near or bordering on the boulevard have been removed for subdivisions and the erection of homes, only a portion of these tracts having been cleared of trees during the present year.

SAN BERNARDINO COUNTY.

TWO-THIRDS OF AVERAGE.

REDLANDS, Oct. 16.—The orange season for 1909-10 in Redlands will open about December 1, for a run of a week or ten days, to supply the holiday trade; then again early in February, when shipping will begin in real earnest and continue until the last of the golden globules are safely started on their eastern journey.

It is expected that this season's crop will be about two-thirds of an average. The three scorching days at the last of May and the first of June caused the dropping off of the other third of a crop which would have no doubt been a "bumper." The fruit remaining on the trees was so small that it was uninjured and as a result of the "thinning" the fruit is unusually large and fine. In fact, the oranges are so large that they will command high prices, thus making them hard to retail. But to the grower of large fruit is quite as profitable as smaller. Probably 100 or 150 cars of fruit will be shipped from Redlands for the holiday trade.

The condition of the trees in this section was never better; they have been well fertilized and well irrigated and the weather has been ideal for growth. About 500 acres of young trees will come into bearing this season. Not many trees have been planted the past year as nearly all available land heretofore has already been planted to either citrus or deciduous fruits. More groves have changed hands this past summer and at higher prices than ever before in the history of this section.

UPLAND.

Shipments of the O. K. Fruit Exchange, which controls about 85 per cent. of the local citrus output, amounted to 2112 cars of oranges and lemons during the past season. This is an increase of 23 per cent. over the preceding season. Conservative estimates place the forthcoming crop at about 75 per cent. of that of 1908-09, or a probable total of oranges, excluding lemons, of 2000 cars. The quality of the new crop will be excellent, though it indicates a running by the progress of home buildings to larger sizes than did last season's output. A considerable acreage of new fruit is coming into bearing, especially in Valencias, but no very perceptable encroachment upon the groves is noted

RIALTO.

During the past season 1100 cars of oranges were shipped from here. The output for the coming season is estimated to be fully as large. This year's navel crop will be about 50 per cent. below that of last. The decrease in yield is due to the hot winds in May, which caused the fruit to drop, but it is thought this deficiency will be fully made up by the quality of the fruit and the increase in the crop of sweets and Valencias. Packing-house men estimate as heavy shipments this year as last. The fruit is finer, larger, better matured, and will be earlier than last season's crop. About 10 per cent. of the young groves will come into bearing this year. Groves that were budded two seasons ago will yield from five to seven boxes per tree.

COLTON.

The orange crop of the coming season for Colton and vicinity is estimated at about 85 per cent. of the output of 1908-09. The outlook is that the fruit will be much larger and of finer quality than for several years. The oranges, apparently will ripen at about the same time as last year, the navels about November, Valencias in August or September, and Mediterranean Sweets in February. The navel yield will be light, the sweets and Valencias medium, and St. Michaels and bloods heavy. Numerous young groves have come into bearing, and there has been a steady growth in the acreage to oranges.

ORANGE COUNTY.

UP TO LAST SEASON.

SANTA ANA, Oct. 16.—The orange crop for the coming season for the Santa Ana, Tustin, Orange, El Modena and Villa Park districts will probably be close to 1700 carloads. The output will be about the same as last season.

The number of oranges per tree will be probably 25 per cent. under that of last year. The fruit, however, is much larger than a year ago, the oranges making up somewhat in size their deficiency in numbers. Another factor that will help to bring the 1909-10 crop up to last year is that there is 15 to 20 per cent. more bearing trees than a year ago. According to the figures of the Assessor, Orange county last year had 628,800 bearing orange trees. This year the statement shows 725,000 in bearing. The various local districts have their proportion of new orchards.

While last year's crop was the largest this vicinity has ever had, the fruit was so small that shipments could not be made early. Shipments will commence earlier this year, for the reason that the ripening fruit is of good average size. Some oranges will get away for Thanksgiving, and in December the shipping will be brisk.

FULLERTON.

The coming orange crop in the Fullerton-Placentia district will be from 25 to 30 per cent. shorter than the output of the season now closing. All varieties are short, but the greatest defiency is reported in sweets. The fruit, all varieties, will be larger in sizes than the past season and the oranges are about as ripe as they were at this time last year. Some new groves in this district are beginning to bear, but not enough to increase the local output to any great extent. For the season now closing 1800 carloads of oranges were shipped from the Fullerton-Placentia district.

ANAHEIM.

The new crop of oranges in the Anaheim district, it is estimated, will be 20 per cent. below that of the season of 1908-09, and, according to reports from a reliable source it is not believed the local output for the coming season will run more than 150 carloads. The quality is good, better, in fact, than it has been for some time. Sizes will run large in all varieties. The fruit is no earlier than it was a year ago. Some new groves are beginning to bear in this district, which will increase the output a few carloads. The coming crop will be just about as large as it was two years ago. For the season now closing Anaheim shipped 225 carloads of oranges.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

BETTER THAN LAST SEASON.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 16.—San Diego county's orange crop for the year 1909-10 is estimated at 115,000 boxes. Last year's yield was 107,350, showing an increase of 7650 boxes for the coming season. The fruit this year bids fair to be above the average in size and quality for the reason that County Horticultural Commissioner Stuart has started a crusade against pests in citrus orchards. The Supervisors provided for him a complete spraying outfit and good work is being accomplished toward improving the quality of all citrus fruits in the county. Oranges this year will ripen in February, the usual time.

By reason of the influx of settlers many large tracts of virgin land are being converted into citrus groves. The Horticultural Commissioner finds that 100 new orange orchards will bear for the first time this season. While a few of the old groves have been cut up in the progress of home building the greater part of this class of improvement affects lemon orchards. About 300 acres of oranges have been discarded for homesites. These, however, were located on poor soil. The principal orange growing sections of San Diego county are National City, Chula Vista, El Cajon Valley and the vicinity of Escondido.

The county's principal citrus product is the lemon. This year's output will be 430,000 boxes, against 370,000 last year. On account of activity on the part of Horticultural Commissioner Stuart the acreage is enlarged and the quality of the lemons is greatly proved this year.

VENTURA COUNTY.

CROPS LIGHTLY SMALLER.

VENTURA, Oct. 16.—Ventura county will send to market perhaps a little less than 500 carloads of oranges for the season of 1909-10. This figure is based upon conservative estimates made by experts in the three sections of the county where oranges are grown most extensively. These three sections—Santa Paula, Fillmore and the Ojai—all report a slight falling off from the yield of last year, upon navels especially.

In the Fillmore section, where most of the oranges are grown, there will be about 75 per cent. of the normal crop. Navels will be ready to begin shipment on December 15, about the same time as last year. There has been no contraction of the field from any cause, and little addition to the orchard area is reported. There will be about half a crop of lemons from the Fillmore field.

The yield for the Santa Paula field will be perhaps 30,000 boxes, or a trifle less than last year. There has been some dropping of navels, but shipments will begin at about the usual time. The acreage in the Santa Paula field has not changed.

The Ojai crop is estimated at 85 per cent. of last year's output. Many young orchards are coming into bearing, and these will yield more heavily than last year, but old trees are hot doing so well, this fact, ripening will be somewhat later, but the quality of fruit will be superior to that of last year and in some orchards fruit of an extraordinary size and flavor is reported.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY.

ABOUT SAME AS LAST SEASON.

SANTA BARBARA, Oct. 16.—"Normal," covers the citrus fruit crop of the year in Santa Barbara county. When the words "citrus fruit" are used hereabouts they mean lemons, for it is hardly too much to say that only enough oranges are raised in this county to supply the local demand. Only a few oranges are sent out. A thousand boxes of navels, all of which have been picked, and 2500 to 3000 boxes of seedlings, many of which are still on the trees, will be the limit of the season 1908-09. Between 250 and 300 carloads of lemons will have been shipped from here during the season just closing.

In size and condition the crop of 1909-10 will be about the same as that of 1908-9. In the last two years about fifty acres have been set to lemons.

KERN COUNTY.

LITTLE MORE THAN HALF.

WATER HAUL.

Steamer to Serve the Mines and Towns Along the Colorado River.

Water transportation is to be established on the Colorado River, between Parker and Calzona by T. M. Drennan of Calzona and Messrs. Murphy and Walsh of the Blythe Ranch Company, who have bought the Quartz King Mining Company's steamer Iola, and will operate it for both passengers and freight.

The Blythe Ranch Company, with the Riverside County Supervisors' assistance, is building a fine automobile road from Blythe, north along the river bank, through the Riverside mountains to Calzona, with branch highways to the Newman and Strauss, McKissen, Rapynca and other mines of the Riverside mountains, to be built by these companies, all of which will make Calzona their shipping point.

Twelve thousand of the 40,000 acres in the Blythe Valley have been sold and actually settled. In the Blythe and Palo Verde valleys several thousand people are today engaged in farming and stock raising. John Sanborn has been appointed postmaster at Calzona and postal service is expected in a few weeks. Plans are being discussed to induce the Santa Fé to build a branch railroad down the river through these two valleys, with Calzona as the junction point. While grades are a little heavier on this route than farther west, the mileage is less and such a line will tap a number of mines, and go through the entire valleys.

Strength of a Hair.

A human hair of average thickness can support a load of six and one-quarter ounces, and the average number of hairs on the head is about 30,000. A woman's long hair has a total tensile strength of more than five tons, and this strength can be increased one-third by twisting the hair. The ancients made practical use of the strength of human hair. The cords of the Roman catapults were made of the hair of slaves, and it is recorded that the free women of Carthage offered their luxuriant tresses for the same use when their city was besieged by the Romans.—(Philadelphia Record.

MINES AND MINING—Activities in the Ore Districts of the Southwest

GOLDFIELD.

IMAGINATION HARD TAXED.

Wonders of Clermont Such That Some Doubt.

Shipments to Smelter May Be Necessary.

Must Mill Men Give Bonds for Honesty?

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 15.—Underground reports from the Clermont shaft state the huge ledge is showing greater enrichment every day and that some parts are plated with seams of solid gold. Such statements as have been recently made concerning the Consolidated are proving a severe strain upon the credulity of readers and investors but those who have been in that property are willing to believe everything that is said about its peerless riches. It is the recent development on the 800 level that is held responsible for the sudden advance of 60 cents in that stock in the middle of the week.

From the physical conditions of the Clermont it is certain that the ore shoot will be found in the thousand level. This will give the big vein access from three different levels and the only drawback is that the ore is so rich that it is likely to cause some difficulty in the mill, as it is impossible with this class of rock to keep the heads down to $25 or $30. This may lead to a resumption of shipments to the smelters. The Clermont is the most perfectly defined vein in the district and one that has shown increased values from the hour of entering until today. Beginning in the Mohawk, where it yielded rich ore, the vein continued to the point where it was tapped in the Clermont at different levels and finally opened from the 600 in better shape so far as settling firmly into place. At about this level the change in the Mohawk became noticeable, finally becoming complete when the pay shoot passed out of the dacite into the latite. In this connection it might be well to mention the fact, recognized by every one familiar with the mining game from actual development of property, that once ore is encountered in a given formation, any change from that to another formation is regarded with suspicion and the continuation of the pay streak becomes somewhat dountful. On the other hand, if the pay streak continues in the new formation, the permanency of its values is held to be assured. In the case of the vein being opened on the Clermont this identical condition has been encountered. The latite came in at the 600 level and has continued to the 700 and thence to the 800 and is present at the 1000. After passing the 600 level the vein assumed a more perfect form and at this time below the 800 is as perfectly defined as a vein can be.

AFTER HIGH-GRADERS.

The revival of high-grading on the Consolidated will cause that company to enact more rigid conditions as an antecedent to employment at the mill and it is predicted that the men working there will be placed under heavy bonds to insure their honesty. The system of smuggling values from the concentrating tables was original and one that would have failed of detection if it had not been for the discovery of one of the men selling the concentrated concentrates that carry almost bullion value. With a spoon-shaped device attached to the table. The little stream of gold particles was diverted and allowed to drop into a small sack underneath the table. The fixture was so small that only the closest scrutiny could have revealed its application and the theft was so skilfully contrived that suspicion never attached to that section of the mill.

THE FLORENCE.

The Florence is perfecting a yard system that will enable cars of the Clark road and the Tidewater to be loaded directly at the door of the mine. Under the direction of Superintendent Lawrence the underground workings are being rapidly connected and the high-grade shoots in the vicinity of the old Engineers' lease is being blocked for early extraction. For the first time since the completion of the mill the plant is working to capacity without a single complaint.

Among the most interesting developments of the Florence is the discovery of new ore shoots on the fourth, or 200-foot level, both north and south of the shaft, the proven continuity of both of them above and below this level and other splendid developments in the seventh or 350-foot level. On the fourth level, in close proximity to the shaft and directly under the old Nixon-Wingfield stope, a new ore shoot, pitching strongly to the west and carrying in the neighborhood of $100 per ton, has been opened by a raise and a stope that was put in on a vertical ore body from the fifth level. This vertical ore body, which is highly impregnated with iron sulphides but carrying less value in gold, intercepted the other vein a few feet below the fourth level and opened a new and valuable asset in that portion of the mine.

OTHER DEVELOPMENT.

J. McCarthy has returned from New York, where he succeeded in financing the Silver Moon lease on the Mountain Queen of Lucky Boy, and is now assembling a plant, including hoist, compresser and engine, with the expectation of getting down to early action.

Operations on an extended scale are being inaugurated by the Oriole Mining Company, which was recently incorporated by Pennsylvania people, in the Gold Range district near Mina. President W. E. Ryan of Ridgway, Pa., states that a complete plant, consisting of a hoist, air compressor, air drills and a ten-stamp mill, has been ordered from Detroit, and should arrive in a short time. As soon as the hoist is installed the work of sinking to depth will begin, and operations will be on a large scale. In the meantime, underground work is going on, the ore being piled on the dump to wait the construction of the mill.

In the northern end of the county there is a promised revival of several copper locations that have not been worked since the depreciation of the red metal. W. H. Blackburn, superintendent of the Tonopah Mining Company, has started men on the Nevada Copper Company's estate, which at one time was known as the Dunlap, and is owned by the Tonopah Mining Company, which recently appropriated $20,000 to test its value. The system is to drive a tunnel to cut the immense ore bodies showing on the surface at depth. The tunnel is already in 1225 feet, and it is expected that 200 feet will bring the tunnel into the ore. Already large bodies of copper have been opened, but the company desires to prove the tonnage of possible production with a view to the erection of a 500-ton treating plant. The property is equipped with two gasoline engines, air compressor and accommodations for fifty men. Experts say that the tonnage in sight is fully 400,000.

TONOPAH.

HALF-MILLION DEAL PENDING.

RUMOR SAYS VALCALDA MAY BUY PITTSBURGH.

Former Company Said to Have Apex at Silver Peak, Thus Giving Strong Position to Bring About a Sale—Samuel Newhouse Is One of Valcalda Owners—Story's Effect.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TONOPAH (Nev.) Oct. 15.—Considerable discussoin has been aroused by the advance in the price of Pittsburgh Silver Peak during the past week. At first the improvement was ascribed to the settlement of the bullion tax suit that is pending against the corporation, but inquiry failed to substantiate that theory. Now it is believed that the Silver Peak Valcalda is at the bottom of the advance. This property is owned jointly by Sam Newhouse and W. P. O'Meara of Salt Lake, and of itself is a very desirable property that has kept ten stamps running for some time before Newhouse bought into the company. But better than the producing capacity is the allegation that it has the apex and extra lateral rights over the Pittsburgh Silver Peak that, with its 100-stamp mill has been the great producer of the district. The Valcalda owns fourteen claims, and it is rumored that both Newhouse and O'Meara are in Pittsburgh in conference with Senator Oliver and other directors of the Silver Peak Company. The price is not mentioned, but it is reliable stated that the figures call for something over $500,000.

On the Tonopah Mining Company's ground a fast pace was set during the week on all levels. In the Mixpah, Silver Top and Red Plume shafts extensive operations are being conducted, opening new ground and following new veins which were recently encountered in exploration work. In some cases the veins are small and will yield little tonnage, as compared with the older and more exetnsive workings, but in others the amount of ore extracted makes a respectable showing in the week's tonnage. The week's work, however, has disclosed the existence of several new leads which at the point of cutting show mill values. The regular production which is paying the dividends is going on steadily, and the 100 stamps are dropping full batteries on $21 ore. The bullion shipments for the week were $49,500, with an average saving of 92 per cent.

After working for weeks to get beyond the vein belt, the Belmont shaft finally reached the hard, dry andesite at a depth of 780 feet. As soon as the water is cleaned up sinking will be resumed to go to 1000 feet. A station is being cut under the Belmont shaft at 1000 feet from which a raise three-compartment wide shaft will be sent up, thus working on the shaft from both ends. When the connection is made the work of enlarging the upper portion of this shaft to three compartments will begin. When this is completed the Belmont will become the main shipping shaft, thus cutting considerably the cost of mining owing to much closer proximity to the ore bodies.

COMSTOCK LODE.

MEXICAN HAS MADE BIG STIR.

STRIKE HAS SENT MORIBUND STOCK UPWARD.

Riches at Twenty-three-Hundred-Foot Level Where Men Can Never Work Over Two Hours on Account of Heat—Big Values Are Needed to Make Operation Pay.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

VIRGINIA CITY (Nev.) Oct. 15.—The strike on the Mexican seems to have led to a revival of interest in the almost forgotten Comstock lode, and inquiries are heard from quarters where there was no demand for the stock one month ago. Reference to the quotations indicate that there must have been something doing when a moribund stock sails from $1.65 to $2.25 in forty-eight hours. It was reported at the outset that the Mexican had nothing better than $15 ore, which would not have allowed any margin in the case of a property at the depth of 2300 feet, especially when it is known that no man can work at that depth in the Comstock without being relieved every two hours. The heat is so intense on that level that miners stripped naked cannot endure the torments longer than the period specified. Ice plants and a liberal supply of the congealed moisture fail to afford the relief that human wants require when it comes to extracting the ore at that depth. In view of these physical circumstances it is well to note that the values have increased from the original estimate to as high as $65 per ton, which will afford a comfortable margin for the hoisting of ore from such a depth. The Mexican strike is the most important that has been made on the Virginia for years, and it is all overshadowing when it comes to the question of values.

Further developments bid fair to disclose another body of great magnitude and rich in values. Attention is called to the fact that the Mexican is finishing a station of the three-compartment winze on the 2000-foot level, and the winze is down 200 feet. But 100 feet remain to take it to the 2300 level, where the new strike has been made.

Superintendent Symmes's report today is of the kind that inspires the utmost confidence in the outlook. He states that the new drift is entirely of quartz, and the face averages $63.81. From the last round sixty-nine cars were saved, assaying $64.70 to the ton, which checks closely with the face assay. That the values are increasing with each round can be seen from the statement appended.

There have also been many important developments on the Ophir. The output has increased the past week, 322 cars being hoisted averaging $18.92 to the ton. The tonnage is nearly double that of last week, being due to more favorable conditions in the stopes. In the 2000-foot level a south drift has been started in the ore vein that was cut in drifting and, although the drift is only 13 feet twenty-six cars, assaying about $19, were saved. The vein is a promising one, and in a new territory. It is believed that a large quantity of ore will be uncovered as this drift advances.

In the Mexican a round was blasted out yesterday, advancing the drift four feet, with the face still in ore of practically the same value as of Thursday. This is very reassuring, for the drift is in approximately 16 feet, and in ore all the way. The drift will be continued along the present lines in the vein to determine the extent of the body. There is strong possibility that this ore deposit may reach dimensions greater than any encountered thus far on the levels above in Ophir and Consolidated Virginia. It has always been held by Comstock experts, based on experience that to get a large body an extensive area of vein matter must be present. In the Mexican it has been demonstrated by the west and east drift on the 2300 level, that the vein material is fully 200 feet wide, which makes the present outlook more than flattering for the big things ahead in this mine. All the Comstock superintendents have visited this mine, and they are unanimous in their opinions that it has been many years since the prospects were so good for the development of rich ore in large quantities.

Another new piece of work in the Ophir in the 2300 level is the starting of a south drift on the north line. This drift is a continuation of the vein now being opened on the Mexican, the sensation of the week, and it has been advanced six feet. There are strong reasons for concluding that Ophir will also uncover values in its ground from this vein, as the country is entirely new. The Ophir has resumed shipping ore to the Kincaid mill.

At the Caledonia the face of the south drift is in vein material. The face of the joint Confidence, Challenge and Imperial south drift continues to look promising, and is in clay and low-grade qaurtz. Overman has also a vein material in the west crosscut on the No. 3, at the 1200-foot level.

AT SEARCHLIGHT.

Crittenden Starts Work on New Year's Gift, Which He Leased.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT, Oct. 15.—A. W. Crittenden, president of the Crittenden Development Co., arrived yesterday from Los Angeles and at once started operations at the New Year's Gift, on which mine his company has a two-year lease. A hoist has been secured and is being set in place and housed.

Starting on the ore shoot from which Mr. Crittenden extracted $35,000 during his former lease, a winze will be sunk and at the same time the main shaft carried down. Later a level will connect the two, thus blocking the ore and making extraction easy and economical.

On the I. X. L., another vein of the Homestead system, and but a few hundred feet to the south of the Gift, the leasers, Messrs. Cook, Zook and Case, have, 154 feet in the tunnel, opened a six-foot face, which samples better than $50 between walls. These leasers have their first carload about ready to ship, and in addition have stored on the dump several tons of high-grade.

E. J. Knight proposes to furnish the smaller producers of the district with a market for their ores. He is arranging to bring up from Juniper Camp a small stamp mill and concentrator. The site has not been determined, but will be at one of the neighboring mines, where extra water is obtainable.

Following the late visit of special representatives of the Wharton estate, the announcement is made that the famous old Eldorado mines are to be operated on an extensive scale. The Techatticup is being surveyed underground, preparatory to actual developments.

BANNOCK BOOM.

Townsite May Prove the One Thing That Is Really on the Ground.

BATTLE MOUNTAIN (Nev.) Oct. 14.—The Bannock boom seems to have been the inspiration of a lot of townsite boomers. The camp, which has experienced all the throes of a legitimate mining rush, has not been able to produce the goods. All the pretensions of high-grade in unlimited quantities are buncombe, and the men who were deceived into venturing into the new country are lamenting their costs. It was stated that George Wingfield had sent Fred Siebert, his personal engineer, into the new country and it was hinted that he was going to the front for the new camp. This, it may stated, is unwarranted and Wingfield never essayed to enter the territory. Like all other mining camps, Wingfield sent a representative to the ground, but that did not imply that he was going to purchase anything in the district. According to the best estimates it seems as though the Bannock boom had vanished and that nothing more than a townsite proposition remained for the fools who ventured fair savings.

LUCKY BOY BETTER.

Camp Looks Superior to Any Time Since the Big Leaser Quit.

LUCKYBOY (Nev.) Oct. 15.—This camp is looking better than ever since the big leasing company shut down and brought about a suspension of shipments. The Hubbard is doing better than at any previous time in its history, but the character of the ore seems to be entirely new and is believed to come from a distinct shoot not developed by the former leasers. Shipments may begin next week with stuff that will run $100 per ton, by the carload. In the Broken Hills lease they are encountering high-grade and are taking out approximately 1100 sacks a day. A car from the lower levels of the property recently gave returns of $129 per ton. The Mitchell-Fairfield ground is showing up to good advantage and from a cross-cut driven from the 450 level they are taking ore that will run from 400 to 600 ounces in silver to the ton. From eleven to fifteen sacks of this ore is being opened and it is expected that with further work a body of sufficient proportion will be devolped to warrant carload lots within a comparatively short time. The 100-horse-power compressor has again started and the lease will be explored by the use of four power drills, while the Hubbard will operate four machines with air, supplied by it, and the McCormack will have the benefit of two.

JAWBONE CANON, Sept. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The inclosed sample is found at our mine (gold and silver,) in Jawbone Cañon. No one seems to know what it is. Would you kindly let me know through your "In the Earth," what it is and if it has any commercial value. Thanking you in advance, yours very truly,

Answer. The sample is polishing powder and is named at sub-heading. Owing to the many deposits of such powder, it is doubtful if a market can be had for it at a profitable rate, after mining, etc.

CALIFORNIA.

SHASTA KEEPS VERY ACTIVE.

SMELTERS BUSY DESPITE TALK OF LITIGATION.

Bully Hill Out of Agricultural Zone and Not Affected by Threats, But Mountain Copper Refrains from Building at Keswick Until Settlement Is Reached.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

REDDING, Oct. 14.—The Bully Hill Company, operating a group of copper mines at Winthrop and Delamar, and the Bully Hill smelter at Delamar is employing 300 men and operating the furnace steadily. Excellent discoveries have been made recently in the Bully Hill, Winthrop, Rising Star and other mines and conditions are exceedingly pleasing. The Bully Hill group has been opened to a depth exceeding 1000 feet and is the deepest copper producer in California. The ore bodies carry considerable gold and silver in addition to high-grade copper. This plant is not affected by the agitation against the Shasta smelters, as it is far removed from the agricultural sections.

The Balaklala is producing more heavily than ever before, and the last report of President Thomas J. Barbour shows that the property is in excellent shape. In excess of 6,000,000 tons of good grade ore has been developed while extensive diamond drilling has blocked enormous quantities in new territory. The high percentage of gold and silver carried materially increases profits.

The Mammoth has completed its improvements and the big plant in producing with renewed vigor. Developments at the Mammoth mine continue satisfactory and there is no doubt but that it will continue to rank as the largest California copper producer for some time to come. The Mountain Copper is pushing extensive developments at the Iron Mountain and Hornet mines where enormous reserves of low-grade copper have been demonstrated. The company has thus far made no move to erect a new plant at Keswick. It is reported that the outcome of the trouble with the farmers will be awaited before the Mountain Copper proceeds with work on the proposed new plant. The Friday-Lowden, Spread Eagle and several other properties are receiving attention.

TRINITY COUNTY.

The Trinity River Tunnel Company, numbering many Southern Californians among its stockholders, has commenced the turning of the Trinity River above Lewiston in order to expose the bed for placer mining. One thousand inches of water was turned into the tunnel on the first lay, and by the end of the week the entire river, carrying 25,000 inches of water, will be shot through the new channel. The tunnel is 1256 feet long, eight feet high and ten feet wide in the clear. Including the machinery it has cost over $125,000 and has taken two years to construct. Nearly two miles of the river bed will be exposed, and as the gravel deposits were thoroughly tested before the turning of the stream was attempted, the company is confident of reaping magnificent profits from its enterprise. As the water emerges from the tunnel it will be used to furnish power to four turbines operating steam shovels, centrifugal pumps and hydraulic elevators. The pumps will supply hydraulic giants with water to sluice the river bed.

The Headlight mine at Trinity Center has been taken over by strong interests and a forty-stamp mill is being built to handle the mountain of ore. This property has long been regarded as one of the great mines of Trinity, but owing to the low grade ore has been neglected. Under the new conditions the property is expected to become a famous gold yielder. The Golden Jubilee at Carrville is reported to be showing well. The La Grange, Union and other prominent hydraulic companies are preparing for a busy season. Ditches and flumes have been placed in first-class condition, new machinery installed and the operating force increased. The coming season promises to be unusually prosperous.

BUTTE COUNTY.

The Miocene Placer Mining Company of Los Angeles is preparing to commence extensive operations at its properties near Scales, Butte county. Three monitors will be placed in commission and 1500 cubic yards of gravel handled daily. The huge retaining dams have been approved by the California Débris Commissioners and there is no fear of annoyance by the Débris people. The company controls 1000 feet of the workings of the Cleveland Company which, prior to the enforcement of the anti-hydraulic regulations, produced $3,000,000. It is estimated that it will take fifteen years to mine the deposits and explorations are expected to open much virgin territory. The restraining dams will store about 400,000 cubic yards of débris. W. L. Brown, F. C. Boiri, H. C. Norris, F. G. Wride, A. R. Brown, M. B. Carter, G. J. Coller and other Los Angeles men are interested. Thirty men will be employed.

The fight between the dredge operators and the cities of the Sacramento Valley seems in a fair way of adjustment. The dredging companies have agreed to level their piles of débris along the river banks, and several companies have suspended operations for a few days while this work is going on. The Ophir Gold Dredging Company continues to operate within the city limits of Oroville, but will probably remove the chief cause of the objections. Rumors say an English syndicate is negotiating for the great dredging companies at Marysville, Oroville and Folsom, but they seem to have little foundation. The Natomas Consolidated controls most of these properties, and the fact that several million dollars' worth of its bonds have been offered to the London market probably accounts for the rumors. The Yosemite Dredging Company is building a 28x62-foot suction dredge on the Sacramento River near the mouth of Salt Creek. The United States Dredging Company expects to have its recently repaired dredge in commission within a short time.

PLUMAS COUNTY.

A lawsuit involving the famous Golden Gate mine in Antelope Valley, Plumas county, has been filed at Reno. W. H. Edwards, one of a company of wealthy easterners, against Julian M. Little and the Nixon National Bank. Edwards states that himself and associates had agreed to purchase the Golden Gate for $400,000; that several payments have been made and that over $8000 is in the bank for further installments, but that Little, who was to pay the money out for George Phillips, one of the prospective owners, refuses to do so. The court is asked to compel Little and the bank to disgorge. The Golden Gate is one of the famous gold producers of California and is considered a very valuable property.

A promising deposit of asbestos has been located near the Spring Garden tunnel of the Western Pacific Company and men have been put to work to develop it. The quality is excellent and if the find is as extensive as appears, the mine will be one of the richest in the north. The Gunmer mine on the North Fork of the Feather River has been acquired by San Francisco people. The property contains deposits of rich gravel, but owing to its distance from a railroad has not been worked to any extent. A steam shovel or light dredge will be employed.

AMADOR COUNTY.

Litigation has broken out in the Superior Court of Amador county between the present and former owners of the properties controlled by the California Consolidated Mines Company. This corporation controls the Wildman, Mahoney, Keystone and other famous producers on the Mother Lode. The former owners state that at the time of the purchase several bills were outstanding, which the purchasers agreed to settle, but have failed to do so. On this account the old owners seek to recover control of the mines. This litigation promises to be bitterly fought, as both sides have retained eminent lawyers and are preparing for a long-drawn-out struggle. The Keystone was recently reopened after a considerable period of idleness and was showing well. While operations have been greatly reduced, a small force of men are still employed. The Wildman, Mahoney and other properties have been idle for several months. It was recently stated that the company was arranging to resume work at all its properties.

The Gold River Mining Company of Los Angeles is pumping out the famous Bumblebee mine at Oroville and will have the lower workings unwatered in about a week. Systematic developments will immediately commence. This property has a splendid productive record and is expected to show better values at depth than were encountered in the upper levels. The Browns Valley district, near Marysville, is evincing considerable activity. Several Southern California companies are at work. Numerous rich strikes have been made and it is likely that a mill will be erected in the near future.

Amalgamated Busy on the Giroux Property—Four Steam Shovels on Nevada Consolidated — Smelter's Four Reverberatories at Work and Fifth Is Being Installed.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ELY, Oct. 12.—Considerable excitement has prevailed here for the past few days over the discovery of high-grade copper ore on the Ely Central ground, adjoining the estate of the Nevada Consolidated, the big producer of the Guggenheims. Two shafts were started, one on the Clipper and the other on the Monarch claim of the Ely Central on last Saturday, and at this writing are down ten feet and in the high grade all the way. Native copper has been taken out in no inconsiderable quantity as far as the shafts have gone, and while bornite, azurite, malachite, chalcocite and chrysocolla appear in chunks, making the percentage of copper very high, the estimate of the engineers in charge is that seven feet in the Monarch shaft will average between 10 to 15 per cent.

The ore in the Clipper is not far behind, and the product of both shafts is of the direct smelting variety, which considerably enhances the value of the discovery. Yesterday a number of samples taken from the new dumps, without any attempt at sorting, were brought into the city, and their appearance caused something of a sensation. The sensation was heightened by the fact that the new finds were made in the limestone. Before the coming of Thomas F. Cole, the advance agent of Amalgamated, nothing was thought of the limestone formation in the district; everything was porphyry, the low cost producing ore. But Mr. Cole had made a fortune in the limes of Bisbee, Ariz., and he has been experimenting with that formation in this camp and with success.

Engineers who have seen the new ore declare that never was such a showing seen anywhere, and that if such a find were made in Arizona all kinds of sensations would follow. This is undoubtedly the richest ore that has been opened in Ely, and it is regarded as the more important by the people of Ely for the effect that it will have on Mr. Cole, and the improvements that will follow on the properties of the Amalgamated.

On the Giroux Consolidated, the principal property of the Amalgamated, the new Giroux shaft is 700 feet up in the upraise from the 1000-foot level, and down 120 feet from the surface, sinking and upraising going on at the same time. The Giroux shaft is to be the principal working shaft of the property, while the Alpha shaft will be used for the exploration of the Old Glory hill. Meanwhile the ground is being prospected by churn drills, as is the ground of the Butte and Ely, one of the recent acquisitions of the Amalgamated. Mr. Cole, the newly-elected president of the Giroux Consolidated, is expected here some time this month, when it is believed, plans for the contemplated improvement will be outlined.

The Nevada Consolidated is rushing things in the steam shovel pit at Copper Flat. Four steam shovels are working toward the Eureka Fraction of the Ely Central, sidelining the pit, and they are excavating for the railroad tracks to be laid to a distance of 200 feet east from the present confines of the ore. Drill holes have proven the ore for this width, and the next two months will see considerable work in this territory. The output of the pit still continues better than 6000 tons a day, which is being handled by the concentrator and smelter as fast as it is hauled to McGill.

Four reverberatories are at work day and night at the Steptoe smelter, and the fifth is under construction. Four units of the concentrator are keeping pace with the smelter and four convertors complete the complement of the reduction plant. A fifth unit is to be added to the concentrator next year, and the excavation for the addition to the plant has already been made. This means that the production of the camp will be greatly increased the coming year.

Hens Carried the Message.

When C. D. Miles of Great Barrington, Ct., saw his garden truck being ruined by a neighbor's chickens this week he took some corn and on each kernel tied a string with a tag bearing, "Keep this chicken at home." The chickens went away with Miles's brief, but pointed, epistle, and did not reappear.—[New York World.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wished done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Talc and Quartz.

HANFORD, Sept. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending several samples of rock from Fresno county. No. 1 is, I think, a very good grade of talc, has it any commercial value, demand, and principal uses? What is No. 2? There is a two-foot ledge of it. No. 3 comes from a twenty-foot ledge in a slate formation; does the rock contain metal values of any kind? No. 4 comes from a two-foot ledge, a contact vein—granite and slate—does the rock contain any metal values? Thanking you in advance for your answer in the "In the Earth," very truly, C. D. C.

Answer. No. 1 talc (variety soapstone) is not pure enough for face powder, foot-ease, or other toilet purposes. It is too gritty—without washing—for lubrication purposes. It would bring, probably, $4 per ton, f.o.b. cars, for industrial uses. No. 2 is lava with iron oxides present. No. 3 is iron-mica sandstone with graphite in traces. No. 4 is quartz with iron oxides. For precious metal values on Nos. 2, 3 and 4—if any—you are, respectfully referred to some good assayer.

Sand With Iron Oxides.

BARSTOW, Sept. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Soil from nine miles southwest of Turlock, Cal. I am desirous of knowing what, if any, minerals are contained therein, and if they would prove detrimental to agricultural purposes. Yours truly, R. M. D.

Answer. In the samples submitted we find 4 per cent. quartz (sand,) with traces of lime carbonate, low per cent iron oxide (ilminite) with aluminum silicate (clay.) Soda present. Such soil is not detrimental to agricultural purposes, but is would be far from "rich."

Limonitic Iron Pebbles.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herein find two samples of ore. The one marked No. 1 is off the surface and there is a large body of it. What is it? Sample 2 comes from a large deposit near same place. I think 2 contains potash and nitrate of soda. Both samples are found about thirty miles north of Redlands, Cal. Thanking you in advance, yours truly, E. K.

Answer. No. 1 consists of limonitic iron pebbles with coating of iron oxide (sienna.) No. 2 is a "dirty," impure Fuller's earth, carrying traces of lime and potash and of no commercial value.

Talc.

TECOPA, Sept. 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send today a sample of rock (local.) Will you please tell me what it is? Some say talc, magnesite, and fire-clay, so please settle the question. I enclose stamped envelope for reply,

Very respectfully, E. L. M.

ANSWER: At present the editor of this department of The Times is "balled up," as it were, with an immense pile of letters and samples from correspondents. We average thirty-five personal letters to correspondents in each month, called for by careless packing of samples and non-receipt of specimens. It is therefore impossible to add to the list of personal replies. When correspondents write from a city it is well to give street address. We have some ten letters that should be replied to (with samples not obtained by The Times,) but no sufficient address is given in the letters. Correspondents will please note this explanation.

Your samples are mixtures of talc and silica, the oviform shaped specimen especially. The somewhat foliated white sample runs traces of iron and silica; with alumina and magnesia present. It is a variety of margarodite and of but little commercial value.

Arsenical Conglomerate.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed you will please find a sample of ore, also pulp from the same. This is from a claim in San Diego county. Some say it is bismuth ore; others say it is plumbago. Some say iron. What do you say?

Thanking you in advance for full explanation.

Yours, etc., E. C. G.

ANSWER: We respectfully, and courteously, say that we fight shy of pulp samples unless obtained personally. You submit two massive samples. One of them is conglomerate cropping with arsenic present. The other specimen carries arsenic also. Bismuth and plumbago are not present. Samples come from an arsenical iron-ore locality.

Carbonate.

PASADENA, Sept. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The enclosed sample was taken from a large blanket ledge in Western Mohave county, Arizona. I believe it is a carbonate of lime. A determination by your office would be appreciated. Has it any commercial value?

Yours truly, C. E. P.

ANSWER: Your sample is very minute in form and quantity. It resembles a product artificially formed—perhaps from the large blanket ledge. It carries carbonate of lime and magnesia. Commercial values problematical.

Jasper and Gothite.

OWENS (Ariz.) Sept. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Am enclosing four samples of rocks which are interesting prospectors in this vicinity.

Is No. 1 a phonolyte? It occurs in large dykes in this district. No. 2 is the ore found near No. 1. Does it contain tellurium or is the white coating with the gold a lead compound? Is No. 3 a tungsten ore, or an iron compound? Does No. 4 contain any boron, or is it simply a lime formation? Trusting that this will receive your attention and [illegible] advance, I am

PROPHETIC.

GOLDEN DREAMS ARE REALIZED.

HARD-HEADED MAN OF BUSINESS PROVES PROPHET.

And Now, Fifty Years After His Death, When Only Old Letters Show What He Thought, Los Angeles Is Fulfilling Destiny He Foretold for Her.

If Joseph P. Hamelin, banker and merchant, who died in Lexington, Mo., about fifty-odd years ago, could visit the "Pueblo de Los Angeles" for a second time he would most certainly get a pretty hard shock; but after recovery he could point proudly to a letter written by him in 1850, and say "I told you so."

And he did. A letter of his to Robert Aull, a banker of Lexington, a copy of which was discovered in the vault of the city bank, would prove his assertion. After describing his journey with a wagon train across the big divide and down the slopes of the Sierras to the Big Muddy Creek, the letter goes on to detail the wonders of the new land into which the argonaut had come. This letter, or rather its copy, was recently forwarded to Dr. W. R. Gosewisch, a practicing physician of this city, by friends in Missouri.

Among other things the pioneer describes is the appearance of the plains, "fit to pasture unlimited herds of horses and cattle, and green ten months in the year," which he passed in coming here. Then he grows enthusiastic about the possibilities the future held for Los Angeles, and the spirit of prophesy coming upon this hard-headed business man, he peers into the future, and the things he sees there are most wonderfully like the realities of today.

"California," he says, "is destined to become a greater wonder of the world than she is today." This was written from the "Mohave River, 1223 miles from pueblo de los Angeles, February 3, 1850." He goes on: "She may yet be considered as in her infancy. But a portion of her mineral wealth has been discovered and her agricultural resources have not been touched. . . . Look forward to the future. Cities will spring up like wild flowers, railroads will come, and distance will be laughed at, magnetism (electricity) will carry the order of the merchant, the plans of the speculator, and the message of the lover."

In another letter, written shortly after, March 12, of the same year to be exact, from this city, he speaks of a friend who has started to the "port, San Pedro, and expects to sail from there tomorrow." He himself, he says, "will leave here for Sacramento City, and expect to reach there within twenty-five days."

The Department of the Interior has ordered all oil lands withdrawn from entry in California pending legislation by Congress to remedy the present conflict between agricultural and mineral locators. The matter has been before the lawmakers twice already without result. The order was issued on September 27, and under it no locations, either mineral or agricultural, can be made until further notice, but "all locations or claims, existing and valid on that date, may proceed to entry in the usual manner, after field investigation and examination," according to the circular received by the Land Office officials in this State.

The department's action is the outcome of the almost continual clashes between those who have located on prospect oil lands for actual oil development under the placer mining laws, and those who have sought the land through the subterfuge of claiming it as agricultural, although oftentimes it is an alkali waste growing nothing but sagebrush. The oil and gypsum locations are another factor to consider.

The land withdrawn is that classified by the United States Geological Survey as probably oil-bearing. It may affect some plans of wild-cat operators.

The field investigations that must now be made before patents are issued appear to have had little perceptible effect upon business. They, however, make necessary longer legal processes with accompanying larger fees to attorneys operating before the Land Office.

Developing Twenty-six.

Development is going rapidly on three-quarters of 26-23-22. Midway owned by the Mount Diablo Oil and Development Company, which just finished its third well on the northeast of the southeast quarter at 1175 feet. It has been on the pump for one week. Superintendent Cullingham asserts that it is good for 200 barrels some days, while other days it has yielded more. It is too soon to say how good it is. It is 1175 feet deep and entered the sand at 1005. Number 4 has just been spudded.

The Carbo Petroleum, a company of Pennsylvanians, is down over 700 feet on the southeast forty acres of the northwest and reports 100 feet of sand, while the Wilbert on the northeast forty of the northwest has finished one with ten-inch at 1150 feet which, it is asserted, goes 200 barrels. This is controlled by W. S. Tevis of San Francisco, H. A. Jastro of Bakersfield and associates. The well was sunk in thirty days in unknown ground. W. M. Forker is the superintendent.

The Mount Diablo plans to reserve forty acres for itself and lease all the balance of the section in forty-acre tracts on one-fifth royalty, the basis of the Carbo's lease.

The northeast 160 acres are leased to the Mascot that has a production of about 2000 barrels a day and is believed to be capable of more. The Wilbert has forty. Both these are on one-eighth royalty as they are old agreements made under different conditions. For lease there remain 360 acres, enough to make nine forty-acre leases. The adjoining section 25 is largely cut up this way. Recent development on 26 by the Wilbert is a substantial extension of the producing belt.

The Mount Diablo is owned largely by Southern Pacific employes. N. K. Fowler, chief dispatcher in this city, is secretary with offices in the Central building.

Standard Gets Gasser.

On 26-31-22, Buena Vista Hills, Midway, the Standard has struck a huge gasser reported to be equal to that of the Honolulu on 10, several miles southeast. Estimates of the gas flow place it at several million feet daily. Now speculation is more rife than ever as to whether or not a great gas field will be the result of drilling here instead of oil. In Oklahoma a great gas field has been developed under similar conditions that has brought many industries to Bartlesville.

Is Japan Buying?

An unconfirmed report from the North says that the Associated is negotiating with Japanese interests to supply 200,000 barrels a month for an indefinite period at a price not yet made public. It is months since Japan bought any oil here and its purchases of Oklahoma and Texas oil, too, seem to have ceased. Meanwhile, it has bought some in Peru from an English company. The amount of this is unknown but it must have been small as the production there is not great. When the shipments ceased some months since it was stated by an official of one of the big companies that the Nipponese were insisting upon a much higher gravity than any one was prepared to furnish in quantity.

Coalinga Development.

The Blair Oil Company has penetrated the oil sand at 2000 feet on 14-21-15, the first strike south of Warthan Creek.

The Coalinga Mohawk will drill its 3700-foot well on 12-20-15, now producing oil and water in unsatisfactory amounts, to greater depths in the hope of getting better results.

West Fields Development.

Los Angeles and Lemoore capitalists have acquired the old U. S. lease on section 6 at McKittrick some distance from the producing belt. A well was drilled here years ago and is said to be good, but was abandoned with the slump in prices.

The Midway Oil Company announces a dividend of two mills a share on $1,000,000 capitalization to be increased later. This comes from the Union's royalty on its Sunset lands.

Smudge Pots Save Fruit.

It is said that 6000 cars of fruit, 600 bushels to the car, were saved in the Grand Valley of Colorado last spring by the use of "smudge pots," little pots of sheet iron, like a small frying pan, that are filled with oil and supplied with a wick. One pot is placed on the ground between every four trees—about sixty pots to the acre. Alarm thermometers have been invented. If the mercury goes down to danger point it turns loose a bell which awakens the whole neighborhood and farmers and their whole families pull on their boots and overcoats and go out with torches to light the wicks in the pots. Which, when they go at full blast, will raise the temperature at least 10 degs. and save the fruit.—[Albany Evening Journal.]

REDONDO GIVES FINE FISHING.

MACKEREL AND HALIBUT ARE STILL PLENTIFUL.

Good Strings of Bass Caught from San Pedro Breakwater and in the Kelp Beds—Surf and Yellowfin Active at Huntington Beach—Anti-seining Law Beneficial.

Satisfactory fishing continues at Redondo, and during the week hundreds of pounds of halibut, yellowtail and mackerel have been caught from wharf No. 2. The halibut have been most numerous, although more mackerel have been caught than for some time. A large number of fishermen have visited the wharf, and not a single angler has returned disappointed.

Bass fishing off San Pedro is again assuming special attraction to the regulars, and several nice baskets of good-sized fish have been caught in the vicinity of the government breakwater. Harry Robbins, R. H. Thomas and Ed Garrison fished from the end of the breakwater Tuesday morning, and before the dummy engine, placing rock, got busy, the trio landing eighteen large bass in two hours.

The bass fishing is still better off the edge of the kelp beds, which can be reached in rowboat or launch in an hour from the landing. It is best to fish with but a single hook, as the minute the bass takes the hook it makes a strike into the weed, and often the fish snaps the line. A good way to tackle the bass is to use an eighteen-inch leader below the lead with a single hook, then reel in quickly the moment the bass bites. He will either come along or cough up the barb.

Surf and yellowfin are still biting well at Huntington Beach and Sunset Beach. Perhaps in no other locality has shore fishing improved more noticeably since the passage of the anti-seining law than along this southern coast. The seiners are working to repeal the act at the next Legislature, but if they accomplish their purpose fishing will be doomed in a short time. Since the law was passed, sport with the surf and yellowfin has increased remarkably, and the regulars can now visit the coast points and be fairly certain of getting good strings.

Some bass fishing is still to be had at the Long Wharf, although about the only place to get the fish is from the stringers underneath the boards, and the swells have been so high lately it is a bit risky to sit astraddle the slippery timbers. Sculpins are also to be had, and some sheephead have been caught.

Fishing on the outside is quite, except for the bass sport close inshore.

Harry Slotterbeck is going out today to try out a new spoon bait.

Tire Themselves Getting Ready.

Washington Irving tells a story of a man who tried to jump over a hill. He went back so far to get his start for the great leap, and ran so hard, that he was completely exhausted when he came to the hill, and had to lie down and rest. Then he got up and walked over the hill.

A great many people exhaust themselves getting ready to do their work. They are always preparing. They spend their lives getting ready to do something which they never do.

It is an excellent thing to keep improving one's self, to keep growing; but there must be a time to begin the great work of life. I know a man who is almost forty years old who has not yet decided what he is going to do. He has graduated from college and taken a number of post-graduate courses—but all along general lines. He has not yet begun to specialize. This man fully believes he is going to do great things yet. I hope he may.—[Success Magazine.

A Cruel Joke.

Miss Daisy Dimple found a love letter that her father had written to her mother in the halcyon days of their courtship.

Daisy read the letter to her mother, says Judge, substituting her own name and that of her sweetheart.

Daisy's mother raved with anger and stamped her foot in disgust, and forbade her daughter to have anything to do with a man who would write "such nonsensical stuff to a girl."

Daisy then gave the letter to her mother to read.

The house became so suddenly quiet that one could hear the flies walking across the ceiling.—[Philadelphia Record.

between 50 and 60 per cent. of the ordinary yield. The output will be something in excess of 6000 boxes. The size is very large and the quality apparently far better than last year. Indications are for an early harvest. The sizes run from 80s and 96s to a great many 64s, while there is a fair percentage of 126s and very few 150s. The crop measures about two and a half to three boxes per tree instead of from five to six.

The bulk of the crop here is grown on the San Emigdio ranch, and the next largest is the Tejon ranch, with its sixty acres. One ranch of five acres across the Kern River looks particularly good. They are mostly Washington, navels, while there are many Valencias, sweets and other varieties. No young groves have come into bearing this year.

TULARE COUNTY.

YIELD WILL BE NORMAL.

PORTERVILLE, Oct. 16.—Reports during the "June drop" that the orange crop of the Porterville district would be but 65 per cent. of normal have not been borne out by later developments. Indications are now that 2500 cars will go out from here for the season. This is the normal shipment. The fruit is sizing well, is already showing color, and an exceptionally large proportion of the pick will grade fancy. The feature of the crop this year, however, will be the size, and choice packs from this standpoint will be the rule.

Picking will begin in the upper Tule and Globe sections on the 20th inst., perhaps a week earlier than was the case last year. From a week to ten days later than that, picking will be general throughout the district. Shipping will be active by November 1.

During the year about 1500 acres of new orchards have come into bearing, but owing to the peculiar conditions the yield from them will be negligible. Last season 4000 acres of new orchards were set out. This latter figure will be counterbalanced in but small degree by those orchards which have been subdivided for residence purposes; perhaps in the entire district not over 200 acres have been taken over for that purpose.

The greatest relative increase in acreage is in the Ducor section, where not less than 1500 of the 4000 acres of new orchards have been planted.

Weight of a Crowd.

In the building of theater galleries and grand stands the supporting strength of the structure has to be carefully worked out. This is done by multiplying the area in square feet by the pressure which it is estimated a crowd exerts to the square foot and making the supports proportionately strong. At one time the weight of a crowd was determined at between eighty-two pounds and 102 pounds to the square foot, but experiments have shown this to be a great underestimation, and the weight exerted is now calculated at from 123 pounds to 133 pounds.—[London Tit Bits.

ALFALFA IS KING!

WHY?

Because it is the hardiest and greatest of all crops. Because there is an unfailing market for these crops. Because it produces the greatest income on the investment. Because it offers the greatest opportunity for the small investor; it giving you, the man with small means, an opening to increase your earnings 40 to 50 per cent., with no chances of loss and no effort on your part.

Beyond doubt alfalfa is the greatest of all crops, and the land in which it is planted immediately increases in value.

Few people realize the enormous profits derived from alfalfa. The original cost deters a great many from entering into the raising thereof, but a field once leveled and planted requires very little expense to maintain. It is aptly said then, "in order to make money one has to spend money."

Money invested in alfalfa is a safe and sure investment, and as it produces large returns upon the investment, it is considered most profitable.

One hundred acres planted in alfalfa returned to the investors the first year $12,000, netting them 47½ per cent. on their investment.

The opportunity is now open to invest in a company that promises to do even still better.

The Los Angeles Land Syndicate is in the finest alfalfa producing section in Southern California. This land will grow more alfalfa to the acre than any other section we have seen, and the climate is ideal.

An abundant supply of water is found at a depth ranging from 20 to 150 feet and from 300 to 400 feet an artesian flow can be had. The company has already developed a sufficient supply of this pure water.

The Los Angeles Land Syndicate is incorporated for the purpose of attracting to it small investors who have not the money to pay the first cost, but who are anxious to participate in the profits. The Syndicate has prepared the land, planted it in alfalfa, has drilled the necessary wells, layed the pipe lines and will take care of the property and divide among its stockholders the net profits.

The Los Angeles Land Syndicate is doing a general land business, and through the sale of its capital stock and profits from its alfalfa fields, will buy other property so that in a few years we hope to have thousands of acres planted to alfalfa, each stockholder participating in the profits in proportion to the amount of stock which he holds.

There are no salaries being paid its officers. In fact, every dollar that is invested by you goes into the development of the wonderful wealth-producing proposition in the country today. Every share of stock subscribed has been paid for at its par value, to-wit: $1.00 per share, there was no promotion stock issued. Every stockholder, therefore, will be on an equal basis.

Shares of stock in the Los Angeles Land Syndicate can be purchased at its par value on a cash basis. Suitable terms will be made on blocks of 100 shares.

From present indications the musical extravaganza of college life, "Professor Napoleon," will be a very large production. The required number of 700 participants will soon be reached, and when it is finally produced at the Mason Opera house, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 1, 2 and 3, with such an army of Los Angeles people appearing upon the stage, a showing that will eclipse all previous local efforts is promised. The women managers of the Children's Hospital have this great undertaking in charge, and how well they have thus far succeeded is evidenced by the fact that hundreds of persons are calling in applications to join the ranks. Of course, all cannot be admitted—every one of the 700 required to be especially adapted for the scene or chorus in which they appear, as many offers are necessarily refused each day.

The younger groups are composed of pupils from the various schools; for instance, forty of the Marlborough girls are taking the parts of banjo girls; the Huntington Hall girls take part of juniors; Westlake School are the seniors; fifty Polytechnic girls are fraternity men and sorority girls, while the Los Angeles High School is represented by the groups of boys. The Cumnock School, Normal School, Harvard Military Academy and the Girls' Collegiate have also contributed for the cast of "Professor Napoleon."

In addition to the younger groups, some of the city's well-known society women have organized other groups for dances. Miss Helen Wells and Jeanette Garner are the leaders of the beaux and belles dance; Miss Dixon Hill dances the leading role, the witches and sprites; E. Randall is captain of the sailors in this leading role with a chorus of fifty sailors; Miss Dickinson and Miss Fannie Carpenter lead the graduates. Paul Harold Ostrum, Miss Bertha W. Vaughn, Miss Kate Ebbert and R. Page also have important parts.

Of the younger society people appearing in the different dances are: Marian Allen, Katherine Bayley, Helen Brant, Edythe Bryant, Helen Cass, Blanche Davenport, Ruth R. Degan, Louise Derby, Josephine M. Gavagan, Isabel Frances Kelly, Elise Gladys Lindsay, Marjorie Newlin, Hildegarde Peyton, Jessie Marybelle Spring, Muriel L. Corona Ranger Says They Will Be Established Through Seven Townships This Winter.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CORONA, Oct. 16.—Forest Ranger G. M. Murken reports that the principal work to be done this winter in his line will be establishing of forest boundaries through the seven townships embracing the forty miles included in his territory, and also the construction of six to eight miles of forest trails. These latter are for the purpose of aiding in the work of fighting forest fires. The locality of the trails was suggested by the forest ranger, but until approved by division headquarters, work cannot be commenced.

Redlands Golden Orange and Orange Producers' associations, two of the largest local shipping concerns, returned yesterday from a two months' eastern trip in the interests of the companies. He said:

"Everything is in fine shape for the forthcoming season, and we will be able to take good care of all of our fruit. Last season was not quite as good as the eastern jobbers would have liked, but they are predicting a good season for this year. Every year I am more thoroughly convinced that the California orange is what the people want. There is some talk of the Florida shippers holding some of their fruit until later, with a hope of better prices, but the eastern jobbers say they will make a mistake, as the people want the California oranges as soon as they can get them."

Redlands Is to Have One More Playground for Little Ones—Orange Shippers Optimistic.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

REDLANDS, Oct. 16.—Lugonia section is to have a new public park. That district has for a long time been desirous of a park and playground, and at a recent meeting of the City Trustees steps were taken to secure one.

The new park will be the site of the old Lugonia schoolhouse. The building was recently sold, and the last of it is now being removed. Directly opposite a handsome new brick school building is being erected, so the new park will serve as a playground for the school-children.

The proposed site comprises about two and a half acres, already ornamented with a number of immense pepper trees and other shade and ornamental trees and palms. The grounds will be leveled up, and walks and drives made and flowers and grass planted. Rustic seats will be supplied.

DANGEROUS.

DOUBLE-EDGED IS RECALL FAD.

May Discourage Performance of Official Duty.

Supreme Court Justice Has Positive Opinion.

Direct Primary, Etc., Simply Are Experiments.

That men, not methods, achieve the real reforms in municipal affairs was the keynote of the address of Judge M. S. Sloss of San Francisco, Associate Justice of the California Supreme Court, before the City Club yesterday at the Westminster Hotel.

The attendance was the largest the club has had since the Pinchot meeting and Judge Sloss was liberally applauded for some of his utterances, though his whole treatment of the subject—"Municipal Reform and Law," was not of the extreme character that City Club members seem to revel in. It deprecated some of their dearest fads.

Judge Sloss expressed faith in the capability of the American people living in cities to bring about good government and he admitted that the criticisms of municipal government in the United States were just and directed against the principal failure of democracy. But he also said the pendulum had swung too violently from the complacent self-satisfaction of fifty years ago to the present era of self-reprecciation and distrust of our ability to govern ourselves. He thought the pendulum had swung from one extreme to the other and that the real fact was that, while our governmental institutions are not perfect, they are not hopelessly bad or the people incapable.

After discussing the better government of European cities because of the limited number of elective offices and the expert and permanent character of the methods, he met the proposal that all defects may be cured by law.

"CHANGE OF MACHINERY."

"It is generally assumed," said he, "that the defects recognized as inherent in most of our cities are in the main due to the legal form or constitution of our city governments. The public mind is continually agitated by proposals to correct these evils by law. By the word 'law' I mean to include all changes of form or method of government. To some extent the desired results may be possible of attainment in this way, but I think we are all apt to expect too much of mere changes of machinery.

Alluding to city campaigns where new ideas have been the issue on the prediction that they would cure all, he said the change of method was expected to accomplish all and that the predictions had not been well founded. San Francisco's experiment of concentrating power in the hands of a Mayor might be salutary under a good man or terrible under a bad one. The experience of the city itself had demonstrated that.

The Galveston and Des Moines schemes were proclaimed successes, but he reminded the club that Galveston had been stirred to a high sense of civic duty by a great calamity and the Des Moines experiment was not yet fully tried. The Galveston success was perhaps due as much, or more, to the administrative officers themselves as to the system adopted.

"The election of a large number of city officers was to be deplored. He would elect no officers except those who carry out functions which may be the subject of a varying conception of policy. The average voter cannot discriminate between forty candidates, but he may when a small number, representing differing policies, are to be voted on.

"The judge's discussion of the initiative, the referendum and the recall were certainly inconoclastic, so far as the City Club was concerned. In his remarks he said:

JUST EXPERIMENTAL.

"There are some modern devices much in favor in my own city, and here as well, which I presume to think are of questionable utility. One of these is the recall. There was a conspicuous example of its exercise in your city within a few months and I do not doubt that in that instance it worked to the advantage of the city and proved a prompt and beneficial mether of correcting a serious evil. But it must not be forgotten that the recall may in times of public excitement or passion be subverted to bad ends.

"The agument in favor of the recall is that it compels public officers to give recognition to the public will. I doubt whether on the whole our government is fairly subject to the criticism that its officials are too little responsive to the will of the majority. On the contrary it seems to me that there is upon the part of most of our elected officials too great a desire to trim their sails to the popular breeze.

"We should consider carefully the question whether or not the likelihood of recall will not tend to intimidate and discourage from the performance of their duty officials who without this weapon hanging over them would stand firmly in the face of a strong but, in fact, mistaken popular demand.

"The initiative and referendum present questions which have been much discussed and I do not care to add to the discussion further than by the suggestion that the value of these innovations, like that of the recall and other modifications of our established methods, can be determined only by experience.

"The mere adoption of a new idea does not prove that it is right. These devices have not yet been tested long enough to enable any one to form an authoritative opinion as to their effects. They are interesting and important experiments, which may or may not prove capable of accomplishing what is expected of them."

BENEFITS DEBATABLE.

The judge did not think the direct primary a settled innovation of value, but regards its benefits as still debatable. He thought it might arouse the better element of citizenship to his personal responsibility, which it has been asserted was suppressed by the predetermined work of the professional politician.

He even expressed the belief that the direct primary might increase the power of the boss and the organization. But he was willing to assume that it interests the voters before the final act of election.

A higher and more ethical public spirit, the early education of the future citizen and the preparation of men for public service in a permanent way, and the selection of conscientious men, he concluded, mean more than numerous and chimerical changes in the laws.

Hinged a Man's Spine.

In a fight Nicola Lourie was shot in the back. The bullet lodged in his back and he lay nearly paralyzed in the hospital for five days. An X-ray photograph showed that the bullet was imbedded in the vertebrae. Drs. Bennett, Herrity and Cassini decided to perform an operation as the only hope of saving Lourie's life.

They removed the bullet and two inches of the spine and inserted a gold plate that worked on a hinge.

It is said Lourie began to improve almost immediately and it is believed he will recover.—[New York Times.

NEW USE FOR CACTUS.

Fruit Made Into Preserves, and Also Found to Contain Valuable Coloring Matter.

[Chicago Inter Ocean.] Two miles from Tucson on the top of a hill the Carnegie Institution has set up a sort of botanical workshop, the business of which is to make a study of desert plants. The object of the investigation is to find out how such plants manage to get along with almost no water.

This is a kind of knowledge that will be very valuable when applied, so far as may be practicable, in the raising of ordinary crops in parts of the west where rainfall is deficient. But, incidentally, efforts are being made to find use for some of these plants of the desert, especially for certain cacti, which, it is believed, can be made to yield marketable products.

There is, for example, one kind of prickly pear (growing wild in Arizona and New Mexico) the fruit of which has juice of a brilliant red color. This fruit is already utilized to a considerable extent for preserves. But it is thought that the juice might have important commercial value as a vegetable coloring, its hue, when the fluid is concentrated, being as rich as that of cochineal.

Of such cactus fruits there are a good many kinds, produced by a corresponding distinct species of plants related more or less nearly to the common prickly pear. All of them are known in Mexico, in a general way, as "tunas," but, according to variety, they bear different names, such as "cardona," "amarilla," "blanca," "palo altena," "tafayuca" and "ranchera." These, indeed, are only a few of many.

Such cacti in Mexico are cultivated simply by planting cuttings in the ground and surrounding them with a fence to keep out animals. They rarely receive any further attention, beyond gathering the annual crop. The fruits, however, are utilized for a number of different purposes, some of them being eaten raw, while others are employed in the manufacture of "tuna honey" and "tuna cheese," which are marketable products.

To make tuna honey, the juice of the fruits is boiled in kettles until it reaches the consistency of molasses, and then is poured into wooden troughs to cool, after which it is stored in bottles and earthen jugs. Being (thanks to the boiling) a sterile product, tightly sealed and rich in sugar, it will keep indefinitely. Of course, it does not taste like honey, but is of about the same consistency as liquid honey and might appropriately be called cactus molasses.

One of the most highly prized fruits of this kind is the cardona. Dr. David Griffiths of the government plant bureau says that he himself once ate 200 cardonas in a day. This was to find out whether they were wholesome. Even such a quantity did not disagree with him, but it should be realized that the pulp of the cardona, which is the only part eaten, is nearly all water. The fruit, in fact, frequently serves the natives as both food and drink in the arid regions of the southwest.

Sometimes a fermented drink is made from the pulp. For this purpose it is boiled for two or three hours, strained and set away to cool. The longer it stands the more intoxicating it is. Or, if preferred, the boiling is continued until the liquid is reduced to the consistency of a paste, which is sold in the Mexican markets as a sweetmeat.

Spanish Soldiers Poorly Housed.

The lot of the Spanish soldier, even in times of peace, is far from enviable, for his food, lodging and clothing are of the poorest. As regards barracks, the Spanish army is certainly the worst equipped in Europe, and this fact was practically admitted by Señor Sagasta when he was Premier. A deputation waited on him to protest against the unfair manner in which the law as to obligatory army service was enforced, so that any one with £50 to spare can evade this duty. The Premier admitted that the principle of redemption from military service was illegal, and that, strictly speaking, all healthy male adults should serve, but, he added, "the majority of our barracks are in such bad condition that we cannot expect the sons of respectable parents to live in them."—[London Chronicle.

PUTS AN END TO STOMACH MISERY

INDIGESTION, GAS, HEARTBURN AND DYSPEPSIA GO, AND YOU WILL FEEL FINE IN FIVE MINUTES.

Thousands of men and women here and about Los Angeles will be surprised at the prompt relief after taking a little Diapepsin. Get some now and have your stomach trouble over forever.

Every family here ought to keep some Diapepsin in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of Indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intertinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other Stomach trouble.

Religious Chickens.

Mrs. Nelson Sweezey of Sayville, N. Y., has a flock of what are known as "religious fowls," which answer to but one call or sound.

When Mrs. Sweezey wants to feed her fowls she gathers them together by whistling a familiar hymn—"Come, Ye Sinners, Poor and Needy"—when the fowls will hasten to her side, knowing that temporal food awaits them.

From mere chicks the Sweezey fowls have been thus fed, and they refuse to answer to the ordinary call of "chick, chick," which brings other flocks to the feeding place.—[New York World.

Oriental Salutations.

Some of the oriental modes of salutation are very peculiar. For instance, in Central Tibet, the custom is for the saluter to stick out his tongue, hold his right ear, rub his left hip, and bow deeply, all these motions being carried on at once. Certainly the other fellow need have no fear of personal assault from the subject of these curious antics? Less ludicrous, but equally reassuring, is the Chinese custom of rubbing noses on bended knees. The salaam or profound bow of India and the Mohammedan countries serves a similar purpose.—[St. Nicholas.

Your interest is in these better homes, and these homes call for better furniture, and right here is the connecting link between you and us.

It is our highest ambition to be one of the best stores in Los Angeles and to that end we have gathered together as choice a stock as it is possible to obtain.

In the selection of these goods, true merit has been the governing influence, and we are justly proud of the result.

We have the good fortune to represent exclusively in this territory several makers whose name alone reflects the highest standard in furniture manufacturing.

"A man is known by the company he keeps" no less than a store by the merchandise it sells.

First, there is our ROYAL line of furniture that we want you to know. Hands and brains never produced better. ROYAL furniture for the dining room, COLONIAL in mahogany, SHERATON (inlaid and plain) in mahogany. For the bed room, both COLONIAL and SHERATON designs in mahogany.

There is but one CRAFTSMAN furniture, which is made by Gustav Stickley, and sold exclusively by us in this territory. CRAFTSMAN has many imitators, some bearing the same surname.

BUTLER is another name in the Hall of Furniture Fame. This furniture is designed and built to meet the most exacting demands of particular people, and the highest grade exclusive decorating Houses on Fifth Avenue, New York, do not show anything superior in design or construction to this BUTLER line. BUTLER makes a complete line, including bedroom, dining-room, living-room, den and parlor. BUTLER is also strong on small distinctive pieces, such as tea tables, curio cabinets, and many odd and unique things. BUTLER designs include French, Italian, English and Colonial styles.

Another of our exclusive lines is WIDDICOMB. The supreme position of WIDDICOMB in the furniture world, together with the very reasonable prices asked, naturally insures a large volume of business. During all our associations with WIDDICOMB furniture, it is a real pleasure to state that we do not recall a single complaint on the part of the customer.

WILLIAM BIRCH, Ltd., of London, makes the finest leather furniture in the world. The line includes sofas and easy chairs, upholstered in carefully selected choice English Morocco. No kid glove is finer of texture, or more carefully made than are these magnificent articles. The BIRCH line is sold in every important city in the world, but is shown only in the highest class store in each city.

You will probably buy only one or two dining tables in a lifetime, and that is all the more reason why you should buy a HASTINGS pedestal dining table that is fitted with TYDEN (patent) locks which allows the table to extend without dividing the pedestal—a very attractive feature.

Before we took the agency of SINCLAIR furniture we had been looking a long time for something that would come up to our standard, and meet the requirements of the summer and mountain home, city porch and lawn. SINCLAIR furniture has been manufactured now for more than half a century, it bears the stamp of comfort, honest quality, and permanent endurance. The patterns that we show are exclusive and artistic, and the prices are so very reasonable that they come within the reach of all.

The woman who tries to keep house without a HOOSIER kitchen cabinet is ... a lot of comfort and satisfaction. A HOOSIER cabinet will effect a saving in materials used and labor expended sufficient to eventually pay its full cost.

Every mattress would be just as good as our SLUMBERLAND if as much care were used in the making—all sizes and three weights—we prepay delivery charges to any point on the Pacific Coast. We also have a brass bed with smooth continuous posts "made in Los Angeles" especially for us from patterns furnished by our own designers. These brass beds, equipped with one of our SLUMBERLAND mattresses and "RIP VAN WINKLE" springs, also sold exclusively by us, make a bed that is very satisfactory and pleasing in appearance.

The BOHN DRY AIR SYPHON, porcelain lined, refrigerators are the only refrigerators that we have ever seen that we regarded as safe and good enough for our indorsement and broad guarantee. The BOHN system of cold storage is used by 90 per cent. of the freight and express refrigerator cars in the United States and exclusively on all Pullman, dining and buffet cars. The BOHN syphon should pay for itself in the saving of ice, the preserving of foods and the guarding of health of the family.

All of the above lines of merchandise are sold at as low a price as is consistent with safe, sane business methods. We have but ONE price—we give 2 per cent. for cash, extend a rational credit, and charge a moderate rate of interest on deferred payments. We solicit your home furnishing and decorating account, and guarantee you in return good goods and prompt, careful, enthusiastic attention. Come in and see us. We like to show our goods and answer questions.

Johnson got a letter addressed to T. P. Johnson, City Collector, the other day, and almost fainted.

As the names of the candidates will be printed on the ballot in one long list, with no party affiliations indicated, there will be a grand mix-up of the Johnsons.

For the same reason, F. C. Wheeler and F. F. Wheeler, formerly Prohibition candidate for President, glower at one another with suspicion. The latter has printed cards with his name spread out into Frederick Freeman Wheeler, so he can't possibly get mixed with the former socialist candidate for Mayor.

There is also an overstock of Lyons—Harry Lyons and Henry Lyon and George Lyons. George, of that name, is said to be anxious to be confused with some of the votes intended for Henry Lyon, the Councilman; but nix for Harry!

This birdseye view does not include a regiment or so of variegated candidates bottled in fifty-seven varieties. The only thing interesting about most of them is that all the bald-headed men have issued cards handsomely adorned with half-tone cuts of photographs of themselves, taken in the days of their hirsutian youth.

WHO WILL ADVISE?

A Member of Each and All Who Sincerely Desires to Be Helpful to Boys.

"Ernestina," a new member of Each and All, writes as follows, to ask some of the girls to help solve a problem:

I have been a reader of the Each and All page since long ago. Sometimes I have wanted to reply to some of the letters that were published, but did not have the courage to tell the writers frankly what I thought. Ellen's vigorous letter on training boys to do right, published October 6, interested me particularly, doubtless because I am greatly interested in boys in a general—"sisterly" sort of fashion. Will it seem presumptious or disrespectful for me to reply to Ellen when I am years younger than she and possess none of the wisdom that experience has given her?

Boys like hers are some of the ones whom I meet constantly in a social way. I think that my keen eyes often detect wrongs that are tempting them almost before their mothers' eyes do, and if I knew the right things to say and do and the right way in which to say and do them, perhaps I could sometimes keep the boys I know from missteps and their mothers' hearts from pain.

As long as I wore my dresses above my shoe tops my mother firmly said that I should have no particular boy friends, but since I have grown old enough to wear my dresses ankle length, my mother is permitting me, under careful restrictions, to cultivate the acquaintance of young men whom I meet. I enjoy knowing them a good deal, and yet I accept their friendships with the same serious earnestness that I do the friendships of my girl acquaintances. If I did not, probably I should not be writing such a letter as this.

Some of the young men I meet are "as good as gold," and "as true as steel." Others have their points of particular weakness.

Ellen wrote: "When we found that they (the boys) wanted to play cards, we taught them how and played with them, and let them invite their friends to play with them at our home, with the result that they now care very little about cards, and seldom play a game. The same will be true, no doubt, of dancing." Now, neither card playing nor dancing, under the proper associations, is likely to hurt any one, but how about the things that are injurious in themselves? How about gambling? How about drinking? How about the wrong kind of girls? How about those acts that make a man a 'sport' if he does them and an "old woman" if he refuses to do them? Surely none of these things can be allowed, under any circumstances or in any form, to come into the home.

To state the honest truth, you cannot keep your boy from becoming acquainted with boys who gamble. I know from my own high school classmates that many of the boys who come from the best families gamble in a small way; many of these boys are, in other respects, fine fellows; perhaps a majority of them will make progressive business men some time, although, I fear, some of them will be none too scrupulous. You could not keep your boys from knowing these boys who gamble if you tried; besides, nine chances out of ten you would not suspect that these other boys did gamble if you did not possess your own boys' confidence and they did not tell you. How are you keeping your boys from being tempted to gamble?

There is Big Boy, who, while not a personal friend of mine, seems almost like a friend because I have met him and, in the natural course of an evening, have talked to him, very many times. Is there anything that I can do or say that will make him give up gambling? In some ways he is almost a model young man; he does not smoke or drink; he is a hard worker, holding a good position and drawing a salary above the average; he is the very soul of kindness, putting himself to all sorts of inconvenience to do people kindly turns; he is genial, getting more happiness from absolutely nothing than almost any one I ever knew.

I learned of his weakness quite incidentally from a remark made one evening to him by "Little Boy," his chum, who also gambles, and whom I have come to know very well in the same way that I have become acquainted with "Big Boy." I said nothing because I was dumfounded, besides, I should not have known what to say. Ought I to have maintained a dignified reserve toward "Big Boy" after learning of his wrongdoing? He had always treated me with the utmost kindness, and it seemed to me unjust to treat him otherwise than kindly. When he got a raise of $15 a month, I congratulated him, but there was no gladness in his answer; "I suppose I ought to be elated, but, to tell the truth, I am not, for it will go just like the rest goes." If other people had not been standing almost within hearing, I should have begged him to try to break this habit. The right opportunity to remonstrate has never presented itself, and I have not had the courage to make the opportunity; besides, anything I might say might be worse than useless. I have thought of inviting "Big Boy" to my own home—I know he would appreciate the invitation a good deal—but I have hesitated on account of what people would say about my making friends with a gambler, particularly on account of what would be said by the boys whose good opinion of me I value more than I am ready to admit. Then "Big Boy" likes me, and I should not wish to encourage him to think too much of me, for I do not care for him at all—and I want to be honorable always.

I have been trying to think of some young man whom I know who would make friends with "Big Boy," and prove a diverting influence from his temptation, but most young men would be almost sure to misunderstand my motive. I often wonder whether, if I were married, my husband would be great enough of soul to interest himself in such a boy as this one, whom it hurts me to see less than his best self. Many times I think that young married people, into whose homes have come as yet no little children of whose associations they have to be careful, might, by their friendship, do very much to help young men through the years when they are easily tempted.

"Big Boy" knows better than to gamble, but he got started in a small way back some time in his boyhood, and it happened to be the one thing which tempted him more strongly than he could resist. Must he go on like this always? Must this one thing always stand between him and noble manhood? Is there no way to waken some latent strength of character within him to rise up and overcome this weakness?

What is there that I can do to help Big Boy? That is a question that repeats itself every time I meet him. Ellen has told us what one mother is doing for her boys. Will she not tell us what she is teaching her girls to do for their boy friends? And you who are sisters and sweethearts, what are young doing for the boys who are tempted?

I notice that most of you sign your letters by pen names or with your initials. I should like to use a pseudonym which will be emblematic of the sincerity in which I have written this letter, and I think I shall choose this one by which you are to know me.

Nothing for Nothing.

The celebrated French physician, Ricord, was one day walking along the boulevards in Paris, when he met an old gentleman who was very rich, but who was at the same time noted for his extreme stinginess. The old man, who was somewhat of a hypochondriac, imagined that he could get some medical advice from Ricord without paying for it.

"Doctor, I am feeling very poorly."

"Where do you suffer most?"

"In my stomach, doctor."

"Ah! that's bad. Please shut your eyes. Now put out your tongue, so that I can examine it closely."

The individual did as he was told. After he had waited patiently for about ten minutes, he opened his eyes, and found himself surrounded by a crowd, who supposed that he was crazy. Dr. Ricord, in the meantime had disappeared.—[Exchange.

TO UNIONIZE LOS ANGELES, EH?

So, indeed, another attempt at the impossible is to be made. Once more a little clique of pigmies is to try to lift up Olympus. A few star-gazers are going to move the pole star from its place and set it wandering planet-like through the heavens.

Down somewhere in some part of the country a gathering of labor-union delegates has taken place and they have "authorized" a new "attempt" to be made to "unionize Los Angeles."

It is the builders' trade that is to be attacked this time. We have had attempt after attempt for twenty years to unionize the printers' trade in Los Angeles, to "down The Times," fetter the hands of business men and force all to deliver over the conduct of their business to the tender mercies of the amiable, unselfish, high-minded and intelligent walking delegate. Somehow or other Los Angeles people have failed to realize the blessings to come to them from letting these men (without any business of their own excepting that of grafting upon the hard-earned wages of honest workingmen) run every other man's business for him. The main point of attack was "to down The Times," and that being done it was supposed a sufficiently wide breach would be made in the walls of defense to let the whole army of grafters rush in and unionize everything in Los Angeles. Well, Lynch of the International Typographical Union and A. A. Hay of local lack of fame have failed to unionize anything, or even to keep The Times from rising higher and higher in its flights of success.

This attempt to unionize Los Angeles having proved a failure, no breach being observed in any wall to let even the little finger of a tyrannous walking delegate run things, the building trades are to be attacked. All right, let them come. The Typographical Union people assert positively that the many tens of thousands of dollars sent here to unionize Los Angeles and "down The Times" have proved a profitable source of graft to those who are doing the downing and the unionizing. It will only be a change of grafters and not of graft. The walking delegates who are to unionize Los Angeles through the door of the building trades will no doubt prove quite as capable in the grafting line and quite as incapable in the unionizing line as their predecessors in the Typographical Union.

Los Angeles is not to be unionized. There is no door here which will be closed in the face of any willing, capable workman. They may try one trade after another and each will fail as other attempts have failed, and Los Angeles will live by the open shop, through the open shop and for the open shop. To all of which in the language of the prophet we say, Selah.

Unions Quarreling.

The desire for local power is more to a unionite than all else. A strike of machinists in New York recently came to a quick end because of a quarrel over the election of officers of the district union. A general demand for union shop conditions and a new wage scale had been made, when nine out of the nineteen lodges seceded from District 15 and set up a district of their own and claimed that it was the real District 15. The seceders say that at the election of officers they were declared to be defeated, but that they can show that they were elected by a majority vote, and that the official declaration that their rivals were elected was part of a system of union politics. The seceders will have nothing to do with the demand for the closed shop and a new wage scale.

Open Shop at Spokane.

The union plumbers of Spokane are responsible for a non-union movement among their employers. Recently a set of rules for the government of employers was prepared and forwarded to the master plumbers of the city. The rules supplant the working agreement which was entered into between the journeymen and masters on April 1 and broken by the journeymen several weeks ago. The masters say that the work which they now have on hand was figured on under the working agreement and that the rules which now have been laid down are much more stringent than the conditions of that agreement.

Several of the master plumbers will declare for the non-union shop as soon as conditions will permit. They object to having rules laid down for their guidance by their employés.

Open Shop for Shingle Men.

The weavers in the shingle mills of Chehalis county, Wash., recently went on strike for increased wages. Some of the operators have decided that they will not reopen the mills until there is a better demand for shingles. Others report that they are experiencing no difficulty in securing non-union men, and they will hereafter operate their plants on non-union lines.

Cloakmakers' Strike Defeated.

The employés of Shapiro & Rubenstein, cloak makers of Baltimore, recently went on strike for increased wages, notwithstanding that at the beginning of the season the firm entered into an agreement with its employés about wages. The traveling men were then sent out on the road and agreed to deliver goods at prices based on the agreement made with the men. Of the situation a member of the firm says:

"We consider their demands unreasonable and have filled most of the strikers' places. We are firm in our determination not to take the strikers back or concede their demands. A committee of the Cloakmakers' Union waited on us today and threatened to make trouble for us, but we simply refused to treat with them."

Shapiro & Rubenstein are members of the Baltimore Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association, that is composed of thirty of the leading manufacturers of the city.

Fined for Owning an Auto.

Though most of the questions that can disturb the internal peace of labor unions have been thrashed out to a final settlement, a new one has been sprung in Great Falls, Mont., says the Electrical Press. Otto Kliesig is a journeyman plumber of Great Falls, who has prospered as all plumbers are credited with doing.

Because of his prosperity, Otto bought an automobile. This in itself offended a sentiment of the union, but when he took to riding to and from his work, just like the richest men in town, the sentiment grew to open censure and aggressive opposition. Otto resented this as an attack upon his independence, even as a union man. He sailed in and whipped the secretary of the union, and then intimated that if the secretary had any loyal friends advocating his cause, Otto would be glad to give them similar entertainment.

This precipitated another crisis. The union tried Otto, held that the rules of the organization did not sanction his luxurious method of locomotion, and fined him $25 without any alternative sentence. Otto is just as much peeved as ever and the debate goes merrily on while he is giving the automobile a rest and meditating while he walks back and forth over the route.

Union Sluggers Pay no Dues.

"Skinny" Madden recently caused an increase to be made in the dues of the Junior Steamfitters, and in a letter sent to the members notifying them of the increase, he explained that the Arbitration Committee, which recently secured a wage increase for the steamfitters' helpers, has decided to place the organization on a paying basis and gives the reasons as follows:

"Members of the Junior Steamfitters are never fined. There are ninety-eight members of the association who receive cards, for which they pay nothing, for reasons that are not necessary to explain in detail. One of the principal reasons is that they have done good work for the organization in times of trouble with the employers."

After making this plea for the members of his "wrecking crew," who have done good work at times of trouble, the letter states that the dues have been increased 5 4-5 cents a week, and concludes:

"We, your committee, think that the action we have here taken to preserve the organization, in asking members to pay 5 4-5 cents per week more in dues, believe we have drawn the lines very closely, placing no burden on any one. Hoping this will be satisfactory to all and also hoping there will be no grumbling when the next quarterly card is to be taken out, we remain, Your servants,

"THE ARBITRATION COMMITTEE."

"He doesn't need to tell us not to grumble," said one of his members last night, as he showed the letter. "We know what we would get if we grumbled at one of the meetings. The ninety-eight members who pay no dues would attend to that. They are exempted from the payment of dues, so they will attend the meetings and slug any one who attempts to ask questions. That letter shows how our union is conducted."

Talks ON Teeth

BY REX DENTAL CO. (Incorporated)

A Prominent Man Praises Alveolar Teeth

One of the most difficult cases of teeth restoration that ever came to us was that of Mr. P. H. Bagley, Inspector of U. S. Customs and a member of Lincoln Post No. 1, California and Nevada G. A. R.

Mr. Bagley has been prominent in business circles for many years. A victim of Pyorrhea (Rigg's Disease of the gums) for many years, he had come to the point where he must—as he thought—have the few loose roots pulled out and wear plates in both upper and lower jaws.

A short time ago he noticed one of our advertisements calling attention to a case of a prominent manufacturer in this city, who had just been fitted with a full set of Alveolar teeth by the Rex Dental Company—and as the case was so like his own he determined to investigate it, and did so.

We gave him the names of several patients of ours.

He spent several days in looking up these parties and talking with them, and after doing so decided to have the work done.

It was a desperate case.

We had literally nothing to work on except some loose roots.

The result after the work was done was a triumph for the Rex Dental Co.'s original Alveolar method, for Mr. Bagley has as good a set of teeth, upper and lower, as he had originally—and is able to use them with as much satisfaction and comfort.

Read the following letter from him:

The Rex Dental Co. (Inc.)

Oakland, Cal.

Dear Sir: I wish to state that I am very well pleased with the dental work you did for me. I had been to a number of dentists and had various kinds of work done, but I never found any kind of work that equals the Alveolar Method, done only by the Rex Dental Co. (Inc.) Before coming to you my gums were in very bad condition, but I wish to state that since taking your treatment they are in perfect condition, so I feel that I know what I am talking about when I say I will never have any more trouble with my teeth.

I want to thank you for your courtesy, kindness and carefulness while under your treatment, also for your reasonable terms for so splendid a piece of work. Will gladly recommend the Rex Dental Co. to any one in need of such services. I also wish to state that you never caused me one bit of pain during the treatment.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) P. H. BAGLEY,
Inspector of U. S. Customs.
Member Lincoln Post No. 1, California and Nevada G. A. R.
Sept. 20, 1909.
1702 Pacific ave., Alameda, Cal.

It is just such practical demonstrations as these that are filling our offices in Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Sacramento with victims of poor teeth, or missing teeth, and causing the fame of this wonderful work to be carried to the four corners of this continent. No man or woman will wear a plate or painful "bridge" when, by the improved Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar method, the missing teeth can be supplied and the mouth kept free from a mouthful of rubber.

With the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar teeth you can chew and masticate the food with perfect success. They look natural and feel natural.

The process calls for no cutting into the gums—no pain and discomfort, and once in, these teeth will be as firm as a rock.

No food can get under the teeth.

You can crunch up hard candy, eat corn off the cob, chew beefsteak—in short, you will have a real set of teeth and no one need ever know you have lost those nature gave you in the beginning.

We will be glad to send you a list of 100 or more names of patients who have given their consent for us to refer to them) in this city and State, whom we have cured of Pyorrhea or replaced their missing teeth with Alveolar teeth, or both.

Send for the Rex Dental Co.'s book, "Alveolar Dentistry," which tells all about the Alveolar method. We send it free.

BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS ALSO FREE.

We practice dentistry in all branches and we are especially equipped to do fine porcelain work.

DOCTOR'S BOOK FREE

Ask us to send you, sealed, free, a book, just completed, which will inspire any man to be bigger, stronger, younger (if he is old) more manly than he ever felt. We are builders of men.

We can take any weak, puny man and make him feel like a Sandow. Of course, we can't make a Hercules of a man who never intended by nature to be strong and husky. We don't mean that.

But we can take a man who started with a fair constitution and before it got fully developed began tearing it down. That fellow who is weak nerved, poky, lacking in vim, ambition and self-confidence, we can make a man of him in three months so that his own friends won't know him.

Every man who is weak and "going back" knows that there ought to be a something which will restore the old "steam" to his physical body. He has tried the usual drug methods and found that a failure and yet he knows there must be something.

Every woman who is tired, sickly and nervous; who suffers from uterine derangements, ovarian inflammation, leucorrhoea, lack of nerve vitality, will find in Electricity, given by our method, the only certain and natural cure. Hundreds have been cured after the failure of local treatment, tonics, operations. We can cure you with our Belt as surely as we cured your suffering sister.

We know it, too, and we have it. It's Electricity. You can't name anything more likely to have that force which a weak man lacks. It's natural power. We can pump it into a weak man while he sleeps and make him feel like a Sandow in no time. It's the spice of life.

"Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt" is a modern, up-to-date, specially applied Galvanic Electric Belt. It carries a special man-building electric suspensory (free.) The special attachment for women is given with every belt.

We want you to read this book and learn the truth about our argument.

If you are not as vigorous as you would like to be, if you have rheumatic pains, weak kidneys, loss of vitality, prostatic troubles, nervous spells, varicocele or any ailment of that kind that makes you, we would assure your future happiness if you would look into this method of ours. Don't delay it; your best days are slipping by. If you want this book we send it closely sealed, free if you follow this coupon.

An encyclopedia is not a "set of books" in the usual sense of the phrase. When you buy the works of a novelist, or some collection of literature, you buy a set of books that you expect to read once, or perhaps twice, and then put upon the shelf. In other words, you buy a luxury, a plaything, to be considered as a source of pleasure.

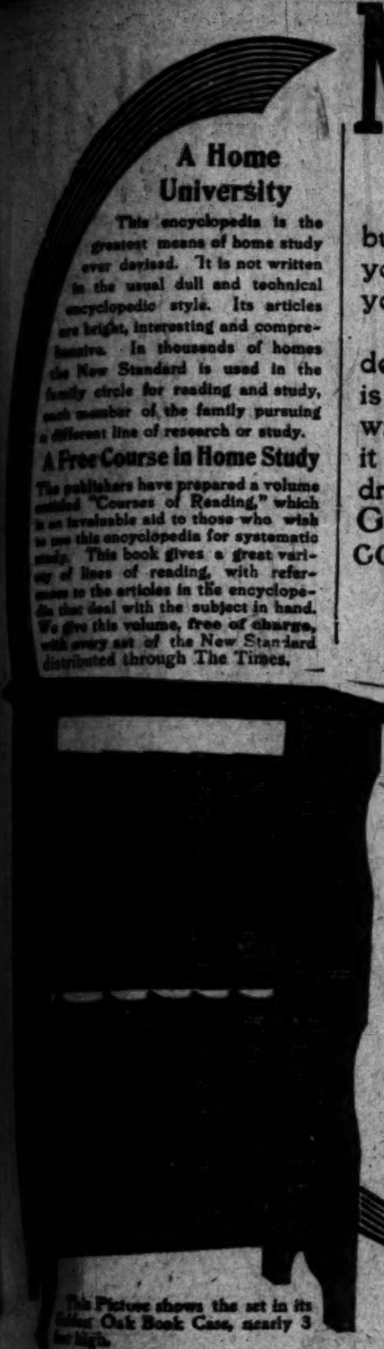
But a good encyclopedia is not an expense. It is an investment, and its practical value depends on the use you make of it after you buy it. It is not a collection of volumes that is intended to be read and put away; it is a daily necessity, like a telephone or typewriter, or a dining table. The practical value of an encyclopedia is enormous, for with it at your elbow you can draw upon the accumulated knowledge of the world like a man drawing upon a bank where his deposit never runs out. That is why THE LOS ANGELES TIMES makes the New Standard Encyclopedia the cornerstone of its recently inaugurated educational movement.

The Los Angeles Times Offers

THE NEW STANDARD ENCYCLOPEDIA

at Half-price and on Easy Terms

The New Standard Encyclopedia is simply a college in a book case. In its twelve volumes sixty thousand subjects are treated, covering everything about which man has ever thought. It is the work of more than two hundred eminent contributors and revisers—not literary hack-writers—but men and women of the highest standing in science, law, medicine, literature, art, politics, journalism, finance, and all other professions and spheres of effort. The entire set contains 9,000 beautifully printed pages, 3,000 illustrations in black-and-white, and 150 maps and plates in colors.



This Picture shows the set in its Golden Oak Book Case, nearly 3 feet high.

Why The Times Can Cut the Price in Two

Next to the cost of manufacture, the largest expense of any publishing house is the cost of selling. This amounts, on the average, to more than fifty per cent. of the selling price of the ordinary book. For instance, a book for which you pay two dollars does not cost more than seventy-five cents to manufacture, but it costs you two dollars because everybody who handles it must make a profit on it, and advertising bills must be paid.

In the case of the New Standard Encyclopedia, distributed by The Los Angeles Times, much of this expense is eliminated: The Times does its own advertising, and sells to its own readers direct so there are no middleman's profits to be tacked on, and the set is sold at little more than the cost of printing and handling.

This is your golden opportunity to obtain the greatest of encyclopedias at a tremendous reduction in price. Don't let it pass.

Talks on Snake Culture

The Long Vacation

The hero of this matter-of-fact narrative is going to spend six years in retirement at the state penitentiary of California, and all mail should be addressed in care of the warden. He is a man of ability and attainments, and, while still young, distinguished himself as a civil engineer. He also distinguished himself as a consumer of booze. Things came to such a pass with him, eventually, that all the engineering he did was to get another drink, and he finally became a general nuisance in his own town. The citizens took turns at trying to get him to brace up, knowing that he was naturally a good fellow, of first-class talents, but he was wedded to his wet idols, and he was impervious to admonition or entreaty. One day, having emptied a squadron of bottles, and being in festive mood, he decided to enjoy a buggy ride, and helped himself to the first rig that he saw standing in the street. He enjoyed himself driving around the village, noting the substantial improvements, and at the end of two hours was overtaken by a policeman, who embraced him and carried him off to jail. He was charged with horse stealing, and sentenced to six years at hard labor. It's pretty fierce punishment, you say, gentle reader; but when a man makes a public nuisance of himself he must take whatever is handed to him.

entific centers, have, during the past few weeks, come to this country to visit Prof. Benedict's laboratory and to witness for themselves the wonders he has worked.

It is also understood that a number of institutions of learning will send delegations to Boston to observe the intricate energy machines in use.

Undertaken with the idea of studying nutrition problems, the step of Prof. Benedict's research has been extended until now, with his machines, there probably is no disease or condition of the human body which cannot be accurately studied and intelligently treated.

CAGE FOR WHOLE FAMILY.

The machines do away with all guesswork and inaccuracies. Several forms of energy meters have been built by Prof. Benedict, and other forms are now in process of construction. There are the respiration meters, the first to be built; "bed" meters, which are shaped and look like great coffins, and in which sick persons may lie with comfort, a glass window at the head enabling the one inside to look into the room, and many others.

One of the most interesting is the "work" machine. Inside this the subject may carry on his daily work, while the energy used in the operation is recorded.

Another form, not yet completed, is devised to hold an entire family—husband, wife and children. In this meter, the food consumed by each member of the family and the resulting energy will be noted, the experiments being noted for each individual and for the family as a whole.

Usually the man upon whom the experiments are made remains in the chamber four days and nights. The interior of the chamber is copper-walled. An opening at the front serves as a door and a window. A smaller door at the side, called the food aperture, having tightly-fitting caps at both ends, is used for passing food and drink. Inside there is a telephone, by which the subjects may communicate with those outside. Generally the chamber is furnished with a table, chair and bed.

The subject inside is under the constant observation of a physician. The pulse rate is recorded by an ingenious apparatus known as the Fitz pneumograph, which is adjusted about the chest and connected with the observation table outside, where a needle, working over smoked paper, makes a record of each heart beat. A similar contrivance shows each breath taken.

During the investigation it was found desirable that occasional blood tests be made. The problem of how a sample of the patient's blood could be obtained without opening the chamber and letting in the outside air was the cause of considerable experimenting. Finally it was solved by running a rubber tube into the chamber. At the end of the tube there was a thimble-like arrangement into which the patient is told to quickly thrust his finger. That operation leaves a drop of blood in the thimble, which can be quickly withdrawn without changing the air inside.

All food given the subject is first weighed and analyzed. The heat, respiratory gases, and moisture are all carefully measured.

In nearly all cases the men experimented with have worn a union suit and a pair of stockings, the average weight of which has been 483 grams. Circulation of air in the chahmber is by a special pump, which measures the amount sent in and at regular intervals draws measured samples of the outgoing air for analysis.

A large number of men from various walks of life have been drawn by Prof. Benedict for his own experiments. Some have been men whose daily work called into play the body muscles, while others were chosen from men who earn their livelihood by mental efforts.

New German Compass.

A new compass has been adopted by the German government for its warships. A nine-pound wheel mounted in a holder of quicksilver is made to rotate at the rate of 21,000 revolutions a minute by an electric motor. After runn' g for two hours the wheel is set in the direction of the mathematical meridian, which direction it maintains. The advantage of the new compass is that it is entirely unaffected by neighboring iron or steel, or by vibrations and rolling of the vessel. A compass card attached indicates direction in the usual way.—[Des Moines Register.

DIZZY STYLES

HEAVY JOLTS FOR VAIN MEN.

Dress Suits in Blue and in Gray "Right" Now.

Shirts That Sing and Ties That Almost Talk.

Loud Vests and Trousers That Cling Are Correct.

Freaks in frocks are here with the fall season!

They stare from every male sultitorium, from haberdashery shops and from department store windows!

The most jolting jar comes from the men's "sky pieces." A man who hasn't a plush hat (cost, $6 to $10 per, which will keep them from getting common,) is not in the swim. The plush hats are of Alpine pattern, broad of rim, with a very high ribbon band and just a peep of a crown. For those who can't afford the real plush, there are near-plush hats. These are designated as beavers and are also rather high for the man working for $12 or $15 per week. For this class, a near-beaver—fuzzy, woolly, and which looks like the real thing—can be passed off on the unsophisticated, but it is not to undergo the scrutiny of a sartorial artist. Caps are also the rage. Every haberdasher is showing a complete line of caps—auto, yachting and rubber caps.

Shoes have been made expressly for the purpose of protecting male inhabitants of Los Angeles from cold and damp feet during the rainy season. The old-fashioned, extension sole is back. One extension signifies this season's shoe, while a double extension signifies class. The extensions are guaranteed to afford perfect safety in attempting to cross some of the downtown streets after a heavy rain. It is not necessary to wall through the water, but the extension sole forms a raft. With an umbrella as propellor, any water hole on Broadway, Spring or Main street can safely be navigated colored dress suit. The bell has tolled for the two-cylinder blacks, too common at every event of society.

Men moHists of extreme tastes have issued their decree throughout the country, and the first smart events of the season have already left a great portion of the male contingent present, gasping. Dress suits in pearl gray, in dark blue and even in soft smoothly shining turquoise blue are here.

If women can wear anything from a carmine red to a canary yellow, why can't men do the same? They will in the future.

No more may a man purchase a dress suit at the age of 20 and wear it until he's 40, merely because it's black—and who can tell the difference in cut?

The blue dress suit is right-to-the-minute in men's apparel. Beau Brummel has issued his decree. It's up to the fashionable dressers, whether they would be true "blue points," or belong to the common herd. Mark Twain and Harry Lehr will no more be the extremes, but will merely be classed with the "bunch" that desire to get away from the bondage that has made them equal—in appearance, at least—with the man who rushes the "ham and" at the fashionable hotels.

Then, if blue isn't right to the taste, there's gray. Some of the Spring-street tailors are showing handsome Quaker grays, imported goods, naturally, expressly for dress suitings. David Graham Phillips and Robert Chambers, perpetrators of picture men, are now introducing their heroes, at all of their smart affairs, in gay suits, suits, that "set superbly on his athletic shoulders and drape with becomingness to his supple waist."

THE ACCESSORIES.

Then, there are the adjuncts of the dress suit—vests, ties, hosiery and jewelry. The blue dress must naturally have a blue setting. Vest should be of pale, shimmery silk, to match the braiding on the trousers. The tie must be of the same delicate color and the hosiery, of gossamer thinness, must harmonize to the exact shade. Buttons should be of turquoise or of agate. Silver shades to go with gray is the dictum. Suede or patent leather pumps are essential and the gun metal is considered "passe." For real style and elegance our chappies will need to accumulate several suits of different shades, one for each evening, of the week.

For many men, who cannot think of dress suits—who have a hard time to think of one suit a season, for ordinary wear—there are things to consider. The dear ladies have caused the price of hair to go so high, that tailors are forced to pay more for padding. Rather than use plain excelsior or sawdust, the cutters have decided that large shoulders must go. The coats will therefore be brought nearer to nature—or get down to the skin.

The man who hasn't cultivated Jim Jeffries proportions about the upper body, will be in style. Coast must not be too long, just about thirty inches, and, instead of having scalloped pockets, a mere slit will designate the carrying place of countless objects that find their way into every man's possession.

With the narrow coats, narrow trousers are essential. It's farewell to the wide pantaloons of the college boy and back to the tight trousers of the Websterian period. Very little knowledge as to trousers is obtainable. It's all about coats and vests.

The vests are a scream! Any color will do! The more peculiar the cut, the more nobby the wearer. One button vests and five-button vests are permissable. Sartorially speaking, vests are to each man's taste and not to any decreed fashion. They may be braided, or have just dainty cord running from shoulder to point and around the pockets.

STYLES IN "SKY PIECES."

The North Pole fad is carried to without the least fear of accidental drowning.

Shoes for dress occasions have suede or cloth tops. These tops can readily be made to harmonize with the hosiery and ties which are worn, or if only one pair of such shoes are purchased, the hosiery and ties will necessarily have to harmonize with the tops. Black is not to be all the style. There are green, brown, red and gray patent leather shoes on the market. Also these shades are obtainable in suede.

SHIRT COLORS.

Violent yellow, prune purple, bottle green and baby pink are just a few shades of nobby shirts. Stripes of intermingling colors, the greater the contrast the better the design, will also be quite proper.

Ties are about the only portion of male attire, that will not be striped, checked or mottled. Ties and hose must be of solid color. With all these suggestions, it is "on with the march of sartorial progress." Who will get the first, and create the greatest furor?

Abnormally Colored Tigers.

An eight-foot eight-inch tigress with an abnormally colored coat was recently shot in Murhi subdivisional forest of the Dhenkanal State, in Orisso. The ground color was pure white, while the stripes were a deep reddish black. The tigress was in good condition, so the unusual coloring was not due to disease.

Abnormally colored tigers are rare. In 1899 two well-grown white tigers were shot on the Jaipur tea estate in the Debroghur district within a short time. It was reasonably supposed that they were little brothers, the stripes in either case being so faint that they could only be seen in certain lights. The only black tiger on record is one that was shot many years ago in the Chittagong district.—[Bailey's Magazine.

Land Is Level—Ready for the Plow—Rich Silt Deposit

The Corcoran District is one of the best known agricultural sections of the State—it is the home of alfalfa and dairying successes—sugar beets, grapes, asparagus, grain, vegetables, poultry, etc., thrive to perfection. The Corcoran District is not in the experimental stage—its reputation is MADE. The name Corcoran is synonymous with successful ranching. Tomorrow a fertile tract of land adjacent to the rich, improved Corcoran lands goes on sale at $30 per acre and upwards. The tract is a big stock ranch—never before subdivided—virgin soil, as rich as can be found in the State. Covered with luxuriant growth of wild grasses. Right on Santa Fe Railroad. Water without end and easily developed. Land values at Corcoran have increased from $35 per acre to as high as $100 to $200 per acre. Here is a parallel proposition. It is just what Corcoran was three years ago. The markets are calling for alfalfa, butter, eggs, cattle and hogs. Prices are going higher and higher. NOW is the time to step in and secure the finest alfalfa land in the State at absurdly low prices. $30 PER ACRE is simply our opening price. Call tomorrow (or write) for reservations for our special land opening excursion Tuesday evening; through Pullman sleeper direct to Corcoran. number of colonists increased greatly, but the class has improved, financially, and the homeseeker of today comes prepared to buy, and improve, until he has an established income that attracts the titled fortune seekers from the continent of Europe.

THEY GET AHEAD.

C. L. Dennen, now a resident of the San Joaquin Valley, was among the earliest colonists to settle in Southern California, as a result of the enticing rates made to this State. Twenty years ago he bought twenty acres, making a $10 cash payment. His land cannot be bought today for $200 an acre, and he is a comparatively wealthy man.

Others have been more or less fortunate; the greater number have been of the class that make desirable settlers, and contribute to the upbuilding of the community in which they live.

Women, too, have formed a part of the colonist throng and have unaided played their part in the State's development.

From the rate war of 1871 grew the colonist rate of the present day; recent restricted conditions have fixed a set rate and a definite time for the travel. Originally, running for thirty days in the spring and thirty in the fall, it has developed into a yearly proposition of thirty or sixty days in the fall. Until this year, the time was sixty days; the season just closed, thirty. Next year it may be thirty or sixty, as the transcontinental passenger bureau deems advisable.

Old timers say the going was something fierce under the 50-cent rate. From thirteen to thirty solid cars of baggage was handled daily during the two days the rate was in effect. The colonist went to the agent at Kansas City and deposited $25 (this was to keep undesirables out of the State,) and on reaching Los Angeles $24.50 was refunded. They were home

C. L. Dennes, now a resident of the San Joaquin Valley, was among the earliest colonists to settle in Southern California, as a result of the enormous rates made by this State. Twenty years ago he bought twenty acres, making a $10 cash payment. His land could be bought today for $200 an acre, and he is a comparatively wealthy man.

There have been more or less forecasts, the greater number have been of the kind that make desirable settlers and contribute to the upbuilding of the community in which they locate, who, have formed a part of the colonist farmer and have, unaided, made their part in the State's development.

Since the rate war of 1887 grew the present rate of the present day; restrictive conditions have fixed dates and a definite time for this rate. Originally, running for thirty days in the spring and thirty in the fall, it has developed into a yearly proposition of thirty or sixty days in each way. Until this year, the time was thirty days; the season just closed, was sixty. Next year it may be thirty or ninety, as the transcontinental passenger lines deems advisable.

FIFTY-CENT GOING.

During the going was somewhat under the 50-cent rate. Fifteen to thirty solid cars of colonists were handled daily during the sixty days the rate was in effect. The colonist went to the agent at Kansas City and deposited $25 (this was to be deducted out of the State,) on reaching Los Angeles $24.50 was refunded. They were homebuilders in the truest sense, and Los Angeles was the distributing point for all of them. Today the colonists branch off at Riverside, or San Bernardino, or Redlands, or other points, and scatter over the southern part of the State, or go into San Francisco, via the northern gateways, and drift to destinations from the Golden Gate. But the essential part of the matter is that they are coming to California and in such constantly increasing numbers that all of the railroads are already preparing for the greatest business of their history, next season. For the past three or four years there has been talk of abandoning the rate and making colonist seasons a memory. This is unlikely, say local railroad men, as this is a very lucrative branch of the traffic.

Noteworthy is the fact that while the colonist season ended the 15th inst., and the last coaches of which will reach this city Monday and Tuesday, the inflow of colonists has not ended by a large number, and for the next two or three months, from all indications, homeseekers will arrive on all regular trains, paying regular rates, but anxious to reach this land of perpetual sunshine and glittering opportunity. This traffic, with the regular tourist business, which is starting in earlier than ever before, will necessitate a large amount of additional equipment, much of which has been ordered. Everything that is possibly of use has been put through the shops and is bearing its share of the human burden, but the need for passenger equipment is urgent, and all lines are doing the utmost to gather together coaches for winter travel. By next season many new coaches will have been turned out for the various lines and the roads will be in better position to handle the expected business. New records were set this season, and these in turn, are expected to be broken next year.

Pasteboard Harder Than Wood.

Rifle bullets that go through five inches of wood do not penetrate three inches of pasteboard. That is the result of some interesting firing tests by the Swedish naval authorities at the fortress of Karlskrona.

The target used was prepared of millboard, against which fire from revolvers, rifles, carbines and machine guns was directed. The pasteboard, which was three inches in thickness, resisted completely the bullets fired from the small arms, but was perforated by the projectiles from the machine guns.—[Detroit News.

LIFE OF A BASEBALL SCOUT.

Major League Representatives Must Be Able to Pick Real Stars and Negotiate Deals.

The life of a baseball "scout" is no "joy party," if the word of Fred Lake, manager of the Boston American League team, is to be taken for anything. He has been quoted as follows on the subject:

"About one of these chaps in a hundred lands a scouting job, and that one usually lands it because the particular owner he is applying to is hard up for some one to do scouting duty and will grasp at a straw.

"The only men qualified for duty as scouts, according to my way of thinking, are old-time players or managers who have seen the national game from all angles. Men like Pop Anson, Pat Donovan and Tom McCarthy make admirable scouts, because they have seen all sorts of ball players, have been in all sorts of ball games and know from actual experience just what a player must be capable of before he can hope to hold down a position in a major league line-up.

"A major league scout may be a fine judge of baseball talent and may be able to size up a winner in the bushes at a glance and yet be a flat failure as a scout. This same scout that is such an expert judge of players must also be a diplomat if he is to succeed. A baseball scout needs as much diplomacy as a foreign ambassador.

"Oftentimes a scout may see major league qualities in a young player that have wholly escaped the notice of the manager of the club the lad happens to be playing with. Then if Mr. Scout can go about it in a diplomatic way he can oftentimes secure the young player for a reasonable sum and land him without any delay. If Mr. Scout hasn't any such attribute as diplomacy up his sleeve he will probably blunder up to the manager or owner of the club where the youngster plays, tell him his business and try to buy the player.

"Thereupon Mr. Minor League Manager will tighten up like a clam, refuse to sell the player for less than $10,000 or more and spring a lot of yarns about seven or eight other clubs being after the player just as fast as he can think them up.

"Another thing a scout must be able to do, and that is to refrain from picking up a bunch of lemons to turn over to his employers. A scout must be able to tell a nine-day wonder from the real young star every time.

"It isn't always the star players that a real scout is watching in these minor league games. Oftentimes things will be breaking badly for some young fellow, who is working harder and covering more ground than a half dozen of the other players. His batting may be of the lowest, and yet he may be the best looking youngster on the team."

Mrs. A. was more shocked than amused when, in reply to her question, "Who was at Sunday-school this morning?" her 4-year-old daughter said, "Everybody but Jesus."

"Why, my dear," said Mrs. A., "where did you ever get such an idea?"

"He was out visiting this morning" the little lady confidently said.

"Daughter," said Mrs. A., "who told you such a story?"

"Nobody didn't tell me, mother, but they kept singing it over and over again, 'Jesus is calling. He's calling today.'"—[Success Magazine.

CREMATION OF GARBAGE INSURES HEALTH OF CITY

Timothy Carroll, who cleared the city of San Francisco of its debris following the disaster, after engineers from the four corners of the earth had failed to solve the problem, has invented a garbage and rubbish crematory, which, if adopted by the City Council, will solve for all time the question of disposing of the refuse of Los Angeles.

Mr. Carroll is one of the pioneers of Southern California, having lived here for more than 40 years. He invented the Carroll beet dump which is now being used by practically all of the beet factories of the West today. The beet question had become a serious one in the eyes of the farmers. They were refusing to put in any more beet crops because of the waste of time and loss of money required in standing in line many hours to unload by hand to the freight cars.

Carroll's dump solved the problem and made possible one of the greatest industries of the West.

His ideas were practical. He invented a dump that would work without power of any kind being necessary. One man recently unloaded 1800 beets in a day of 10 hours and screened the dirt from the beets. Carroll is one of the most practical and useful inventors of the world today. His inventions make good because they apply to the useful and necessary things of life. He cleaned up San Francisco in an absurdly short time, filling more than 20 acres of tide lands with the refuse.

His latest idea is a crematory for the destruction of the garbage and rubbish of the city. Los Angeles is growing at a great rate. Homes are being erected in all sections of the city and county. More territory is being added. Within the next five years it is predicted that the population will have doubled that of today. Now what will the people do with the garbage? They will not stand for the hog ranches. This was proven recently at a meeting of the Sixth-Warders and Vernonites who framed a resolution to the Board of Public Works, protesting against the feeding of the hogs with garbage, swill, dead fish and offal from the city. During the meeting the stench from the hog ranches was so great that it was necessary to keep the windows closed. This practically marks the end of the hog ranching business in the immediate vicinity of Los Angeles. On the other hand. Are the people willing to risk their lives in eating pork, raised on dead and rotten fish, swill, garbage and the decayed stuff from the garbage cans? In the East they raise hogs on corn; they don't feed them the decaying remains of animals and fish. Are the people willing to sacrifice their health for the sake of feeding the hogs? The pork comes right back to the tables, a menance to health. Great plagues spring from such conditions.

There is only one sane way to handle garbage and rubbish and that it to burn it. There is only one sane way of burning it and that is with a crematory that will actually burn garbage. The hog proposition is becoming a menace and will not be tolerated long. To show what may happen to hogs, the following data is given. In 1891 Wesley Robinson had a hog ranch in Boyle Heights. He fed 520 hogs with swill hauled from Los Angeles markets and bowel disease broke out. Every hog died within a week from ptomaine poisoning.

In 1890 Joseph Swope, hog rancher at Cienega station, fed 480 hogs with swill from a Los Angeles restaurant. Bowel disease resulted and all the hogs died within a week. The same trouble played havoc among other hog ranches.

Hog cholera cleans everything before it.

What would be done with the garbage of Los Angeles in case all the hogs should be killed off by epidemic within a period of 36 hours?

These questions are vital to the health of a great city. It's a duty we owe ourselves to keep out plague and protect our children from disease.

The best way to do that is to destroy the causes of pestilence. The crematory is the only solution of the garbage and rubbish question and at last we have one that will do the work at a ridiculously small cost to the city of Los Angeles. The crematory now in use does not do the work and is operated at a heavy expense.

The Carroll crematory is built upon the same hard, practical lines that made the Carroll dump one of the most useful inventions of the age. In the first place, the wagons for the collection of garbage advance the process a great stride. These wagons have a patent tank beneath the bed. The jolting of the heavy garbage en route to the crematory crushes the water out of the garbage. This water drains into the tank and can be emptied direct to a sewer.

At the crematory, the wagon is driven upon the Carroll dump and the garbage or rubbish sent into the furnace below. The wagons can be emptied in less than 15 seconds, and drive off for another load. This crematory will also destroy dead animals.

The present incinerator handles wet garbage and rubbish direct on the fires, and as a result the incinerator is a failure. The water from the garbage puts out the fire.

Here is the process of the Carroll Crematory. The wagon dumps its load down from the platform at the side of the furnace. The horses are not compelled to go over the hot lid of the seething mass beneath. If the load be of dry rubbish, it slides down into the hot fire direct through the opening in the center. If it be wet garbage, it is partly dry before reaching the crematory, the water having been drained off in the wagon tank and by an arrangement of the hopper, the garbage is dumped into the grates at the sides of the furnace chamber. The garbage is dumped from the side of the wagon, so that in falling it spreads over the full length of the furnace and not in a pile, as is done at the present incinerator. The damp garbage is held suspended above the fire by a system of grate tubes. As the heat from below dries and singes it, it falls into the fire, where it is consumed and furnishes additional heat for the drying and burning of the garbage above. A receptacle beneath the furnace catches the ashes, an elevator lifts them, and they are screened and ready for shipment and sale as fertilizer. The heat from the incinerator can also be utilized in generating power for whatever purpose the city sees fit.

What are we going to do? Are we going to permit the dumping of rubbish along the river bank, where the dirt and smoke is a constant menace to health? Are we going to establish stinking hog ranches about the country to handle the swill of the communities of Greater Los Angeles, from the mountains to the sea? Are we going to buy these scavenger-fed animals and feed them to our families at the peril of our lives? Cholera whisked off thousands of hogs in the vicinity of Los Angeles at a date not so long past. It may do the same at any time.

Or are we going to consider the merits of a crematory that will handle the filth, rubbish and garbage of a great city in a sanitary manner and at a cost of erection and operation that can be paid for by the sale of the fertilizer before many years have passed? These plants can be erected anywhere, and keep the community clean and free from germ-breeding rubbish and garbage piles.

It's up to you, Mr. Citizen. Just take a minute and think it over.

ECKELS'S FINANCIAL STRUGGLE HAD CLIMAX WITH HIS DEATH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The financial straits in which the late James H. Eckels, president of the Commercial National Bank, and at one time Comptroller of the Currency, struggled for several years, and which came to a climax with his sudden death April 14, 1907, were further disclosed by an exhaustive examination of the records of the Probate Court. Additional claims against the estate which, if allowed, would bring the indebtedness of the estate close to a million and a quarter dollars, and several transactions which showed Mr. Eckels's efforts during the last few months of his life to stem the tide of financial difficulties, were revealed.

The claims which originally were filed against the estate and which were disclosed today, are as follows: William Salomon & Co., $56,904.21; The Securities Corporation, $10,000; National City Bank, New York, $82,771.88.

The claim of the National City Bank, as appears, was filed July 12, 1908, three weeks after a previous claim for the same amount had been filed. The first claim was filed on June 24, the final date for the filing of claims. This claim was allowed by Judge Cutting. The second claim was filed, according to the records, after the final date and was not allowed. The claim of the securities company was continued for hearing a number of times, and subsequently was dismissed October 8, 1908. The disposition of the claim of Salomon & Co. does not appear in the records.

The petition of John P. Hopkins, formerly Mayor of Chicago, in support of a claim against the estate for $39,-665, charges Mr. Eckels with "wrongful conversion" of a portion of the collateral the latter had pledged to secure a loan of $35,000. The petition states that Mr. Eckels gave 350 shares of capital stock of the Universal Adding Machine Company as collateral, and subsequently secured the return of the stock on the plea that the company was to be reorganized, and that the stock was to be exchanged for stock in the reorganized company. Mr. Eckels was to return this new stock to Mr. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins states that he requested the return of the stock in November and December, 1906, but Mr. Eckels pleaded delay in returning the collateral on the ground that the reorganization of the company had been held up temporarily.

Appearance of Treasury Agent Before Federal Grand Jury Tip That Prosecutions Are Imminent—Evidence of Checkers and Weighers to Be Used to Fasten Complicity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It became known yesterday through the appearance of former Special Treasury Agent Brasinsky as a witness before the Federal grand jury that the government purposes to punish high officials of the American Sugar Refining Company for complicity in the long-continued fraud practiced at the Havemeyer and Elder docks in Brooklyn.

It is also understood that several of the weighers and checkers under indictment for conspiracy to defraud the government out of customs duties on sugar, through false weighing, at present awaiting trial, have decided to tell all they know about the fraud so as to escape terms in prison.

As the government prosecutors expect, through Brasinsky's disclosures and the evidence of the checkers and the weighers, to fasten complicity in the frauds upon high sugar trust officials, they today declined to discuss the new development or the grand jury investigation.

Brasinsky, while a special treasury agent, with Richard Parr, another government detective, took part in the raid of November 20, 1903, at the Williamsburg docks, which disclosed the scheme by which the government was being defrauded, and which resulted in the seizure of seventeen sets of platform scales that had been tampered with.

Butterick Publishing Company Preparing to Take Over Ridgway Property at Once.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stories to the effect that the Butterick Publishing Company is about to absorb the Ridgway Publishing Company, publishers of Everybody's Magazine, were confirmed tonight by George W. Wilder, president of the Butterick concern.

"It is true that the Butterick Company is about to take over the Ridgway concern," said Mr. Wilder. "We have had an option on the stock and there will be a meeting of the stockholders of our company on Tuesday to vote on the proposition of increasing our capital stock to $3,000,000 to acquire the Ridgway company. There is absolutely no doubt that the plan will go through. There is no truth in the story that I will retire from the presidency of the Butterick Company or that Mr. Ridgway will succeed me. He will continue in the active management of Everybody's Magazine and the Butterick Company will have gained for its other publications his expert knowledge and advice. In return the Ridgway Company will have the benefit of the Butterick Company's complete magazine plant."

Everybody's Magazine has long been known for its so-called "muck-raking crusades." In magazine circles it is believed that the Butterick Company will conduct it on more conservative lines.

W. D. Newerf of the W. D. Newerf Rubber Company expects to go to San Francisco today on business, and also to take in the festivities of Portola week. Frank Carroll, connected with the San Francisco establishment of the Newerf company, was in Los Angeles several days recently. Russell Sampson has been added to the sales force of the company.

SNUBBED THE IGORROTES.

Exposition Officials Would Not Invite Them to the Grand Farewell Ball.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Eddie Foy, the comedian, and Miss Columbia, the belle of the Eskimo village at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, led the grand march at 2 o'clock this morning at a ball given as a farewell to performers, at "Pay Streak" amusement houses. Members of every theatrical company now appearing at Seattle playhouses mingled with dancers from the Streets of Cairo, the Spanish Theater, the Eskimo and the Japanese villages. The negro troupe at the Dixie Concession and the Igorrotes were the only "Pay Streak" performers who received no invitation to the function. Mr. Foy, who is appearing at the Alhambra in "Mr. Hamlet of Broadway," made the acquaintance of Miss Columbia Friday afternoon, and assured her that he had been an interested spectator at her christening by Mrs. Potter Palmer at the Eskimo Village at the Chicago Exposition sixteen years ago. Music, dances and high-jinks of all nations characterized the merry-making at Dreamland Rink from 2 to 5:30 a.m.

MANUFACTURE OF PINS.

Germany and the United States Are the Largest Producers of These Useful Articles.

Of brass, iron and steel pins between fifteen and sixteen tons (2240 pounds to a ton) are made each week in the United Kingdom. In view of the great difference in the size of the pins, which necessarily affects their weight, it is impossible to calculate how many millions of pins are represented in this output, but the number must be almost incalculable. A great majority of the pins manufactured in the United Kingdom are made in Birmingham by two firms, one of which has been manufacturing pins for over eighty years and the other for about a century. The only other country except the United States which manufactures pins in great quantities is Germany, whose output is said to be about twelve tons per week. A few steel pins are made in France, and the United States makes an enormous quantity of pins. In view of the prominence of the British pin-making industry, comparatively few pins are imported into the United Kingdom. These come from Germany, and, I am informed, are of the cheapest grade; but the aggregate is not more than fifteen tons a year. The chief pin-making countries are the United States, Great Britain, Germany and France.

Of the United Kingdom production, about 25 per cent. is exported by the manufacturers, not including pins purchased by merchants, many of whom undoubtedly buy for export. None of these go to Germany, but large quantities go to the United States and France, while other countries take pins in comparatively small quantities. The pins that are exported to the United States from the United Kingdom come almost exclusively from Birmingham, from the two firms mentioned, and the pins exported from the United Kingdom are almost exclusively pins of the highest grade, and are invoiced at prices as high or, perhaps, higher than pins of American make are sold in wholesale quantities in the United States. In fact, the American market demands on the average a pin far better than the British market, and one cannot buy in the shops in the United Kingdom as good a quality of pins as in the United States. The German pin, it appears, is not as good as the English pin of the best quality, and ranks about with the American pin, although the color of the German pin is said to be a little better.—[Consular Report.

SLEEPING OUTDOORS.

It Is Increasing in the City as Well as in the Country on Housetops.

[Collier's Magazine:] Sleeping out of doors is rapidly increasing, not only in the country, but also on the tops of city houses. Principally it is part of the tremendous crusade against consumption, but the esthetic side of it is worth a mention:

"Night is a dead, monotonous period under a roof; but in the open world it passes lightly, with its stars and dews and perfumes, and the hours are marked by changes in the face of nature. What seems a kind of temporal death to people choked between walls and curtains is only a light and living slumber to the man who sleeps afield. All night long he can hear nature breathing deeply and freely; even as she takes her rest she turns and smiles."

Take the influence of it altogether, on the health, the thought, the character, it is one of the best developments in the methods of living at the present day.

All the deadliest of mineral poisons are kept in the drug store and are prescribed by thousands of doctors and concealed in many innocent looking patent medicines. Many prescriptions if written in civilized English instead of almost illegible Latin scrawls would read like death warrants—slow but certain, DEADLY POISON, that kills the patient before killing the disease. Even the most deadly of weeds are gathered and prepared for the sick man of today and poisonous plants of all descriptions are used to make the vile concoctions that litter the shelves of the drug shop. And this filth of diseased, decaying animal matter and these poisonous weeds of disease-laden swamps and disgusting insect life of plague-stricken lands are all gathered to feed the sick people.

ness and have those awful bearing-down pains, that there is nothing better than an electric belt.

We simply desire to present for your consideration the wonderful effects of electricity upon the human system, when properly applied, the proper mode of its application, and its great curative properties, especially in certain diseases with which men are afflicted. It is a well-known fact that during the past few years wonderful strides have been made in the investigation of the science of electricity. The world is moved by electricity. The whole animal kingdom lives and moves by the power of electricity. In short, electricity is life itself.

$5.00 $5.00

In olden times people overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that our electric belts will permanently overcome any weakness, well-informed people will not hesitate in saying they have been well rewarded. To those who have battered their stomachs with drugs we want them to exercise their judgment and consider that electricity is the greatest power on earth. Quickly puts life and force into whatever it touches. Gives instant relief and never fails to cure rheumatism, backache, kidney, liver and bladder troubles, early decay, night losses, loss of nerve and vigor, nervous debility, constipation, dyspepsia, undevelopment and lost vitality, and all female complications.

Within the past twenty years no other science has so challenged the attention of the civilized world as that of electricity. Through the entire history of the race this subtle fluid, though pervading the very air we breathe and enveloping myriad worlds in its mystic power, has eluded detection. Today no one can predict what are its possibilities. It is believed by many that every form of energy may be traced back to its origin in electricity.

HOW "VITALIZ" RESTORES NERVE LIFE.

Every organ of your body is covered by a network of nerve wires. These nerves convey the power which runs the human machine. The power is called nerve force. Nerve force is nothing but electricity. The reason any organ becomes weak is because the nerves which control it lack electricity, or nerve force, the motive power of your body. This lack of nerve force is shown by weakness of any kind, whether in the stomach, liver, kidneys, heart or other organs.

If your memory is poor, confidence and nerve all gone; sleep restless; if you suffer frequent headache and your eyes are dull and heavy, it shows that your supply of nerve force is depleted.

So many men try to build up nerve force by dosing their stomachs with drugs. It is impossible. What the nerves require is nourishment—nerve food. If there was any nourishment in drugs they might do some good, but you know there is not. Drugs are drugs, stimulants, narcotics, antidotes, poisons, not food—electricity is nerve food—nerve life. It soaks into your nerves and is taken up by them just as a sponge absorbs water. It nourishes and vitalizes the parts which drugs cannot reach.

Every dose of drugs that you put into your stomach weakens your nerves. Every time you kill a pain or an ache—by stupefying the nerves with poisonous drugs—you are hurting them, and any one can see that in time, by steady dosing, your nervous system will be completely broken down.

VITALIZ is a scientific body battery which infuses a steady, unbroken stream of electric life into your nerves and vitals while you sleep. Its influence is powerful, yet soothing and pleasant.

VITALIZ will drive out your pains and aches, renew your strength and ambition and restore your health by giving every organ, every weak or diseased part of your body, power to do its work as nature intended. Where there is plenty of electric energy there can be no pain or disease.

Don't take another dose of drugs. You know they have not helped you. Stop loading your stomach with poisons which eat up your vitality and weaken your heart and nerves.

If you suffer from rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, stomach, kidney, liver or bowel trouble, weakness of any kind, or any nervous or chronic ailment, get VITALIZ—there is health and strength in it for you.

Just Keep Smiling.

Here is a little note from the popular chairman of the Authors' Chapter, who is now on a visit to the city.

What would you Each and All girls do if you were I, and your lips persisted, in spite of all that you could do, in breaking into smiles at people whom you met on the street, in the stores and on the cars, when they were entire strangers to you? And your mother had to keep telling you to remember that you were not President Taft by any means and had no patented right to smile a big, broad, continuous smile at everybody and everything everywhere? If your heart was so brimful of happiness because all of the Each and All members were so lovely to you that the joy just had to bubble over into smiles? What would you do? Take the time to make a rhyme, and spend a dime to reach the clime where the new chapter crew of folks make jokes? (Ask Nahmelyss. I'm blameless.)

I was not in the city a day until I was asked to meet half a dozen prominent people who could give the chapter a great deal of help along some literary line or another. I wondered, as these people were mentioned to me, if the writer girls had any realization of what possibilities lay before them if they could just come forward and say that they want study work and will do their part in making it a success. I have not had any sweeter experience as chairman of the Authors' Chapter than the kindness and readiness with which professional writers have responded to my requests for suggestions and help for the writer girls when it was shown that the girls were really trying to help themselves.

For the Invalid.

M. N., a Palo Alto contributor, sends the following, which describes how the invalid of the family participated in the Halloween festivities.

"We were having a Halloween dinner party downstairs, but the dear invalid sister was not left out, though she could not join us in the dining-room. On the mantel over her fireplace grinned three jack-o'-lanterns, and on the electric light bulb hanging by the bedside was a tissue paper squash blossom.

"As each course was served below, a guest took from the maid, a tray for sister, and carried it up to her. In this way she saw each of them for a moment, without the risk of becoming too tired.

"The first tray that came to her brought crackers and bouillon, the latter having a thin slice of lemon floating in it. Both were served in china painted in a design of yellow violets, and in a tiny glass at one side was a short-stemmed yellow chrysanthemum. The orange-colored menu card upon which was pasted a witch cut from black kindergarten paper, served as an additional note of color.

"The second course, fruit salad (salad before meat is the rule in our house) was served in a little glass plate, which rested on a large yellow grape leaf. A second grape leaf, a brilliant red one, was used as a doily for three narrow strips of bread, and on a third green leaf rested a butter plate with its tiny ball of yellow butter.

"Chicken was the piece de resistance, and it followed on a yellow plate. With it were mashed potato and a spoonful of boiled onion with white sauce. A small triangle of baked Hubbard squash rested on a grape leaf doily.

"Dessert was very pretty. Maple ice cream was served in a candy jack-o'-lantern, such as are sold by confectioners, while at one side, resting in a bed of small autumn leaves, was a most delectable little cake, also from the confectioner's, frosted in shaded yellow and orange, and having on top a miniature squash blossom. A tissue paper squash held chocolate and maple sugar mints.

"The coffee that was circulating below with this course was forbidden the invalid, but she declared the cup of hot water brought last of all was 'grateful, comforting' since it was served by the guest she most loved."

Cultivate Agreeableness.

The happy gift of being agreeable seems to consist, not in one, but in an assemblage of talents tending to communicate delight, and how many are there, who, by easy manners, sweetness of temper, and a variety of other undefinable qualities, possess the power of pleasing without any visible effort, without the aids of wit, wisdom or learning, nay, as it should seem, in their defiance; and this without appearing to know that they possess it?—[Cumberland.

PROGRESS.

NEW PROJECTS ARE MANY.

Proposed Theater to Be One of Finest on Coast.

Capitalist to Build Mansion at Point Loma.

Continued Activity in All the Country Towns.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 16.—To the natural beauty of Point Loma is due the decision of A. B. Schmidt, a wealthy retired business man of St. Louis, to build one of the costliest mansions to be found in Southern California. The house alone is to cost $40,000, while $25,000 is to be expended on the grounds. Architect A. H. Stibolt is now at work on the designs which call for Spanish renaissance architecture with immense flower gardens and terraces. The house will be of reinforced concrete and will overlook the bay. W. S. Keller is the engineer in charge of the concrete work.

Building operations are active in all lines, there being no let up to new projects. One of these is a proposed theater to occupy the southeast corner of Third and C streets, which adjoins the new U. S. Grant Hotel. Arthur Fulkerson, a well-known manager of Los Angeles and San Diego, is having plans prepared and is negotiating with contractors for the erection of the building. It will be one of the handsomest houses to be found on the Coast, and will play independent vaudeville. The cost is not yet known as Fulkerson has not received rough estimates from contractors.

One of the best sales of property made recently was that of the Buckner Apartments at Tenth and F streets sold by M. Hall to August Schults for $20,000.

Many small sales have been made during the last week to settlers, who are here to build homes. J. R. Campbell, who came here from Los Angeles, will build on lots in Reed & Hubble's addition, which he bought of Cordrey & Emery, for $2000. Mrs. Flora Garlick of Los Angeles, bought of the same firm two lots in Whitney's addition for $2000, on which she will build a home. Mrs. Helen Hester, late of Arizona, bought two lots on Kearney avenue, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second streets, for $1200. She will build a $2500 cottage. W. Zimmerman, who came here from Ohio, purchased two lots on Grand avenue, between Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, where he is building a $3000 home.

Porter & Forbes, operators in the building line, have bought a plot of ground, 100x140 feet, at the southeast corner of Twenty-ninth and K streets, upon which they will erect four modern cottages to cost $2200 each. This firm is just completing four similar houses on the corner opposite.

F. D. Isherwood, who came here two weeks ago from Colorado Springs, decided at once that he would become a permanent resident. He purchased of Mrs. Lizzie Walter, a five-room cottage and a lot 34x100 feet at the northeast corner of K and Dodson streets, for $1500.

The Methodists are preparing to build a church at Encanto, a suburb east of the city. It will be a frame building.

A RECORD SUMMER.

LOTS AND GROVES ADVANCING.

REDLANDS, Oct. 16.—During the past summer more real estate has changed hands in and about Redlands than ever before in the history of the foothill city. Both city property and orange acreage changed hands at constantly advancing prices; it being brought home more and more to investors that there is no trouble to turn property at good valuations. Business property is also in demand, and good business blocks are being erected. Real estate men are looking for the biggest season on record this winter.

LaFayette E. Scott has sold to H. Gregory his twenty-acre orange grove at Bryn Mawr. This, one of the best groves in that section, has 1200 perfect trees on it, and in the neighborhood of fifteen acres in full bearing. The place is improved with a five-room house. The price paid was $1700 per acre, or $34,000.

The Green Mountain Farm in Yucaipa Valley, owned for the past three years by G. O. Trausettel, has been sold to O. M. Packard of Los Angeles for $30,000. Mr. Trausettel took in part payment a house and lot in Los Angeles valued at $8000. The tract comprises 320 acres. It is located ten miles from Redlands, and is improved with a stone house, outbuildings and reservoirs. Forty acres are planted to alfalfa. Last year 5000 eucalyptus trees were planted out. Mr. Packard will take possession of the ranch at once, and will plant all of the available land to apples.

L. L. Crosby has purchased an alfalfa ranch on West Colton avenue, paying $11,500. The ranch contains forty acres, and has been the property of Michael Radke. Twenty-five acres are now in alfalfa, and on the property is a cottage and a large barn. In the same transaction Mr. Radke bought of Mr. Crosby a five-acre tract, between San Bernardino and Pioneer avenues. Three acres are in oranges, and the balance is set to deciduous fruits. The property is improved with a five-room cottage.

The Ely and Higgins grove of fourteen acres of navels, on the Heights, has been sold, the purchase price being in the neighborhood of $22,000. The name of the purchaser has not been made public.

R. M. Howland has purchased directly from the owner, K. H. Field, five acres bounded by Walnut, Pacific, Chestnut and Monterey streets. The tract is set to 600 fine Washington navel trees, in full bearing. Mr. Howland contemplates erecting a fine home in one corner of the tract.

Robert Cochrane has bought from Henry L. Graham his home place near the corner of Summit avenue and Cajon street, paying in the neighborhood of $8000. The site is an acre in extent. A. J. Wilson has purchased from A. E. Brock, for $10,000, four lots on Orange street, at the northeast corner of Stuart avenue. The B. G. Holmes residence at No. 345 West Palm avenue has been bought from the Continental Building and Loan Association by the Rev. Heber Rice, for $7500. The residence has eleven rooms and every convenience.

Joseph Wix has purchased from Mrs. L. C. Owens a ten-acre orange grove on Orange street, paying $1500 per acre, or $15,000. The trees are 14 years old. On the place is a seven-room house. As a partial payment, Mrs. Owens took Mr. Wix's property at No. 702 West Chestnut avenue, which she will occupy as a home.

Arthur Sargent has sold to Mrs. Gird of Los Angeles a building site of about three acres on Knoll road, Fountain street and Elizabeth street. The price paid was $5500. Mrs. Gird will erect a handsome home on the property.

The Redlands Investment Company has sold to Brock and Benningsdorf, for $3000, three lots on the southwest corner of Alvarado street and Cypress avenue. The price paid was $3000.

Each week sees a large number of building permits taken out. A. J. Happee and H. A. Boettger will soon begin the erection of a brick and concrete livery stable on Orange street, near the Santa Fé depot, to cost $5000. Dr. B. F. Church is erecting a brick and wood residence on Sunnyside avenue, near Smiley Heights, at a cost of $4500. Miss Julia C. Caldwell is erecting a bungalow on Chestnut avenue, at a cost of $3000. K. C. Wells is erecting a brick store on the north side of West State street, at a cost of $1000. Leon Smith and F. A. Clark have purchased lots at the corner of Buena Vista and Clark streets. Mr. Smith purchased one lot, and will build on it a home. Mr. Clark purchased two, and will build on them to sell.

REALTY STATUS GOOD.

BUSINESS SITES SELL HIGH.

MONROVIA, Oct. 16.—Transfers of business sites constitute the bulk of the week's realty business. The sales reported are: Boyd and Bortels, to F. J. Cornes, a lot on Myrtle avenue, north of Lemon, 53x150 feet, for a consideration of $7500. The purchaser will at once begin the erection of a one-story and basement fireproof building with foundations for a second story when occasion arises. The building, as planned, will cost $12,000.

A. Palmer, to the J. J. Renaker Furniture Company, a business site on Myrtle avenue, between Lemon and Lime, the consideration being $7500. The lot is 53x150 feet, with alley. The purchasers will build a modern, fireproof structure for the conduct of their business. In the past five years these two sites have been sold for less than $1000 each.

John Bartle, to the Blinn Lumber Company, 44 feet frontage on Myrtle avenue, south of Orange, for $3000.

Other deals for business sites pending, with options paid, aggregate $30,000.

The quest for ranch and city property is more active than for the past two years. Purely speculative buying in the flush years from 1902-07 was almost a negligible factor in local dealing. Property was held at reasonable figures and a proportionate cash payment exacted; in fact, a very large percentage of sales were on an all-cash basis. As a result of this conservatism, there have been in this district no foreclosures, no cut-rate or forced sales and the return of financial mobility finds the realty status better than before the shakedown.

"Greenwood," a fifty-acre Bradbury estate subdivision east of city limits, exploitation of which has been held in abeyance for four years, will be placed on the market this fall. Contracts for street improvements costing $50,000, are pending. The tract adjoins Monrovia, has a good water right and is scenically beautiful, one of its most attractive features being a park of gigantic live oaks and sycamores.

MANY HOUSES PLANNED.

EASTERNER BUYS SHOW PLACE.

SOUTH PASADENA, Oct. 16.—Charles H. Kellogg reports the following recent sales: George H. Briggs of Los Angeles to Joseph Rhodes of Pasadena, a lot 50x135 feet, on the northeast corner of Opley street and Avon Place, for $1000 cash. Mr. Rhodes will at once improve with a six-room bungalow.

Frederick Day of Los Angeles to John R. Cooper, lot 50x170 feet on Elm street, 150 feet south of Mission street, for $850 cash. This lot is now being improved with a seven-room cottage. E. P. Bosbyshell to Mrs. Ralph Avery of Oxnaard, lot 60x165 feet, in the Bosbyshell tract, fronting north on Rollins street, two blocks west of Garfield avenue, for $1350. This was a cash transaction.

George H. Briggs of Los Angeles to Joseph F. Rhodes of Pasadena, three lots, each 50x135 feet, on the west side of Avon Place in the Mission tract for $1000 cash each. Mr. Rhodes will at once improve with modern bungalows.

Leading real estate dealers report an active demand for South Pasadena property. The inquiry at present runs largely to unimproved lots, the intending purchaser in most instances being desirous of erecting his own home.

Mrs. George W. Childs of Philadelphia to J. S. Torrance of Pasadena, lot 300x800 feet, at the corner of Buena Vista street and Meridian avenue, improved with an elegant home, and sunken gardens, and one of the show places of Southern California, for a reported consideration of $100,000. It commands a magnificent view of the San Gabriel Valley, and has been bought for a home.

A BUSY WEEK.

HEAVY SALES IN NEW TRACT.

BEAUMONT, Oct. 16.—The week in Beaumont real estate was characterized by the largest volume of business of any similar period since the property was put on the market. This has been due largely to the heavy sales made on the opening of the company's new tract, La Mesa Miravilla, the total in this subdivision alone having reached to date $18,200. Paul Fitzpatrick, formerly of Chicago, has purchased seven and a half acres for $1450. This property adjoins the Cloverly estate of Jane H. Street, who expects to build a fine country home.

A. C. Stower of the Stower Nursery Company has purchased thirteen acres for $1750. This makes over sixty acres that the Stower syndicate has purchased, all of which will be set to apples, cherries, pears and peaches.

The purchaser of the Mellen ranch, C. H. Clemmer, has acquired twenty-nine acres of land adjoining the ranch on the south for a total of about $3800 He will plant to apples and cherries. The property lies along the bank of Edgar Creek.

Mrs. Ida Trenchard has purchased land in Apple Valley for $1250. She has already contracted to plant part of the acreage to eucalyptus trees.

Charles E. Babcock has purchased a lot in the townsite for $175, and Thomas Buckley, a lot in Apple Valley for $707.

The Beaumont Gas Company has been organized with local capital and work has started on the plant. The bonds for the construction of the High and grammar schools have been sold and construction work will start at once.

Origin of Flag.

In an old English manor house, some fourteen miles southwest of Northampton and about six miles northeast of Banbury, may be found today the possible origin of the flag of our country. At Sulgrave Manor and in the beautiful old church at Great Brington is the coat-of-arms of the Washington family, and a glance at its design convinces one that here is the source from which have sprung our Stars and Stripes.

Sulgrave Manor was the home of the Washingtons early in the sixteenth century, having been purchased, with its adjoining lands, by Lawrence Washington in 1539, at the time of Henry VIII's disruption of the monasteries. At the time of the dissolution it was the property of the priory of St. Andrew at Northampton.

The stars above the bars in the Washington arms lend color to the belief that from it our national flag was designed, and it is highly appropriate that it should be so. There is food for thought in looking at the staid old walls of this manor house, buried in a midland county of England, seldom visited, and slowly crumbling to decay, and in realizing that from the lines that still show faintly in the gable was evolved the banner which for more than a hundred years has waved from the flagpoles, from the windows and housetops, and from the battleships and merchantmen of the United States of America.—[Van Nordin Magazine.

Fun for Halloween.

Every boy feels that he has a special right on Halloween night to go out and have some fun. Somehow or other the fun is very apt to be at the expense of other people. It may seem very amusing to take gates off their hinges and hide them; but this is cruel fun, for it makes work for the older people who have to put them back again.

Ringing doorbells is another standing joke that may turn out badly. Some boys once stood a board up against a front door, rang the bell and ran across the street to see what would happen. A woman came to the door with a lighted lamp in her hand, and the board fell against her, smashing the lamp, and setting her on fire, so that she was terribly burned.

There are plenty of ways of having fun without injuring anybody, and a good plan is to get up a Halloween masquerade party. Let every boy hunt up the queerest old clothes he can find and dress in them, so that the others will not know him. If he has not a mask he can rub his face with burnt cork, or paint himself to look like an Indian, doing anything that will make it hard for the other boys to recognize him.—[The Delineator.

Happiness.

The sum of happiness is made up of a thousand details. A little kindness done to one less fortunate gives the heart a beat of pleasure that no millinery or laces or jewels can possibly inspire.

To overcome prejudice is more satisfying than a ten-course dinner.

To subdue a difficulty and smother a selfish desire is to become strong and splendid. If life is worth living at all, it is worth living in a state of progress and improvement.

If we moan and groan, filling the air with dissatisfaction and gloom, we can scarcely hope to partake of much contentment.

All you need is a good thump on the back by some cheerful soul who has faith in you, and promise to yourself that you will face your work and your worries cheerfully.—[Selected.

A Thousand Successful Men.

I have on my desk a list of 1000 successful men of this nation. By "successful" I do not mean mere money-makers, but men who have given us new conceptions of steam, electricity, construction work, education, art, etc. These are the men who influence our moral as well as physical lives. They construct for better things.

How these men started in work is interesting. Their first foothold in work is a fine study.

Three hundred started as farmers' sons.

Two hundred started as messenger boys.

Two hundred were newsboys.

One hundred were printers' apprentices.

One hundred were apprenticed in manufactories.

Fifty began at the bottom of railway work.

Fifty—only fifty—had wealthy parents to give them a start.—[Juvenile Court Record.

Your Attention is Called to These FACTS

Taken from the City Hall Records

From October 1 to October 8, 1909, there were 252 building permits issued for the entire city of Los Angeles, 98 of which, or more than one-third of the entire number, were taken out in the Fifth Ward.

Vermont Square and its vicinity, forming a part of the Fifth Ward, took out more than one-half of all the permits issued for the ward, and more than one-sixth of all the building permits issued for the entire city.

There are about four hundred houses completed and occupied in Vermont Avenue Square (that part of the tract already sold out.)

Thirty-five homes are in course of construction in Vermont Square (the new property) in advance of the completion of cement work.

Vermont Square is the largest tract ever placed on the market in Los Angeles, comprising 52 city blocks—a town in itself.

It is better to buy for home building and investment in a large tract, where you will be fully protected, where you will have plenty of good neighbors owning their own homes, and where values will increase faster than in any other part of the city.

The Board of Education has purchased for the new High School site, ten acres on the west side of Vermont Avenue, between Vermont Avenue and Kansas Avenue, ONLY TWO SHORT BLOCKS FROM VERMONT SQUARE.

A member of the Board of Education announces that the money for the new building has been appropriated from the recent school bond issue, and that work will be begun as soon as the preliminaries are completed.

Doesn't All This Suggest to You

That you had better investigate Vermont Square, where you will find everything as represented, and where all promises are fulfilled? Your time will be profitably spent.

DISCOUNTS for the Home Builder's Benefit — Five per cent. for cash. Five per cent. to the builders of the first five houses in any block, completed within six months from date of purchase.

Vermont Square is on Vernon, Normandie and Western avenues. Take Grand avenue car on Broadway marked "Dalton Avenue," and get off at Forty-fifth street, or take Grand avenue car on Broadway marked "West Forty-eighth Street," and get off at Normandie avenue. Agents in waiting to show the property.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—One hundred and forty years ago a band of Spanish dragoons, in command of Don Gaspar Portola, first sailed into San Francisco harbor and saw the Golden Gate. At the noon hour next Tuesday, in honor of the world leader and of the city which occupies the site first seen by him, the nations of the world will lift their glasses and drink to San Francisco and its future. This toast will be unique in history. It is written by the President of the United States and it will be quaffed by the monarchs of Europe and the far Orient. American Ambassadors and other American citizens living abroad, each its sentiment will be repeated by the school children of all the principal States of the Union. At the Lambs Club in New York, at the clubs of Chicago, and throughout the cantons of population in this country San Francisco will be honored October 19. And this is the toast that President Taft has written for the occasion: "Since Portola looked upon the Golden Gate on the descending sun, San Francisco has become the Imperial City of the Pacific—first, by the energy of a pioneer race and steady growth into the modern metropolis; second, after utter destruction by the greedy flames and in the face of insurmountable obstacles, by a regeneration so splendid and complete as to be the wonder of the world. Union Square, a stage ... is in course of construction for a band of Venetian dancers, who will add a pretty feature to the entertainment. On this promenade during the five nights of the festival one may expect to see a fete different indeed from any other great festival. It is to be in the nature of the famous Parisian boulevard fete and something like the New Orleans Mardi Gras, yet different from both.

Swinging at their anchors in the harbor are the warships of three great nations, and two more are coming this way through the Pacific. The Italian cruiser Calabria, the United Netherlands' cruiser Noordbrabant, and the Japanese cruiser Idsumo, are already here. His Majesty's ship Bedford, and the German warship are expected to drop anchor Sunday morning. As the messengers of good will and the bearers of congratulations from their respective governments the officers and crews of the visiting ships are the honored guests of San Francisco. The Italian, Japanese and Dutch officers were received first by the guns of United States batteries and ships of war in the harbor, and then personally by the members of the Reception Committee, headed by Mayor Taylor.

The Idsumo brought to this city the personal representative of the Mikado of Japan, and a member of his royal family, Prince Tadashige Shimazu, who has extended a most cordial greeting to the citizens of San Francisco and his best wishes for a successful carnival. There will be other notable visitors, such as Jonkheer John Loudon, United States Minister from The Netherlands, and the Marquis de Villalobar. The rank and file of the visitors are pouring in every day, and it is estimated that 250,000 will be here on the opening day. In fact, one of the problems of the festival will be the housing of the enormous influx of visitors.

The festival proper opens Tuesday morning, and closes Saturday evening when Don Gaspar bids farewell to his subjects. The five days have been filled by the committee with entertainment, and the festival will have a broad scope. Every form of diversion and merrymaking has been included—historical pageants, athletic contests in the games of all nations, fireworks and pyrotechnic displays, receptions, balls, banquets, smokers, automobile parades and races, international cutter races, and always illuminations. And during the five days of revelry there will be music in the form of bands and children's voices everywhere.

To the great public the undoubted attractions will be the spectacular and picturesque side of the celebration. This has been carefully worked out and resembles in a way the Hudson-Fulton celebration recently staged in New York. During the five days of the festival the city will be ruled by Don Gaspar Portola in his quaint costume of medieval Spain, assisted by his queen, Vilgilia. In an attempt to depict the original as nearly as possible Don Gaspar will be impersonated by a representative of one of the oldest Spanish families in California, Don Nicholas Covarrubias. Miss Virgilia Bogue was selected as queen, because of her striking beauty, and she will make a worthy ruler.

At 9:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning Don Gaspar will enter the Golden Gate and pass in review of the warships assembled there. Landing at the Ferry he will receive the homage of his people, and from the court of honor he will lead one of the most remarkable and brilliant historical pageants ever seen in this country. In its ranks will be numbered the fighting men of many nations. Spanish Dragoons in glittering uniforms recalling the glories of Spain in the days of old, a detachment of Japanese in picturesque armor and bearing the famed two-edged sword of the Samurai, and marines and sailors from all the warships in the harbor, representing Great Britain, Germany, Italy, The Netherlands, Japan and the United States.

In keeping with the grandeur of the military feature will be the historical representations of California in the missionary days, and some of the natural beauties of the State, which have made her a garden spot in the world. Delegations of fraternal societies and pioneer organizations will also be included.

Wednesday morning the officers of the visiting warships will be taken on a sightseeing expedition, and at 2:30 in the afternoon they will be received on the floor of the Merchants' Exchange by the Executive Committee of the festival. The evening will see a smoker and entertainment tendered to the enlisted men of the visiting fleet by the sailors of the American vessels, and there will also be a great fireworks display at Union Square Park.

Thursday morning another great pageant will wind through the city, this being the civic and industrial procession known as the Portola parade. Fifteen thousand men will be in line, and it is estimated that it will take three hours for the line to pass. Five miles of streets will be filled with uniformed marchers, floats, bands, horses and equipages. More than one hundred California cities and counties will be represented with floats. Displays are coming from as far away as Phoenix, Ariz. A feature will be a Scottish pipe corps in full Highland costume, with mounted chieftains in plaids and bonnets, and the Native Sons and Daughters will take up an entire division.

Thursday evening Don Gaspar Portola and Queen Virgilia will lead a masked ball at Auditorium Hall, for which over 20,000 admissions have already been sold. All dancers must appear in costume, and music will be furnished by a band of fifty pieces. The automobile parade is scheduled for Friday morning, and Saturday big cars from all over the country will speed over the Foothill boulevard, Alameda county, for magnificent prizes. Scattered throughout the week the various amateur and professional athletic contests will prove attractions to many of the younger element.

Saturday evening ushers out the first Portola festival, and Don Gaspar will relinquish his reign amid scenes of festivity and merrymaking. A brilliant historical and electric parade will open the evening. Seven mammoth floats, brilliantly illuminated, will make up the pageant. These will be accompanied by bands and orchestras, and after pursuing the line of march each one of the floats will take up a station at one of the principal intersecting streets. Space will be reserved on the streets for the revelers to dance, music being furnished by the bands until a late hour. When the merriment and carnival spirit are at their height, Don Portola will bid adieu to his subjects and close his week of rule.

CROP YIELDS INCREASING.

Department of Agriculture Shows That the Soil Is Not Wearing Out, But Giving Larger Returns.

[Washington Post:] Soils of the United States are not wearing out and the crop yields are rather increasing than decreasing.

These facts are demonstrated in a bulletin shortly to be issued by the bureau of soils of the Agricultural Department. The bulletin, entitled "A Study of Crop Yields and Soil Composition in Relation to Soil Productivity," was prepared by Prof. Milton Whitney, chief of the bureau. It deals exhaustively with the yields of crops from 1867 to 1906, inclusively.

In conclusion, Prof. Whitney says: "A careful study of the data which have been presented appears to justify two conclusions: First, that the productivity of the newer agricultural soils of the United States and of the older agricultural soils of Europe, taken as a whole and for the nation, are not declining, as is popularly supposed. Individual farming deteriorates and soils wear out, as they have always done, but as a whole it seems probable that we are producing more crops per acre than formerly.

"Second, that so far as our information goes there is apparently no significant difference at the present time between the composition of the old agricultural soils of Europe and the newer agricultural soils of the United States with respect to potash, phosphoric acid, lime and magnesia."

The bulletin shows an increase in all cereal crops throughout the United States for the past three or four decades.

The following averages by States for the production of wheat per acre, from 1866 to 1907, are given:

Vermont, 18.5 bushels; Maine, 16.5 bushels; New York, 15.7; New Jersey, 14.5; Michigan, 14.5; Pennsylvania, 14.5; Ohio, 14.1; Kansas, 13.9; Wisconsin, 13.7; Minnesota, 13.6; Maryland, 13.3; Illinois, 13.2; Nebraska, 13.1; Indiana, 13.1; Delaware, 13.1; California, 12.9; Iowa, 12.4; Missouri, 12.2; Texas, 11.5; West Virginia, 10.6; Montana, 10.5; Virginia, 9.1; Arkansas, 8.9; Tennessee, 8.2; Mississippi, 8.1; Alabama, 7.6; Georgia, 7.1; North Carolina, 6.9; South Carolina, 6.6.

The End of Etiquette.

Prof. Isaac Schwatt, of the University of Pennsylvania, who, besides occupying the chair of mathematics at that institution adds to the gayety of nations by his idiosyncrasis both of speech and manner, is constantly the unconscious author of stories that delight his many friends and students.

During the past year Prof. Schwatt had a class in higher mathematics in which all the students, with a few exceptions, were men. It is the professor's custom to lecture with a large ham sandwich in one hand, from which, to punctuate his flowing periods of eloquence, he takes a large bite. On this day—a particularly warm one—the professor had covered two large blackboards with numerals and was starting on a third, when he paused, and after remarking, "Vimmin eggscuse me," pulled off his cuffs.

Ten minutes later he again ceased figuring and, wiping his steaming brow, looked reproachfully at his girl students in the front row. Suddenly he took a desperate determination.

"Vimmin or no vimmin," he shouted, "Isaac Schwatt takes off his coat. To de pure all tings vas pure."—[Philadelphia Telegraph.

NATURE'S CURE

Most people believe that the only way to cure disorders, or pain of any kind is to swallow a lot of drugs. When you find yourself ailing in any way you run to the drug store and get a bottle of some patent medicine or have your doctor write out a prescription for probably the same stuff under another name. What good does it do? Just stimulates, like whiskey. Couldn't do more than that, for recent exposures have proven that nearly all the drugs you buy are a combination of a lot of alcohol and a little poison. You know alcohol is what makes whiskey such a stimulant. The other poisons that you get in drugs are too numerous to mention. The poisons that are used most frequently are morphine, cocaine, mercury, arsenic and potash. They wreck the nerves and stomach and cause liver, kidney and bowel troubles. Drugs will kill pain all right by stupefying the nerves, but wait until the effect has passed off, the pain returns worse than ever. Then you have to take the drugs again and continue to take it until nature is kind enough to remove the cause of the pain. The only way to cure pain or disease is to help nature. Drugs don't do that. Nature will cure the disease if she has the power. Our appliances will give her that power. If you are sick or ailing in any way it is because of the failure or breaking down of some vital organ. The reason any organ fails to do its work is because it lacks electricity. When it is doing its work right the stomach generates electricity, for the support of the body and itself. When it is not able to generate this needed force it must have aid. This aid is electricity, artificial electricity, as applied by our appliances.

ELECTRO-THERMO DILATORS is a relief from the old system of drugging. It does by natural means what you expect drugs to do by unnatural means. Instead of swallowing a lot of poisonous drugs, which wreck the nerves, use ELECTRO-THERMO DILATORS and feel the soothing, glowing force of electricity penetrating your vitals, giving health and strength to every part. Our appliances are not an electric belt. But are a high-grade Electrical Rectal Dilator and are sold under a positive guarantee, if after thirty days' trial you are not satisfied, return to our office and we will refund the amount paid for same. If you suffer from Constipation, Piles, Insomnia, Lumbago, Nervousness or any complicated ills our appliances will cure you, no detention from business used in your own home. Four dilators and one battery constitute a complete set. If you want to get well and enjoy good health, purchase a set of our appliances and convince yourself of their merits. Don't delay. Call at our office and examine these appliances; consultation strictly confidential. If you cannot call, write for free illustrated booklet.

GETTING GOOD MONEY OUT OF DAIRIES AND HARVESTS.

Modesto, the County Seat of Stanislaus—A City of Many Attractions and Great Possibilities—Openings Roundabout for the Farmer and the Manufacturer. Some of the Citizens Who Are Making Modesto.

BY J. B. SNYDER.

ONE of the progressive and attractive towns of the San Joaquin Valley is Modesto, situated at the head of the valley, 112 miles southeast of San Francisco and 30 miles from tidewater at Stockton. Modesto at present has a population of 5000, but new people are arriving every day, and houses to rent are at premium. It is the county seat of Stanislaus, known as the "Garden County" of the San Joaquin Valley, and is the center of one of the finest agricultural districts in the State.

Modesto is an ideal home city, her improvements being modern and complete in every particular. She enjoys the distinction of having the greatest area of paved streets and sidewalks per capita of any city in the United States, with no end of other attractions. These streets are wide and well shaded, and lined with beautiful homes and gardens. Modesto boasts of a fine school system, and has four modern grammar schools, a high school and a business college; she has churches of almost every denomination, a city library, three theaters, numerous lodges and a woman's improvement club, whose object is the beautifying of the city; a live Board of Trade, with L. L. Dennett as president and E. C. Dozier as secretary. Among those in Modesto who represent what may be called the progressive class, and of whom inquiries may be made regarding the opportunities, are:

Lon J. Coffee, G. A. Perkins, T. J. Wisecarver, Charles Murray, D. C. Matteson, Bert Matteson, W. H. Rice, H. B. Rice, J. W. Bell, Frank Bell, G. R. Stoddard, T. Donkin, Walter Bacon, R. S. Marshall, J. W. Webb, R. B. Gilman, J. D. Harp, S. B. Walthall, F. E. Brinkerhoff, Clay Grider, Van Vlear, H. Murray, J. D. Turner, C. W. Minnear, O. H. Halverson, J. M. Pike, C. T. Jackson, M. H. Noonan, Lowell Gum, E. A. Francis, J. A. Edwards, Z. Drake, F. A. Johnston, D. E. Saunders, A. Oswald, G. W. Perley, C. A. Shacklefford, G. P. Schafer, E. S. Brown, G. D. Bice, C. M. Mase, G. U. Wren, J. M. Hobbs, G. G. Stevens, F. E. Smith, A. R. Sweet, A. F. Donaldson, C. S. Abbott, M. Mayhew, F. A. Cressey, L. L. Dennett, G. H. Bertram.

BUSINESS FACILITIES.

The business of Modesto has kept pace with the growth of the residence section, and the result is seen in solid and thoroughly modern business buildings, occupied by stores which are up-to-date in every particular, and which carry stocks as complete as are found in cities three or four times the size of Modesto. Six banks, two daily newspapers and two large department stores, with lines of business in proportion, represent the mercantile equipment of the city, while industrial enterprises of considerable magnitude, such as power companies, a cannery a creamery, alfalfa meal factory, and other industries show her independence from any one class of resource.

Modesto offers excellent inducements for the location of industries. The city is situated within easy reach of tidewater, and the fact that the Tuolumne River, which flows past Modesto, is classed as navigable by the government, gives Modestans a cheap freight rate on the railroads. Two power companies with main transmission lines direct from the Sierras, furnish motive power for machinery of all kinds. The main line of the Southern Pacific runs through the town, with many trains each day, both freight and passenger. The Modesto Interurban Railway connects with the Santa Fé Railroad, four miles east of Modesto, and a traction line to tidewater is now being promoted, and will undoubtedly be built. Modesto has municipally-owned waterworks, a complete sewer system; in fact, every advantage found in a modern city.

To all of these advantages must be added the climate, which is not surpassed in any part of the State. The climate is temperate both summer and winter, the breezes from San Francisco Bay alleviating the heat common to the interior in the summer. Snow is unknown, and frosts are rare, sunshiny days being the rule. Malaria is unknown, and contagious diseases gain no foothold.

GREAT OUTLET.

Modesto is the outlet for a great farming section, and is bound to rapidly increase in population and wealth. For this reason it offers a desirable field for the investor, and new business opportunities are constantly presented.

The chief asset in Modesto's enviable prosperity and rapid development is the fertile and productive territory immediately surrounding the city. Five years ago Modesto was a wheat town, grain being practically the only product, but a wonderful transformation has been wrought by means of irrigation and a great diversity of products are now raised in the Modesto district.

In the Modesto irrigation district, situated on the banks of the Tuolumne River, whose inexhaustible flow comes from the perennial snows of the high Sierra Nevada Mountains, Modesto is the center of 276,000 acres of irrigated lands. The irrigation is carried on by the district plan, the water being municipally owned by the people of the district, which is formed under the Wright Act and whose workings are similar to those of the school district. There is no charge for the water, but expenses of repairs and maintenance are raised by taxation on all the land, the tax being voted by the people of the district. The source of supply is the Tuolumne River, the water being diverted by a huge masonry dam at La Grange in the foothills of the Sierras.

CANAL SYSTEM.

The Modesto district has a complete system of canals and laterals while a drainage canal across the lower end of the district does away with danger of overflow from seepage water. A storage reservoir now under construction will store 30,000 acre feet of water, assuring an irrigation late in the fall, when the streams are low.

DIVERSIFIED PRODUCTS.

The farmer in the Modesto district has his choice of many crops—whether fruit raising, dairying and gardening. At present the leading industry is dairying, Stanislaus county leading the State in the value of her dairy products. The fruit industry is a close second, however, and leading fruit experts have predicted that Modesto will in a few years be known as the peach center of the State, this fruit thriving better here than in any other section. The apricot, the plum and citrus fruits of all kinds also do well and the fig industry promises to be one of the leading wealth producers of the section in a few years. Berries of all kind are shipped to the city markets from Modesto and strawberries ripen until late in the fall. Modesto is also a grape center and there are about 10,000 acres in the district devoted to grape growing. Among the other products are sweet and Irish potatoes, melons of all kinds, vegetables in unlimited variety, and almonds and walnuts—in fact, everything that will grow in a temperate or semi-tropical climate.

Thus it will be seen that the land owner can devote himself to the product that best suits his fancy. The soil is a sandy loam and easily worked.

A few years ago the land surrounding Modesto was held in large tracts, but the era of the small farmer has come and these tracts are nearly all subdivided into twenty, thirty and forty-acre holdings. Land is still quite reasonable in price, however, and good places can be secured within easy reach of Modesto at from $90 to $150 per acre. The land owns the water under the district plan and there are no water rights to buy. There is no part of the State that has more to offer the homeseeker than the Modesto district and for this reason colonists from all parts of the country are settling here in large numbers.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

At present a great deal of attention is being given to the dairy industry and the raising of alfalfa. Some sell the alfalfa hay to the dairymen or at the alfalfa meal factory at good prices; others prefer to feed the hay direct to the cow, selling the cream. Local creameries offer a home market to the dairyman and the cream wagons call every morning for the product. The Modesto creamery last year produced 650,000 pounds of butter, with a value of $220,000, and this was but a part of the production of the district.

DAIRY PROFITS.

As showing the profits to be derived from dairying in Stanislaus we reproduce the following from the Modesto Morning Herald of August 8, 1908:

We have before us a statement from the books of the Modesto Creamery showing the account of L. W. Hunsucker of near this city for the year ending July 31, 1908.

During his period Mr. Hunsucker milked an average of twenty-five cows. He received net from the creamery, in bi-monthly checks, $2530.10, drew butter for his own use to the market value of $89.39, and paid the creamery for hauling cream $81.39. So the gross returns from the twenty-five cows aggregated $2700.88, an average of $108 per cow.

During the same period Mr. Hunsucker derived $75 from calves from these cows and $130 from the sale of hogs that were reared on the skimmed milk. The hogs brought him $10 a head and in addition to the hogs sold, he killed ten, of a market value of $100, for consumption on the ranch.

The gross value of butterfat, calves and hogs was $2905.88.

That is what dairying mtans in sunny Stanislaus.

Here are the figures from the books of the creamery, showing dates, amount of checks, value of butter withdrawn for personal use, and the amount subtracted for hauling cream:

SEEKS PLACE, LOCKED UP.

Man Calls at Central Police Station, and Queer Things Are Found in His Pockets.

Carlton Bennett Duryea of No. 1470 East Fifty-third street went to the Central Police Station yesterday to apply for the position of the late Capt. Auble. He was locked up on a charge of insanity.

Duryea declared he had invented a corsage, which it would be impossible for any bullet to penetrate. He said he intended to introduce its use in the department.

"I am the greatest shot on the Coast," he told the police surgeons, who examined him, "they ought to have sent me out for Willie Boy."

When searched, his pockets were filled with sticky candy, a toad, and sticks of wood.

GIRLS IN GREAT DEMAND.

The girl supply in Los Angeles seems limited. Large factories are finding it difficult to obtain female help in various departments. Bishop & Company during the last week have advertised every day for girls to learn chocolate dipping, candy manufacture and other branches of that trade, but have been unable to secure sufficient help to start the new chocolate plant in the style intended. In other departments of the same company, wrapping and packing crackers and cookies, in the canning department, and in the general offices there is a lack of woman help. Wages offered are larger than they have ever been, but this seems little inducement in securing the required employés.

No Time for Politics.

Charles Dana Gibson has a drawing in Collier's of a mother with her little daughter on her lap, and underneath is the inscription, "No time for politics." Now let some other equally skilled artist draw a picture of a business man at his desk, with "No time for politics." And again it might be well to have still another drawn of a mechanic tending his machine, or of a carpenter at his bench, or a printer at his case, each one having "No time for politics." And the set can then be completed by showing the ward politician rounding up the bum voters and driving them to the polls, though his motto will be "Plenty of time for politics." It is the lovers of home and family, the workers in office and factory, that must take time for politics, if democracy is to live.—[Detroit News.

Fun for Halloween.

Every boy feels that he has a special right on Halloween night to go out and have some fun. Somehow or other the fun is very apt to be at the expense of other people. It may seem very amusing to take gates off their hinges and hide them; but this is cruel fun, for it makes work for the older people who have to put them back again.

Ringing doorbells is another standing joke that may turn out badly. Some boys once stood a board up against a front door, rang the bell and ran across the street to see what would happen. A woman came to the door with a lighted lamp in her hand, and the board fell against her, smashing the lamp, and setting her on fire, so that she was terribly burned.

There are plenty of ways of having fun without injuring anybody, and a

IN HAWAII.

BLANCHE HALL IN HONOLULU.

LITTLE ACTRESS ENJOYS VACATION ON ISLAND.

Semi-Tropic Climate, Native Hospitality, Sea-Island Cookery and General Air of Peace and Plenty Woo American Player—Mention of Coming Affairs.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Blanche Hall wishes there were kings in Honolulu, and that she had received a royal command to appear there, and to appear for a very extended period.

The little Burbank actress returned the other day from a delightful island outing, and has many interesting experiences to add to her already large stock of reminiscences.

With a friend, Mrs. Lewis R. Works, Miss Hall sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu, September 18.

At the Hawaiian pier she was met by Mr. and Mrs. Churchill Harvey-Elder. Mr. Elder was formerly a member of The Times city staff and is now night editor of the Honolulu Advertiser. "And as a result of finding these old friends," says Miss Hall, "I saw more in my brief vacation for 'rest only' than does a Cook's tourist doing a whole nation.

"I was guest of honor at four dinner parties, two luncheons, two theater parties, a tea and a reception, and besides I attended the big naval ball, met Prince Cupid, the Princess, officials and members of the diplomatic corps, and went to a native picnic at Pearl Harbor, where we ate only ground-cooked, native-made food.

"Pearl Harbor is like a great hand, with the entrance at the wrist and deep water channels extending off, finger fashion, in all directions inland. The fortifications, when completed, will make it practically impossible for a hostile fleet to gain entrance to the bay—so I'm told.

"What did we have to eat? Oh, lots of things. But I think that the fish, rolled in 'ti' leaves and baked in clay, was the daintiest thing of all.

"During my Honolulu stay I lived at the Moana Hotel at Waikiki beach. The bathing is superb. The water is always warm, and the waves are most too polite to be true, almost. These waves never slap you familiarly on the back, but just roll in gently—lazily.

"On the Sunday after our arrival we saw hundreds of men and boys enjoying the truly national sport of surf riding. Their long, narrow surf boards are carried far to sea, and bear a bamboo outrigger. Clambering on, they wait for a wave and come coasting to shore at express train speed.

"At Waikiki beach, also, is the remarkable government aquarium, where there are shown all sorts of native fish, many of them so vividly colored that the reproductions on postcards look absurd until you have seen the fish themselves. There are bright greens, brilliant scarlets, golds, pinks and purples—fishes and colors that they say exi nowhere else in the world.

"One night we attended a minstrel show given at the operahouse by the boys of the West Virginia. It was a good show, too. I was anxious to see the theater, as several friends urged me to return and play there. I shall do it, too—if only for a few performances.

"Honolulu is delightful. I promised to return the very next time I have a vacation, and I shall keep that promise. The climate can't be improved upon. It is warm only for a few hours, and that around noon. The nights are cool, but never chilly. One can ride comfortably in a motor car on any evening without a wrap.

"The sunsets are gorgeous—and the sunrises something beyond that.

"I want to see the other islands, and I want to see Honolulu again. It is a beautiful place of abundant hospitality. I never so thoroughly enjoyed a short vacation before.

"When we came away our friends covered us with 'leis,' and escorted us to the boat. There were hundreds of carnations, ginger flowers and other native blooms, which hung in great wreaths about my neck and down to the bottom of my dress; and they threw flowers into the sea after us as we started on our homeward voyage. It's a pretty custom and typical of Hawaiian hospitality.

Players Prominent

in the productions of the week. Rosario Guerrero, Orpheum star; James Lackaye, in "The Gentleman From Mississippi," at the Mason; Josephine Isleib, Ferris Hartman's new leading woman, at the Grand; Blanche Hall, of the Burbank, who has just returned from Honolulu; Hermione Stone, featured in "Dreamland," at Hamburger's Majestic; Corinne at the Auditorium, and Howard Scott, who is playing a character part in "Old Heidelberg" at the Belasco.

The final preparations for the benefit to be given at the Auditorium on Friday, November 5, by the Theatrical Mechanical Association are about completed and there is every evidence that this benefit, which is the fifth annual affair, will be a success and will net the association a big sum.

The full programme, which will very soon be announced, will this year be an attractive and lengthy one, and practically every professional and every theater in the city will be represented either by an act from the current play or by individual specialties by members of the various companies.

Notwithstanding the fact that the tickets have only been on sale at the various box offices for a few days there is a surprisingly large sale, which has shown the interest being taken in the affair not only by the professional people, but by the theater-going public.

Mr. Hartman promises a new line of musical pieces for this year, produced in an energetic manner by a capable company and with proper scenic and costuming facilities.

In one thing he has been lucky, at least—in the securing of "Jack" Raynes as musical director. Raynes, a modest American artist, has more vim, dash and genuine musical spirit than ninety-nine out of every hundred metropolitan directors, and his absence from the Kolb and Dill ranks, where he has been so long, leaves a quite unfillable gap.

Among the works to be produced early are "The Sultan of Sulu," "The Blue Moon," "The Girl from Kay's," "The Maid and the Mummy," "Woodland," "The Lady from Lane's," "La Cigale," and possibly "The Prince of Pilsen."

The Belasco management has an excellent list of plays lined up for fall and winter production, including such pieces as "The Regeneration"—which will give Lewis Stone a large opportunity—and "The County Chairman," "The Road to Yesterday," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," the Broadhurst plays and several new dramas put on here for try-out purposes.

Marshall Darrach will give a recital of three Shakespearean plays at St. Vincent's College, October 19, 22 and 27.

Mr. Darrach's translations of classic texts, revisions and renditions are well known throughout this country. He has appeared here on several occasions.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

William R. Brady and Joseph Grismer will present "The Gentleman From Mississippi," Tom Wise's comedy, at the Mason Operahouse during the week, commencing tomorrow night. Mr. Wise is still playing his original part in the East, and in the West—here—the role will be taken by James Lackaye, brother of Wilton Lackaye.

Mr. Wise had the assistance of Harrison Rhodes, Anthony Hope's dramatic collaborator, and the work was first produced on Monday, September 21, 1908, in Washington. Mr. Roosevelt was in attendance. "Bully! A ripper!" said he, in his characteristic hearty manner. At another performance President Taft was among those present.

It is declared to be an unusually good comedy-drama of contemporary political life. It is in four acts, all of which are laid in the city of Washington.

The company to be seen here will include James Lackaye, Osborne Searle, Fletcher Harvey, Hal de Forrest, Fred J. Adams, Edwin A. Sparkes, H. Bratton Kennedy, J. P. Winter, Miss Virginia Pearson, Miss Olive Harper, Miss Minnette Barrett and Miss Adelaide Wise.

This afternoon at the Grand Operahouse, Ferris Hartman and his company will make their reappearance, in "The Yankee Consul." During their absence from the Grand this company has visited every city along the Coast and has played engagements in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Oakland, from which point they come direct to Los Angeles.

"The Yankee Consul" is a vehicle of Raymond Hitchcock's, the book of which is by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., and the music by Alfred D. Robyn. In the character of Abijah Booze, the Yankee Consul, Mr. Hartman has found a part which fits him to a nicety. The Consul falls in love with a wealthy San Domingo widow, Donna Teresa, who has one daughter, Bonita. The Governor of San Domingo is also a suitor for the hand of the fair widow, and the rivalry between the two leads to many amusing complications. Involved within the plot is the love affair of Capt. Jack Morell of the U. S. cruiser Dixon, with the widow's daughter, Bonita. The Consul is finally successful in his efforts to annex the widow and her coin, and all ends happily, if somewhat uproariously.

Miss Josie Hart will play the widow, while Josephine Isleib, the new prima donna, will enact the role of Bonita. Oscar Walch will be the Capt. Jack Borell; Walter Catlett will play the part of Herr Gubudelar, the Governor's secretary, and Walter de Leon as Leopoldo, the firey revolutionist, will make violent love to "Muggins" Davies, the Dresden china soubrette. Joseph Fogarty will be seen as the Governor. A new scenic production has been provided.

A novel attraction, "In Dreamland," will begin a week's engagement at the Majestic tonight. It is from the pen of Emmet Devoy, who is well known as an author of sketches, many of his playlets having been produced successfully in the Keith and Proctor and Orpheum circuits. "In Dreamland" was probably his biggest success, and was a top-liner for two seasons, and Mr. Devoy was induced to elaborate the twenty-minute one-act sketch into a three-act play. It is called a "comedy fantasy;" there is an abundance of comedy and illusions in it. The illusions, electrical effects, and scenic investiture are unusual.

The role of Bob Hammond is enacted by Emmet Devoy, the author. The cast is a capable one. In addition to Mr. Devoy it includes Hermine Stone, Mrs. Joe Robinson Haywood, Eva Randolph, Natalie Jerome, William Hurst, L. B. Carleton, John E. Maguire, William Eckstine, Arthur Lurie, John Dillon, and Charles Hudson.

Corinne, in the Viennese operetta, "Mlle. Mischief," will continue to hold the Auditorium stage for the coming week.

The story of the play is that of a model who wagers her employer, Andre Claire, that she can disguise herself as a boy and remain in the local barracks twenty-four hours without detection. Conceive her horror when, after being accepted as a recruit, she is notified that she must do athletic stunts in light attire and take semi-public baths along with the other soldiers. How she gets out of these predicaments makes the comedy of the piece.

"The Ringmaster," direct from the Theater Maxine Elliott, New York, will be the following theatrical attraction, though not succeeding Corinne directly, as Sousa's band has a week's time soon.

For the week of Miss Blanche Hall's return to the Burbank, Manager Oliver Morosco announces a presentation of "My Wife," a cameo-comedy adapted from the French by Michael Morton and first played in this country by John Drew and Billie Burke. Miss Hall will be seen in the Billie Burke role, while A. Byron Beasley will have John Drew's former part. "My Wife" was first seen in stock at the Burbank a year ago this month, both Miss Hall and Mr. Beasley then playing the parts for which they now are again cast.

In the cast, in addition to Mr. Beasley and Miss Hall, are Harry Mestayer, Willis Marks, Henry Stockbridge, David M. Hartford, William Yerance, Frederick Gilbert, John W. Burton, Wayland Trask, Gavin Young, Louise Royce, Margo Duffet, Lovell Alice Taylor, Marie Dunkle and Maud Hanaford.

Owing to the demand for seats at "Old Heidelberg," at the Belasco last week, Manager Blackwood has announced this play of old German student life for a second week, commencing tomorrow night. This will be the sixteenth week that "Old Heidelberg" has been played by the Belasco company.

In the role of Karl Hienrich, the young Prince, Lewis S. Stone is appearing in one of the best romantic roles written and Miss Magrane is doing excellent work as Kathie. Frank Camp will continue in the role of Luts; James K. Applebee as Dr. Juttner, Howard Scott in his excellent character drawing of the faithful old servant, Kellerman, and Charles Giblyn as Scholerman.

"The County Chairman," which was to have opened tomorrow night, will be delayed one week.

Rosario Guerrero, the eminent Spanish pantomimist, will return to the Orpheum this week, heading the bill and presenting her pantomime, "The Rose and the Dagger." It describes the visit, during a storm, of the dancer to the hut of a bandit, who gives her unwilling shelter. Unwittingly she displays valuable jewels, which he covets, and he attacks her with a dagger. She charms him with her dancing, plays upon his cupidity, exchanges the rose she wears for his weapon—and stabs him. No word is spoken, and the pantomime is remarkable.

Two comedians certain of a very warm welcome here are Murray and Mack, who are now well entered upon their long winter with the Orpheum circuit. Both Mr. Murray and Mr. Mack have many friends in Los Angeles.

Tom Waters, who was featured in "Comin' Through the Rye," will come with a series of pianologues, some patter, song and mimicry.

Spalding and Riego have a new and allegedly sensational trapeze act.

Holding over for another week are "Circumstantial Evidence," Wyn and Lee in "The Billiken Freshman," Dancers Crouch and Welch, and Charles Montrell, the juggler.

Commencing with the usual matinee tomorrow, Sullivan and Considine will offer to the patrons of the Los Angeles Theater another diversified vaudeville bill. Heading the programme will be Dolan and Lenharr, presenting Mr. Dolan's original sketch "The High-toned Burglar and the Christmas Tree." It is very much on the Raffles order and combines an interesting story with many thrilling moments and some good, bright comedy. Another strong act on the bill will be Mort Sharp and His Dancing Belles. They present a singing and dancing specialty called "An Echo From the Plantation." Mr. Sharp carries special scenery for this act.

Two acts imported from Australia are also on the programme, one being the Steele Sisters singing coster ditties and presenting a series of character changes, while the other is the New Zealand eccentric acrobats, the Ahlberg brothers. Much of the comedy on the new bill will be furnished by McFarland and Murray in a comedy skit, entitled "The Millionaire and the Iceman." Completing the programme will be the Spanish violinist, Armada.

A musical comedy of Weberfieldian type, entitled "A Merry Whirl," will be the bill commencing tomorrow afternoon at the Walker Theater.

Since assuming the management, Allen Curtis has made some changes which augur well for the house. In the bill for the coming week new scenery has been secured and the general equipment is promised to be first-rate.

In the new piece, Arthur Clamage and Henry Auerbach will essay the roles of the Weberfieldian Germans, while Allen Curtis will be Buzzy Izzy, a pestiferous Yiddisher. Annie Baumann, Mayme Praeger, Estelle Praeger and others will have good assignments.

Dramagraphs.

Ethel Levy is said to have won London vaudeville audiences at the Palace.

J. B. Fagan's latest play, "False Gods," was produced in London recently with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in the leading role.

Augustus Thomas's latest play, "The Harvest Moon," with George Nash in the principal part, will be seen in New York at the Garrick.

George Arliss arrived in New York last week after a vacation in London. He has begun rehearsals in "Septimus."

The play that Clyde Fitch wrote for Miss Zelda Sears is entitled, "The Kitty and the Canary" and preparations for its production have been begun.

Marshall Farnum, brother of Dustin Farnum, will be the Trampas in this season's "The Virginian" tour. It is the part made famous by Frank Campeau.

Her press agent claims that Anna Held will wear a liberty satin gown this season which is embroidered with 2000 diamonds.

The new musical comedy, "The Old Town," by George Ade and Gustave Luders, in which Montgomery and Stone are the stars, has been produced in Chicago.

A New York paper is authority for the statement that "The Air King," a new skit by Raymond Hubbell and Harry B. Smith, will open in Chicago in November, with John Slavin in the title part.

The University of Illinois is making a collection of phonographic records of famous passages in classic drama as spoken by representative players. They are used in the instruction of students in classes in elocution and dramatic literature.

Frank Keenan is said to have scored such a big hit in "On the Eve" that it may necessitate a postponement of his tour as a star. Mr. Keenan is supporting the German actress, Hedwig Reicher, a new Henry B. Harris star.

As a curtain raiser to her performance of "The Chaperon" this season Miss Maxine Elliott will present a little play called "Soyonara." Miss Elliott has accepted "Deborah of Tods," by Mrs. Henry De La Pasture, for production about the first of the year. It is quite probable that Mary Mannering will be seen in "As You Like It" this season; "The Watcher," a spiritualistic play, is not a big success. Without wishing Miss Mannering any ill-luck, it would certainly be a great pleasure to see this charming and gifted actress as Rosalind.

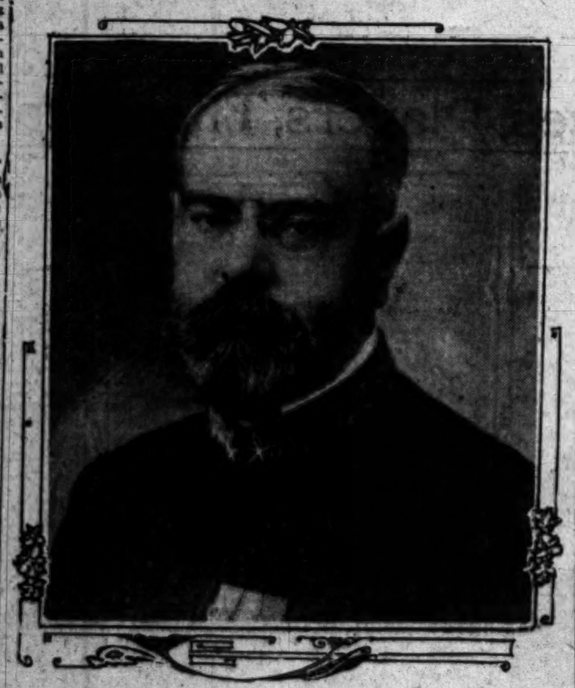
Franz Lehar, the popular operetta composer, has just arrived in Vienna from his summer vacation at Ischl. He has recently completed the score of his new operetta "The Count of Luxemberg," which will soon have its first production at the "Theater an der Wien." Rehearsals are already under way.

Sir Arthur Wing Pinero has written to Miss Ethel Barrymore apropos of the American production of his new play, "Mid-Channel:" "I understand you begin your season in 'Mid-Channel' this coming January. I want to tell you the great delight it gives me that you are to create my character of Zoe Blumdell. Wait as long as you like before putting your hand to the task. The waiting will be more than repaid by the performance." The role of Zoe is that of a faithless wife, who comes to a tragical end.

One of the surprises sprung by Geraldine Farrar, the American prima donna, when she stepped off the Kronprinz Wilhelm last week, was a bit of millinery of her own concoction. A ship reporter described the hat as follows: "It was blue and it was velvet, which was not remarkable. The wonder of it was in the shape, the like of which had never before been seen. Whether she copied it from a firkin of butter or a barrel or something shaped like that, no one knows. It was almost as large as a firkin of butter and it almost hid her face."

Charles Frohman has just entered into a new contract with A. E. Gatti, of the Vaudeville Theater, London, by which William Collier and an especially selected company will settle in London for a repertoire engagement of considerable length, as the star attraction of the Vaudeville Theater, which is now occupied by F. Anstey's farce, "The Brass Bottle." Mr. Frohman has decided that after this year Mr. Collier will only play engagements in London, New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. The first Collier London season will consist of this repertoire of plays: "The Patriot," "Caught in the Rain," "The Man From Mexico," and a new play upon which Mr. Collier is now at work.

German tenors wish they were Italian tenors only when they withdraw their gaze from the sublime region of Walhalla long enough to examine the figures of their contracts. Then where, oh where, is the Siegfried who would not gladly apply the magic power of his ring, were it more than a mere property ring, to his vocal cords and transform himself into an emotional Italian tenor, holding high Cs while time and tide, in the form of conductor and orchestra, patiently wait his pleasure—or his breath? When Caruso sings at the Berlin Royal Opera this month he will be paid as much for three performances as Carl Burrian will receive for thirty at the Dresden Court Opera. Burrian is receiving congratulations on all sides over his new Dresden contract; yet by its terms he is to receive only $250 a night, which to our blasé conception of tenors in four figures seems extremely modest. It is probable about half of his New York nightly salary. But he is willing to work hard and he wants the management to let him, so he has stipulated that he be given at least forty appearances in the course of the year before and after his annual absence of three months at the Metropolitan being considered as ballet productions for the New Theater or the Metropolitan Operahouse.



John Philip Sousa,
famous conductor, who, with his well-known band, will play an entire week at the Auditorium, commencing one week from tomorrow night.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

John Philip Sousa will play his longest Los Angeles engagement to date at the Auditorium next week, presenting twelve programmes at matinee and night concerts.

Sousa is best known by his popular compositions. The latest of these is "The Fairest of the Fair," and it is said to have won the famous director much popularity on this tour.

His band will number fifty men—as is usual on his tours—and his well-known heads of instrumental departments have in the main been retained. Soloists in the band will be headed, as before, by Herbert L. Clarke, the cornetist.

One of Sousa's regular features on his touring programmes is H. Tourjee's suite, "The Nordica Waltzes," Mr. Tourjee is now a resident of Los Angeles.

Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, the Dutch soprano, will open the Philharmonic course November 18. She is remarkably popular in this country, both in concert and operatic work, and has a voice of great beauty and purity. In her company will be Marie Nichols, the renowned young American violinist, and Miss Magdalen Worden, pianist.

The season ticket sale of the Symphony Orchestra will begin at the Bartlett music house on October 21, and at the same time Philharmonic course tickets will be on sale.

The first programme to be presented at the Auditorium on Friday afternoon, November 19, will include the Dvorak "New World" symphony, Svendsen's symphonic poem "Zorahayda," and the Busoni "Lustspiel" overture.

Mme. Jeanne Jomelli, the soloist, will sing an aria from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba," and the prayer and aria from "Der Freischutz."

Rudolf Friml and his California wife left for the East a few days ago. Mr. Friml has been busily engaged this summer completing the Salvonic dance numbers in his pantomines, which are to give her a cup of tea. There the ruffian turned on her, and in self-defense she snatched up a bottle that was handy and killed him. A poor girl living with the ruffian appeared on the scene and got the lady safely away. In the end, both the lady and the girl of the streets were suspected of the murder; the latter, to save the former, confessed to the crime and paid the penalty.

That was Gallon's story told entirely from imagination. When, later, in the drawing-room, his married friend beckoned him to her and then said in a low voice, "Why did you tell them my story," he gazed at her stupefied. "Your story," he cried; "in heaven's name what do you mean?"

"It was my story," she said sadly.

Save that she did not kill the man in the slums, Gallon had told the story of an incident in his friend's life detail for detail. The ruffian had tried to rob her, when a girl of the streets came on the scene, with great difficulty rescued her and sent her home a penitent woman.

"She had never breathed a word of her adventure to a soul," the novelist said. "She was the last woman in the world I should have suspected of a lapse from the straight path, yet—well, can you explain it? I cannot, unless it were that while I was spinning absurd stories she was thinking to herself what a story she could tell if she dared, and that her mind telepathically affected mine. She gave me leave to use her story as the basis of a novel and 'Meg, the Lady,' was the result.

CHARLES OGDENS.

A LITERARY EXCURSION.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 29.—Some interesting side lights on the character of the poet Tennyson were thrown by a letter written by the poet on his appointment to the laureateship read at the recent Tennyson centenary celebration by Willingham Franklin Rawnsley, to whose grandfather it was written. The letter was as follows:

"I thank you for your congratulations touching the laureateship. I was advised by my friends got to decline it and I was even told that, being already in receipt of a pension, I could not gracefully refuse it. But I wish more and more that some one else had it.

"I have no passion for courts, but a great love of privacy, nor do I count having the office as any particular feather in my cap. It is, I believe, scarcely £500 a year, and my friend, R. M. Milnes, tells me that the price of the patent and court dress will swallow up all the first year's income."

The court dress, Mr. Rawnsley tells us, did not cost him much, however, as he went in the dress which had served for Wordsworth, who in turn had obtained it from the old poet Rogers. Those who have seen it, for it is still in the Wordsworth family, have often wondered how Wordsworth and Tennyson managed to get into it; Rogers was a very little man, and they were both big.

Researches recently conducted into the family history of the poet Berenger have established the interesting fact that he is the ancestor of a Chinese family, now living in the Island of Reunion. It came about because his son, Lucien Paron, whose existence is revealed to us in the poet's autobiography, turned out badly. This hopeful youth, who was born in 1793, was apprenticed by his father to a grocer in Paris, but took to drink and lost his situation.

It was decided, therefore, to pack him off to the colonies. After having squandered all the money that he took with him, Lucien wrote home to ask for more. His father sent him a large piece of advice and a small remittance, together with an intimation that no more remittances were to be expected. For the rest of his life Lucien kept a small school for the children of the Reunion fishermen, living in a hut as wretched as their own.

As the result of a union which he contracted with a negress, he had a daughter named Augustine Adelaide. Augustine Adelaide married a Chinese boatman named Wu Tu. She had three children; and the family of Wu Tu still exists, if it does not flourish, on the Island of Reunion. Therefore, grotesque as it is, the most illustrious of the French song writers is now represented by a yellow posterity.

Tom Gallon, who has won wide popularity as a novelist, tells a story in connection with his novel, "Meg, the Lady," that is well worth recording. He was dining one evening with some friends, among whom was a lady, a married woman, he had known well for many years. To amuse his friends he started spinning stories out of his head, till at last they said, "Now tell us a real story, something that actually happened in life." Pretending to comply with the request, he invented on the spot and told them the following tale:

"A married woman, who, to all appearances, was happily married, was fascinated by a scoundrel, and at last, yielding to his entreaties, she went to see him at his rooms. He happened, however, to be out, and she went for a walk pending his return. He lived in a fashionable street, bordered, nevertheless, by slums, wherein she contrived to lose herself. A rough, but apparently honest, man volunteered to guide her out, only to lure her further into the slums and finally into a room, on the pretense that as she was faint and frightened his "missus" would Convicted By a Thermometer.

In connection with the death of Dr. Whitelaw of Kirkintilloch an interesting story is told of his early career. Being called up one night he was walking along with the messenger when he was set upon and knocked down in a lonely part of the road.

His pockets were rifled and he was left lying on the road severely injured. One of the articles stolen was a clinical thermometer with which he had that evening taken the temperature of a patient. He remembered the temperature registered, also that he had not shaken down the mercury before putting the thermometer back in his pocket, and he communicated these facts to the police.

Some time afterward a thermometer registering the identical temperature was discovered in a pawnshop in Glasgow and by this means the police were enabled to track the doctor's assailants and to arrest them.—[Glasgow Medical Journal.

Control Your Fat

One can now take off and keep off extra fat at will. If you have an over-fat abdomen or double chin you can clear it away completely without a minute's bother, exercising or dieting. Take a teaspoonful after meals and at bed time of this mixture: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract of Cascara Aromatic and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water—any druggist has them—and go on eating as best pleases you; don't worry about results.

The double chin and ponderous stomach will soon show signs of melting away. They will not sag in or wrinkle, however; just go down nice and smooth and even. That effect is due to the harmless natural action of the mixture.

This is explained as follows: Blame overfatness to the stomach. It is getting lazy. Instead of making energy and muscle from your food, it is manufacturing fat. The above mixture corrects this defect and hence it makes you stronger and healthier at the same time it is taking off of you 12 to 16 ounces of useless fat a day. The reason it affects double chin, hips, etc., first is because the fat on them is softer and cannot resist the remedy as long as that on the limbs. But eventually all the fat has to go if you keep up the treatment.

On Account of Business Increasing Beyond Expectation

Buyers Are Making Special Trips East

The following buyers are now in the eastern markets, making additional purchases. Some of these are on their third trip for this present season. Just think of what this means to our stocks, to YOU:

Buyers for Millinery, Cloaks and Suits, Juvenile Dept., Waists and Skirts, Men's Clothing, Trunks and Suit Cases, Crockery, Housefurnishing Goods, Hardware.

Others are about ready to leave for the market, so you see, new goods are continually streaming toward Quality Corner.

Our Advance Credit System

Is a convenient way of paying spot cash for your purchases, without the necessity of carrying money, writing checks or having goods sent C.O.D.

When you write a check to pay for some article of merchandise it is simply drawing money from the bank instead of paying out of your pocketbook for shopping purposes.

In the same way when you shop on our Advance Credit Account System by signing your name on the sales check, you are paying cash for your purchase with shopping money which you have placed in our Advance Credit Department.

In other words, when you write a check you withdraw money which in turn you pay for merchandise, but an Advance Credit Account is more convenient because you charge the merchandise directly to the money you have placed to your credit here. It is also more economical because your shopping money has been earning 6 per cent. interest from the moment you placed it here up to the moment you used it. Some of our customers receive as high as $2.50 interest from this source monthly.

This plan affords you every convenience of a charge account in any credit store, the savings of our low cash prices and a high rate of interest on your shopping money.

Your Teeth Need Attention

SANTA MONICA.

So fair the whole year round
But in these golden days
Of dreaming autumn, fairest of the fair,
When the low murmuring sound
Of the blue deep that plays
About thy feet, faints on the quiet air.

These golden days—too brief—
Are like a garment thrown
About thy gracious form of hill and vale,
And lo! a falling leaf
Speaks of the summer gone,
But of a coming winter tells no tale.

Where can this old world show
A lovelier curve of blue
With silver fringes of the swelling tide,
Than stretches here below
Thy cliffs of ruddy hue,
And the green cañon walls that cleave their side!

How fair, against the sky
Thy palms, like pillars stand,
And the long vistas of thy far-flung trees,
While, to enchant the eye,
Thy flowers on every hand,
Sway to the kisses of the passing breeze.

Sweet was the mother tongue
Of those who came from far,
To find these azure seas and sunlit shores,
Who their first Aves sung
Beneath the evening star,
Amid the shelter of the sycamores.

Sweet are the names we hear,
Whose music shall not cease
To link us to those old day's memory,
And pleasant to my ear,
With its own spell of peace,
Is Santa Monica, beside the sea.

MRS. J. D. H. BROWNE.

HEADACHE CURES.

Distinct Poisons Are Used That Have Resulted in Many Deaths and Poisonings.

[Rochester Democrat and Chronicle:] The Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture, with its manifold duties, has found time to investigate the various headache cures which are offered to a suffering public without the formality of consulting a physician. As the result of the investigation a bulletin has been issued which embodies the statement that three of the drugs forming, in whole or in part, the samples of headache powders analyzed by the department are distinct poisons.

The three drugs investigated by the Bureau of Chemistry, with reference to the enforcement of the pure food and drug law, are acetanilid, antipyrin and phenacetin. It was found that each of them has the property of easing pain, and one or the other of them is the active agent in most headache powders, pills or draughts.

The bureau makes public these facts regarding these drugs, having obtained the information through letters containing lists of questions sent to 925 physicians, 400 of whom responded. These practitioners report 524 cases of poisoning from these drugs in their experience, 28 deaths and 138 cases of habitual use. In medical literature the bureau found reported, in twenty-three years, 855 cases of poisoning, 26 deaths and 33 cases of habitual use. The conclusion is drawn by the bureau that physicians use these drugs much less than formerly, but that their use by the general public without a physician's prescription is steadily increasing.

What is a Gentleman.

An exact definition of a gentleman has been tried many times, never perhaps with entirely satisfactory results. Little Sadie had never heard of any of the various definitions, but she managed to throw a gleam of light on the subject, albeit one touched with unconscious cynicism. The word was in the spelling lesson, and I said:

"Sadie, what's a gentleman?"

"Please, ma'am," she answered, "a gentleman's a man you don't know very well."—[Woman's Home Companion.

Railroad Was There.

The depot of Meridian, Tex., is about a mile from the business part of the town. One night a sleepy, weary traveling man said to the darky who was driving him to the hotel:

"Old man, why in the name of heaven did they put this depot so far from town?"

The darky scratched his head in thought, and replied:

"Waal, boss, I's forced to admit dat I hasn't give de matter s'ficient cogitation, but jes' jumped up fer a answer like dis, I s'pose dey done dat so as to have de depot as near as possible to de railroad."—[Lippincott's Magazine.

No Time to Celebrate.

The captain was explaining what would be done in case of accident.

"And should the ship strike a rock," he continued, "we'd burn red fire and send up rockets."

"But wouldn't that be a rather unusual time to celebrate, captain?" asked the tow-headed youth with the bull-dog pipe.—[Lippincott's Magazine.

Mrs. Stephenson.

...of Junior Senator from Wisconsin Chats About Her Home and Its Varied Industries.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—In the list of the States none can boast of more entertaining history than Wisconsin. It is, perhaps, the only one of the new States which can claim three centuries of history and each century record one of supreme importance in the annals of the union. Few States can boast of the romantic story from the primitive fur trading days number cutting to such high rating as a national confederation and within the memory of men still present in public affairs. Isaac Stephenson, who came to Washington to fill the unexpired term of Senator Spooner is a man whose life story is practically the story of Wisconsin's industrial development. As social importance is gauged, the Stephensons are in the inner circle, for the possession of lofty official position and vast wealth are at once admitted into the ranks of celebrities. Senator Stephenson and his wife are unassuming people and are never to be found among the aggressively important. Mrs. Stephenson, since coming to Washington, has been in mourning and her appearances are few. But that she is a woman of keen perception and of pronounced views was at once apparent. "Wisconsin," she said recently, "is the home of great results. New York may surpass it in the income derived from dairy products. When the figures are arrayed for view, it is stupendous. There are over one hundred creameries in operation and they produce an annual average of over eighty million pounds of butter and about sixty million pounds of cheese. Twenty-five million dollars a year is what the cows give for milk, butter and cheese industries to the farmers of Wisconsin. The cheese industry is one of promises immense development and one which inspires pride and patriotism in every loyal denizen of the Badger State. It is one of recent growth and its sponsors were the Swiss settlers from the Canton of Glarus, who had made a prosperous colony in the early days of Middle West immigration. These Swiss could not live without the dainty cheese which has been a part of their daily food in Switzerland, and they began to make the fancy product from the milk of small herds. But the fame of these cheese soon acquired the reputation which Swiss cheese has the world over, and soon the farmers, who had begun to make it, only as a by-product, developed the industry with energy and determination. Now one county in Wisconsin produces more cheese than the entire State could consume and the lovers of this excellent cheese can practically every adult in the Commonwealth.

"The work of women in this vast industry seems invaluable and it was the hopeful inspiration which has brought about the prosperity which the State can now boast. Twenty-five years ago, the farmer's main work was an attempt, more than often disastrous, to raise spring wheat alternately with corn and oats. Rotation of crops was something unknown and the very idea of fertilizer was an unheard blessing. The land became impoverished and the result was a plague of weeds and a discouraging increase of noxious weeds. The newspapers were filled with sheriff's notices and delinquent entries and the more the farmer tried to better his fortune, the deeper he went into the mire.

"It was at this dark juncture that the farmers' wives, nearly all the sturdy, strong Swiss, began cheese making in such earnest that two factories sprang up in New Glarus. The woman who faced the loss of time and was solicitous about the welfare of her State, became interested, the result was that in the factory they saw large profits ahead. A trial demonstrated the fact that grass, water, and the women were a potent combination. The cheese industry from a mere experiment became one of the staples of the State and above all, it was the means of preventing the almost wholesale emigration further West, which existed in 1870. The expansion of the business has changed all conditions. The farmers now have money in the bank, the land has increased in value and in the dairy country a foreclosure has not been known in a decade. Wisconsin, the farmers' State, now the use of every labor saving devices which the inventive genius of America has placed upon the market. It is one of the beautiful situations which life sometimes offers that many of these have been driven to Switzerland to be the grateful pupils of the oldest and most illustrious cheese makers.

"Not only in the dairy interests are conspicuous a meager portion of the splendid industrial history of Wisconsin. I think there is no more thrilling romance in the entire chronicle of American affairs than the story of the cutting of the primitive days. The forests with their treasures of pine, the difficulties which seemed like fabled monsters of the age, the bodily tortures which those who had the path had to endure, the growth of the industry from the floating of the logs down the streams to the present palatial system of the timber to market make a story which cannot fail to inspire pride. The literature of Wisconsin is rich with this romantic side of the development. It is gratifying that such beautiful pictures as the poets and writers have drawn will preserve for knowledge of the conditions which have passed away.

"We have enjoyed such a comparatively brief period of full citizenship in the family of States, but proud of our record in the world of letters, science and art. We believe we are foremost among the sisterhood of commonwealth which have come into the remainder of the world that is learning and culture is not centered in New England and the Eastern States. We rejoice in the literature which is represented in the Wisconsin Historical Society. Ten years ago the society made a bibliography of all the Wisconsin books and more than 9000 book titles and small contributions have been added since that time. We have encouraged in our native literature and there are private collectors who buy everything that comes from a Wisconsin pen. It may be counted mere literary vanity to admit that some of the books we have sufficient of genius to permit us to carry some claim to problematical worth for the sake. In the domain of history we claim preeminence and to the monumental work of Jesse Dr. Reuben Gold Thwaites of the University of Wisconsin, the debt of gratitude can never be adequately paid. Dr. Thwaites has also published "La Follette's Autobiography," "Hennepin's Memoirs," papers dealing with the Black Hawk period, which are regarded as the last words on those engaging topics. Mrs. Thwaites is a daughter of Dr. Frederick Turner who is well known, have been writers of Wisconsin history, a matter of great pride that the scientifically-trained writers have rendered what a mine of information the State. Historical literature. The society owes to the untiring efforts of the Dr. Thwaites and I think simply no honor can be bestowed on the members of nearly all our excellent historical associations throughout the Middle West.

Senator and Mrs. Stephenson have resided almost continuously in hotels since coming to Washington. Mrs. Stephenson has taken little part in Vanity Fair, though she went through the routine of calling and held some informal receptions during the first winter of her residence. This winter, however, she will lighten her mourning and if she executes the plans formed last spring, she will become the chatelaine of a very attractive home in Massachusetts avenue. The home, which is her pride, is the fine mansion of Senator Stephenson in Marinette. As the first citizen of the thriving little city, Mr. Stephenson keeps up a suitable menage and few celebrities visiting that portion of the country do not partake of his hospitality. In a way, he belongs to the State and not to a restricted section, for his vast industrial interests embrace almost every phase of Wisconsin development. A short distance west of Kenosha he owns one of the model farms of the State and in this Mrs. Stephenson takes an especial pride. There are over 100 horses, 1500 or 1600 sheep, nearly 200 cows and thousands of fowls on this place. Quite adjacent is a creamery, in which Senator Stephenson is controlling factor, which turns out 300 pounds of butter daily.

At the Marinette farm, the Stephensons have a valuable stock farm, in which some of the most valuable of American fast trotting horses have been bred. Mrs. Stephenson is naturally a lover of horses and of all kinds of live stock and she is accounted a splendid judge. Her home is paramount in all her interests. It may be predicted that if she opens a residence in Washington, she will soon reach the hospitable heights scaled by the illustrious line of Wisconsin people who lived in past years in Washington. Mrs. Stephenson possesses a wide acquaintance with the Congressional contingent of her State and she has taken a cordial interest in all that concerns her associates. She and the wife of the senior Senator, Mrs. La Follette are friends of long standing and many of their amenities have been planned together.

Mrs. Stephenson is the third wife of the Senator and she is a much younger woman than her husband. She is a native of the city where she still resides. She was Miss Elizabeth Burns and was married to Senator Stephenson in 1884. A son is the only child of this union, but by the former marriages, Mr. Stephenson has a large family of sons and daughters, all of whom reside in Wisconsin and an interesting group of grand-children. Mrs. Stephenson, of course, never experienced the hardships and dangers which marked the course of her husband towards success. He was rated a millionaire many times over when she married, but none the less is she proud of his romantic career and of his vast achievement for her home State. Mr. Stephenson is a Canadian, born in New Brunswick. His family have many times visited the old home near Saint John's. She is familiar with every phase of her husband's story in the timber district and she can graphically describe that exciting chapter of his life. The library of the home in Marinette contains all the work of the Wisconsin authors of which Mrs. Stephenson is so proud, and it contains also almost all that has been written about Wisconsin and the development of the Middle West by other illustrious authors.

"The lives of Wisconsin's great men make quite a formidable array on a bookshelf and I fear that enthusiastic admirers of their own State could never accommodate themselves to the five-foot bookshelf which Dr. Eliot advocates."

Mrs. Stephenson is gracious in manner, with a frank, open countenance, and delicate coloring in complexion and hair. She is remarkably youthful in appearance and takes great delight in the company of young people. She has been foremost in her home city in promoting all that tended towards social enjoyment, as well as the issues involved in educational and philanthropical plans. Senator and Mrs. Stephenson will occupy their old quarters at the Shoreham during the early part of the winter. But is is likely that both will spend the Christmas recess at home, returning to Washington in time to set up their household treasures before the season opens in the early part of January.

THE PRESIDENT'S OFFICES.

Extensive Additions Being Made to the Building on the White House Grounds.

[Columbus Dispatch:] When Roosevelt became President he kicked up an awful fuss about the inability to have any privacy in the White House. He wanted his home to be like the home of any other American gentleman and he declined to take every Tom, Dick and Harry into it. He was the first to suggest an office building, to be erected on the White House grounds, whose architectural scheme was to be in harmony with the White House itself. Under his urging, Congress appropriated $850,000 for the purpose and the new building went up like a mushroom.

The old office rooms were converted into bedrooms, the White House itself was remodeled and enlarged, and the old cause of complaint, originating with Mrs. Cleveland, that she couldn't invite anybody to stay over night at the White House because there were no extra sleeping rooms, was removed. To that extent a real reform was wrought, but the building that went up as a so-called office building, was an abomination in the eyes of the people.

It was cheap all the way through. It cost $850,000, but it didn't show it. It was of brick, painted white, or what was supposed to pass for white, better known as mud colored. The inside finish, floors, doors and mantels alike, was soft wood. And the quarters were cramped and illy arranged. It was better than what the President had had heretofore, and Mr. Roosevelt, although dissatisfied, let it go at that. President Taft was just as much dissatisfied and he clinched one of the Roosevelt reform policies by securing fromCongress an additional appropriation of $50,000 for a reconstruction of the building. The work has been going on day and night since his departure for Beverley. The old tennis court has been wiped out and the new building—for it is substantially a new building, nothing remaining of the old save some of the inner walls—has been coming up rapidly. The builders are working in three eight-hour shifts and sightseers are attracted to the place especially at night when the work progresses with a vivid torchlight accompaniment.

The new office building will be twice the size of the old. It remains at one story high and constructed of brick. The entire transformed building will be covered with hard cement stucco and is to be painted white—real white—with enough coats of paint to have it match the shade of the White House which also is receiving a new coat of paint this year.

The President's room will be spacious, oval in shape, with a distance of forty feet at its broadest turn. The mantels will be of marble. The ceiling will be white and slightly domed. The walls will be covered with a cloth-like material an eighth of an inch in thickness and of rich red color. The floor will be of polished wood and all the chairs and couches will be upholstered with the leather of the caraboa, the water buffalo of the Philippines.

To the east of the President's room will be the Cabinet room, to its west the room set aside for Secretary Carpenter. The room formerly occupied by the President will be furnished as a waiting room for members of Congress exclusively. The room formerly occupied by Secretary Carpenter will be transformed into a waiting room for the general public. The former Cabinet room will become a workroom for the clerical force. The old public waiting room will be used merely as a lobby. There will be a small portico directly in front of Mr. Taft's office, facing the White House, so that he may go in privacy to and from the White House.

During the absence of President Taft from Washington it is yet necessary to maintain a clerical force at the White House. Since the work of reconstructing the office bulilding has begun, the White House clerks have been working in the White House proper. The quarters assigned to them there are anything but desirable.

They are situated in the basement, being composed of the rooms used as cloakrooms on the occasion of White House receptions. Since Secretary Carpenter's return to the city he has been compelled to dispose of his daily budget of work in a poorly illuminated and not overly well ventilated basement. The contractors are doing their best therefore to complete the new office building some time before President Taft is to return to the city.

HALLEY'S COMET.

Will Be Studied by Aid of the Spectroscope to Determine Its Nature and Makeup.

[Baltimore American:] Halley's comet will on this appearance for the first time be carefully studied by the spectroscopists and much new and valuable information concerning it is expected. It is only since the invention of the spectroscope that scientists have been able to learn much about the constitution of matters and thus about the nature of comets and nebulae. People were also ignorant of the true nature of light, heat, electricity and magnetism until recent years. The comets and nebulae had been seen by the naked eye and through telescopes. But the spectroscope now puts in a second telescope where the first ones leaves off, and instead of leaving the first telescope result to be viewed with the naked eye it magnifies the result many millions of times more and so gives this enormously increased opportunity of looking at the particles of matter.

It is known that certain appearances, or phenomena, result from the motion of ether particles at differing rates. A small beam or pencil of light contains all these different kinds and rates of motion and the spectroscope is an apparatus for sorting out and separating them. The motion of ether particles that produces red light is slower than the motion which produces orange or yellow light. This is slower than green light, and this slower than blue, indigo and violet light.

The spectroscope analyzes these differing rates of motion. Each kind of motion is separated from the others in the mixture of other particles, commonly called "the ether." The "lithium" ether particles move slower than those that form sodium. Hence the lithium particles appear as "red" to the eye and the sodium particles as "yellow." The eye which is not color blind is able to distinguish by the varying colors the number of vibrations or waves of colors that take place in a second of time.

The spectroscope enables the observer to see what kind of matter are in the atmosphere surrounding the earth, and also the atmospheres around the sun, the stars, the planets, the comets and the nebulae. When a small piece of lithium is burned its particles mingle with the atmosphere and moving according to their own rate, they give their red color, and its characteristic signature is recorded in the spectrum—by showing the lithium lines. Sodium shows the sodium line, and so with all other substances. Hence the characteristic element of lithium in the atmosphere of a planet or a comet shows the existence of that element in that atmosphere, and thus the appearance itself enables the spectroscope to find out of what elements the various heavenly bodies consist.

People often speak of the earth's atmosphere as consisting of oxygen and nitrogen. But the atmosphere is a great ocean storehouse of varying supplies. Vegetation grows from the carbonic acid which animals give out into the atmosphere. Building mortar hardens from the carbon in the air.

All metals are known to evaporate. If a tin cup is hung up in a tree and left undisturbed, it will require about four years for it to evaporate entirely into the surrounding air. The tin will go first, and the iron afterward. Both elements would be found in the atmosphere by means of the spectroscope.

Worship in a Windmill.

Churches often become devoted to base uses, but it is not often that a windmill is converted into a church, yet this was done a few years ago on the borders of Reigate Heath, Surrey, Eng., where the villagers were compelled to go twelve miles to attend church.

Services were temporarily held in a schoolroom, and as the erection of a church was financially out of the question, an old windmill, or, rather, its remains, for it had fallen into decay, that stood on the heath, a picturesque feature in beautiful bit of landscape, was pressed into service. It was freed of rats, repaired at a small cost and opened as the Chapel of the Holy Cross.

Though externally decidedly picturesque, the interior of the chapel is still more interesting. Four buttresses, four feet thick by six feet in height, serve as rests for two massive beams which cross each other in the center and support an upright shaft, cracked with age and strongly bound with iron bands.

The buttresses make four natural alcoves. The entrance door stands in one, and immediately opposite is the altar; the harmonium is placed in a third, and the bellringer sits close beside it and rings his bell; the fourth is occupied by the congregation. The rent of this novel church is only 2¢ cents a year.—[Minneapolis Journal.

"The World Is Too Much With Us."

The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending we lay waste our powers;
Little we see in Nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon;
This sea that bares her bosom to the moon;
The winds that will be howling at all hours,
And are up-gathered now like sleeping flowers;
For this, for every thing, we are out of tune;
It moves us not—Great God! I'd rather be
A Pagan suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;
Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea;
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.

Water Colors at the Blanchard.

As was to be expected, some good flower studies are shown in the water-color section of the present exhibition at the Blanchard gallery. The medium of water colors is one which, through its lightness and delicacy, lends itself peculiarly well to the rendition of the artificial daintiness of flowers. Sometimes the very texture of a blossom can be gotten with a simple wash of crude color over white paper. And as for atmosphere—why, water colors are almost atmosphere in themselves.

Marion M. Williams exhibits two of these charming subjects, and both are excellent, handled in a crisp, fresh way, with most intelligent regard for the limitations of her medium. The arrangement, too, of her "Shasta Daisies" and "Yellow Roses" is good. The daisies appear in a large green vase, well suited to the flowers; the roses, on which an agreeable white light falls, are placed in a small and squat ginger jar of blue and gray.

Three studies come from the brush of Leta Horiocker. The best of these, to my mind, is "Red Eucalyptus Blossoms," brilliant in color, decorative in effect, and done with a much more decisive touch than the other two, "Chrysanthemums" and "Autumn Beauties," both of which, notwithstanding the great charm of their color and arrangement, are slightly woolly in texture—a fault which the artist may have striven for as a virtue, but which appears to me to have come from over-working.

The landscapes in water color are numerous, the figure studies, alas! all too few. With so many art schools flourishing, all having classes in drawing and painting from the head and figure, why do our young painters, once freed from the class-room, almost invariably fare forth to the hills? Why do they not occasionally give us a portrait or a genre. The answer, I suppose, lies in the surpassing beauty of our hills. Yet the human face and figure have wonderful beauties, too, for him who has learned to see.

Teresa Cloud, at any rate, has given us a figure in an interior, as well as an out-door study;—and I wish I could say that it is the better of the two. But it isn't, despite a very beautiful background of yellow curtains with light shining behind and through them. The artist calls the picture "Purple and Gold"—a young girl in white standing and holding a hat with sweeping purple plumes. The picture is strangely disquieting and inharmonious, and this is due, I think, to the complete absence of purple in the girl's auburn hair—where it most assuredly would be. Miss Cloud's "Venitian Sails" is delightful, painted with feeling and skill, the red sails making a spot of intense color that quickens the pulse like a burst of martial music.

The work of Mary Harland can always be depended on. She paints with assured ease and knowledge in water colors, always well, sometimes very well. Of the two small sketches she shows this time, "A Hazy Afternoon," which gives us a stretch of sea and shore and mountains near Santa Monica, is the most interesting, in effect as well as in handling, though there are both delicacy and strength in the rugged and rocky cliffs of her "Topanga Cañon," with its tender sky and distant pale blue hills.

Two landscapes by Norman St. Clair appear on the walls, "Eagle Rock Valley," and "Early Morning, Arroyo," the latter a remarkably difficult atmospheric effect rendered with consummate skill without a single touch of opaque paint. The time is spring in California; the river of the arroyo, reflecting a light blue sky, wanders toward a foreground of sunlit and grassy banks. To me this picture is one of the best our accomplished water-colorist has ever painted. I have seen it several times, and always with renewed pleasure. "Eagle Rock Valley," though well painted, is far below the high standard of "Early Morning."

Nellie Huntington Gere's "Evening" is painted in flat tones in a very few colors. A bar of orange light appears on the far horizon, behind trees and haystacks. A twilight feeling prevades the picture, which is pleasantly decorative in treatment. Norah Purcell has two small pictures, simple, direct, and with much out-door feeling. The patch of yellow sunlight in her "Path in the Woods" is true and effective. Helen E. Coan's "On the Breakwater" has been seen many times before in the Blanchard gallery. Harry Lewis Bailey has two small, well considered studies, "The Old Standby" and "Eads Bridge;" Zel Talbert has one, "Old Wharf Boat," showing the red boat in a stream against a gray sky of much delicacy and beauty; W. F. Frederick has one, "Mountain Road," very effective in a loose and impressionistic way.

Miss Curran's Prints.

An extremely interesting section of the Blanchard exhibition is that devoted to the Japanese prints of Mary Eleanor Curran. Some few dozen are shown, on the wall and in a portfolio. Miss Curran is well known as an enthusiastic and intelligent collector of prints, and some of the best of her rare "finds" are to be seen. All of them, I believe, are for sale, and at very moderate prices. That the art-loving public appreciates these prints is proved by the number of sales already made.

Among the famous prints shown are "Fish in Bowl" and "Carp in Stream," by Hiroshigi; "The Wave," by Hokusai; "Man With Falcon" and "Girls Painting," by Utamaro; a "Surimono," by Yakutei; two delightful Yeizans, "Lady in Brown" and "Lady in Green." There are also color illustrations from books, etc.

This part of the exhibition, I understand, is to be a permanent one, and will remain under the espionage of Everett Maxwell, who will also have charge of the rare French prints owned by Hector Alliot. These latter, I regret to say, are not yet upon the walls, as Mr. Alliot's collection is so large that he has to have more time in which to properly cull the prints he considers interesting enough for such a limited wall space.

Some Sculptures.

Frank E. Stone exhibits four small sculptures at the Blanchard gallery. The figures are hardly over the size designated as "figurines." Though far from robust in execution, all are imbued with a certain refinement of feeling and delicacy in expression that makes them attractive.

This admirable artistic quality is especially noticeable in the group called "Innocence and Death," a child looking with wide eyes that are yet unafraid, into the tender, brooding face of Death, who is holding her in her arms. "Don't" is spirited and pleasingly humorous in suggestion—though the prurience that denied the ugly, nude, vigorous young boy the distinguishing marks of his sex is inexcusable.

The little bust of Ruskin is sympathetically modeled; the noble nature of the rhapsodist on art, his poetic genius, his delicate sensibility—are all shown. "Age of Romance," a nude youth on a couch dreaming of the book he has just been reading, is too carefully symmetrical in composition to be agreeable, though the expression in the youth's face is caught with rare insight.

An Artistic Pageant.

The opening festivities of the newly-organized "Arroyo Guild," an association of expert workers in the applied arts, will take place on the campus of the College of Fine Arts, Garvanza, on the evenings of the coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. These festivities will consist of speeches by prominent citizens of Los Angeles, of a reception, and of an Indian and Spanish pageant.

This pageant will show the manners and customs of the Indians prior to and after the coming of the Spaniards, and will be presented in a series of tableaux vivants. There will be Indian and Spanish songs and dances, a mission procession, and a realistic and vivid representation of two thrilling ceremonies of the Hopis—"The Washing of the Snakes in the Underground Kiva" and "The Snake Dance."

The pageant, dances, songs, etc., will be presented by alumni and students of the College of Fine Arts, the University of California, the Arroyo Guild, and their friends.

Admission to the pageant is by invitation only.

ART NOTES.

Among the painters who are taking advantage of the "rate war" to San Francisco are Norah Purcell and Eugene C. Frank.

The Painters' Club will hold a special meeting at the studio of Charles Rogers on the evening of Tuesday, October 19.

The exhibition at the Blanchard gallery, oils and water colors by artists of Southern California, with prints, monotypes and sculptures, remains open till the end of the month.

William Wendt has returned from Santa Barbara, where he and Frank R. Liddell held a joint exhibition of landscapes.

Otto von Rosenberg, who is a portrait painter as well as a landscapist, has received a number of important commissions for portraits in San Diego and Los Angeles.

A series of lectures on art topics by well-known authorities will be given in the room devoted to the Ruskin Art Club, in the Blanchard building, during the coming winter.

The exhibition of pictures by the Painters' Club will be held during the first two weeks in November.

An exhibition of thirty-six Indian pictures and landscapes by Warren E. Rollins opens at the Steckel gallery tomorrow to continue for two weeks. Mr. Rollins's studio is at Arrowhead Springs.

THE JEWS IN NEW YORK.

More People of This Nationality in City Than Were Ever Gathered in One Locality.

"How much the Jewish population means in the life of New York City, few people realize," writes Ray Stannard Baker, in the American Magazine. "Within the past few years, quietly, almost without notice, the Jew has become the chief single element in the population of our principal American city—and in a very real sense one of the dominating factors of our life. Out of the total population of Greater New York nearly 1,000,000 are Jews, or more than one in every five. Nowhere at any time in the world's history were so many Jews gathered together in one locality. Jerusalem the Golden in all the 5000 years of its history never had a quarter as many Jews as now live in New York City, and all Palestine today, in spite of the efforts of enthusiastic Zionists to fire their people with a desire to return to their home land has not as many Jewish residents as may be found in half a dozen blocks on the East Side. Not only are they the dominant factor on the crowded East Side, but they occupy whole neighborhoods in other parts of the city—in Harlem and the Bronx, in Williamsburg and Borwnsville—almost to the exclusion of other population. And they are not mere renters of homes and tenements; for a considerable proportion of the valuable land on Manhattan Island is now held by Jewish owners. The largest single industry in the city—clothing manufacture—is almost wholly in the hands of Jews. They control many of our greatest banks and other financial institutions, and their domain in finance is rapidly extending; they dominate and direct almost exclusively the amusements, both theaters and operas—of the greatest American city. About half of the principal newspapers of the metropolis are owned by Jews—and some of the other papers have Jewish editors in important positions. They control the greater part of the wholesale and retail trade. Many of our ablest lawyers, doctors and scientists are Jews More and more the Jew is becoming a great factor in politics; if Tammany Hall is beaten at the polls this fall, the Jew will do it.

"Many Jewish judges now administer our laws, and not a few Jews in our legislatures and in Congress are helping to make them. The education of the children of New York City is, to a surprising extent, in the hands of the Jews—and becoming more and more so. I examined the lists recently published of newly-appointed teachers for the public schools. It reads for long spaces like a directory of the East Side. Hundreds of teachers in New York, who were born in despotic Russia and who came here only a few years ago, knowing not a word of English, are today teaching American children the principles of democracy. Some of the strongest benevolent and civic activities of the city are controlled by Jews and finally, the Jews, resisting Christianity, have built up at least one religious or ethical movement which has attracted many Christians. Not a few Christian churches, slowly surrounded by Jews, have given up the struggle, and their buildings have finally been purchased and converted into synagogues. It may come as a surprise to many people, but it is a fact that there are now far more synagogues (organizations, not buildings) on Manhattan Island than there are Christian churches. The number of Jewish synagogues in Greater New York is 803, of which 708 are in Manhattan Island and the Bronx. Assuredly New York City has become the New Jerusalem of the Jew."

HAS HIS OWN CHURCH.

Colored Man Takes Unique Way to Get Even With His Fellow-Worshipers.

[Augusta (Ga.) Herald:] Few men may claim exclusive ownership to a church edifice, its furniture, pulpit, song books and Bible, but in this county (Oktibbeha) Rev. Henry Bardwell, an ante-bellum negro and itinerant preacher, claims that distinction. He is the sole owner of Pea Ridge Baptist Church, which stands a few miles southeast of this town. Petty strife is a pretty strong cord in the wharp and woof of life, and this, it is said, caused Bardwell to build a church of his own. Considerable dissension arose among the members of the church in which he worshiped, and the old engro endeavored to effect a reconciliation, but to no avail. Finding his efforts fruitless, he at once "moved by de sperrit of de Lord," determined to erect a church suited to his own purpose. In 1890 it was constructed some two miles from the Bardwell home, he being the financial backer to the amount of $800. The dimensions of the church are 20x60, and it has a seating capacity of 200. When the regular pastor fails to meet his appointment, Bardwell occupies the pulpit and always interests his hearers with a fiery sermon. He is 60 years old, of commanding presence, and is possessed of a vim and ambition that has made for him a comfortable living.

Twenty-five years ago Bardwell was splitting rails for the white people and doing other odd jobs that came to hand. By his thrift and economy he managed to save a sufficient sum of money, which was invested in valuable farming lands, and today he owns 300 acres, a good portion being bottoms, bordering on Twin Cane Creek.

Bardwell has the respect and confidence of the white people, and among his own race he is looked upon as a "father" and an adjuster of difficulties.

A Substitute Suggested.

Dr. Blank, about twenty years a professor in the University of Virginia, was on the eve of a trip to Europe, to be absent two years. In pathetic and rather harrowing tones he made his farewell address to the class:

"Yes, I am about to part with you. This is more than distressing to me. Would that there was a window in my breast, my dear boys, that you might see the innermost recesses of my heart."

A stripling in the rear, seized with a happy thought, shouted:

"Professor, would a pane in the stomach do?"—[Lippincott's.

Gate Made of Window.

It is not often that a gate is made out of a window, much less out of a prison window; but the gate of St. Cedd's churchyard, Canning Town, East London, was at one time a window in old Newgate prison. Many people wonder at the size of the gate, but when they hear its curious history and the use to which it was put in years gone by they understand the reason of its massive dimensions. —[London Graphic.

Didn't Know Poker.

The cartoonist's wife was talking to a friend.

"I just know Fred didn't want to work at the office last night," she said.

"Why, how do you know?" was asked.

"Because in his sleep he said, 'Well, I'll stay, but I don't know what to draw.'"—[Lippincott's.

Pauper Labor a Failure.

Pauper labor, like slave labor, is almost worthless. Support for this dictum is found in the recent experiences of the London County Council in its efforts to provide work for the unemployed. "Work was done this winter in the London parks to the value of $39,000. It cost the central unemployed body to accomplish this no less than $296,109. In other words, work which laborers hired in the open market and paid high wages could have done for $39,000 cost $257,100 more when done by the unemployed—that is, by men who knew that they would not be discharged if they idled and who had no interest in their work, but only in their wages. That, we venture to say, is the type of work which will be universal when the state is the sole employer and when men do not choose their own form of work, but have it found for them by that beneficent despot."—[London Spectator.

LIFE OF A PIMPLE

Complexions Are Cleared and Pimples Disappear Overnight Without Trouble.

The dispensers of poslum, a new skin discovery, ask that notice be given that no one is urged to purchase it without first obtaining an experimental package. Everyone who has tried it knows that the 50c box, on sale at The Owl Drug Co., Inc., and all drug stores, is sufficient to cure the worst cases of eczema, where the surface affected is not too large. The itching ceases on first application. It will also cure acne, tetter, blotches, scaly scalp, hives, barber's and every other form of itch, including itching feet. Being flesh-colored and containing no grease, the presence of poslam on exposed surfaces, such as the face and hands, is not perceptible. Water and soap cannot be used in connection with it, as these irritate and prolong skin troubles, sometimes even causing them.

As to the experimental package of poslam, it can be had free of charge by mail of the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West Twenty-fifth Street, New York. It alone is sufficient to clear the complexion overnight, and to rid the face of pimples in twenty-four hours.

SHONTS "GLAD TO SEE HIM."

The Railroad Manager Settled With a Contractor Who Wanted to Do Him Up.

[Washington Post:] In his early days of railroading Theodore P. Shonts gained a reputation for "settling things" both by brain and brawn, and left a train of anecdotes which his friends delight in telling. One anecdote illustrative of the fiber of the man is told by Mark Morton of Lake Forest:

"A big, strapping contractor who had a grievance against Mr. Shonts for some fancied wrong, called at his office in the Rookery building one day, and as Mr. Shonts was busy, had some delay in getting into the private office. He said he had been overcharged on a freight bill, and his greeting was that he had called to get even with Shonts. Looking up from his desk, Shonts, without any comment, simply said:

"'I am glad you called,' sprang to his feet, locked the door and pulled off his coat. He went after the contractor fast and furious. Crash! smash! bang! The chairs went against the walls of the room and the clerks stood around outside aghast. In three minutes the contractor was as anxious to get out of the room as he had been to get into it. The chairs were broken and the room looked as though a typhoon had swept through it.

"But Shonts was not through with his man. He reminded the contractor that he had wanted to see him and that he was there to be seen and it was crash, smash, bang some more. Finally, Shonts put his head out of the door, cool as you please, and told the office boy to come in and show the man where the door was. The contractor departed and then Shonts resumed work at his desk as though nothing had happened."

OREGON'S CRATER LAKE.

Fills Up Extinct Volcano and Is Probably Deepest Body of Fresh Water in World.

[William E. Curtis, in Chicago Record-Herald:] Crater Lake, one of the greatest wonders of the world, lies eighty-five miles almost directly northeast of Medford, Or. It lies near the summit of Mt. Mazama, 9000 feet above the sea, and occupies a gigantic caldron or crater nearly six miles in diameter, and 4000 feet deep. It is encircled by an unbroken wall of cliffs varying in height from 1000 to 2000 feet, without a single break, and so nearly perpendicular that it is impossible to descend to the water's edge save in a very few places. The water is of an intense blue color and is very cold and the lake has no visible outlet.

It receives the drainage from the upper slopes of Mt. Mazama, but that is comparatively small. During the winter the lake is not accessible on account of the depth of snow, and large masses of snow remain all summer, wherever they are protected from the sun. The mountain around the lake is covered with a dense forest notable for the size and magnificence of its trees, and few artificial parks can compare with this natural park in beauty.

AN ANCIENT MOSAIC.

Four Thousand Square Yards in the Ruins of a City Destroyed Over Fifteen Centuries Ago.

[Chicago Tribune:] At Aquileia—an ancient Roman city destroyed by Attila in 452—has just been discovered an ancient mosaic, larger by far than any every found before. It covers an area of more than four thousand square yards, and is much greater than the immense mosaics found in the imperial baths in Rome. Prof. Moionica says that it dates from the time of Constantine the Great, and shows, in a most instructive manner, the influence Bizantine art exercised upon the Roman. The smaller part of this mosaic already laid bare is under the floor of the vestibule of the cathedral, and is about forty-five yards long and thirty-six wide. The larger portion runs along the south and west sides of the church, and has a length of over seventy yards, with a width of forty.

The portion now uncovered depicts hunting and fishing scenes. Prof. Swuboda, rector of the Vienna University, has inspected the mosaics, and made a report upon it to the Ministry of Education. A commission has been appointed to consider how this valuable find can best be preserved.

THIS PREACHER'S CON[illegible]

Russell H. Conwell a Powerful Man [illegible] of En[illegible]

BY JOSEPH [illegible]

Preacher Russell

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—Only su[illegible] atives, and red and robust ones [illegible] that, are worthy or sufficient [illegible] terize Russell Herman Conwell [illegible] his astounding work. His per[illegible] history is an almost unbelieva[illegible] story of picturesque adventure, [illegible] endeavor, and brilliant con[illegible]

Forty-eight years ago he came to [illegible] bia and mortgaged an un[illegible] workingmen's church. The re[illegible] Baptist Temple now has the [illegible] auditorium in the United [illegible] and it is out of debt. He [illegible] the smoke-colored mists of [illegible] with the magic of his [illegible] industry, and common sense. [illegible] Dr. Conwell preaches to a [illegible] of 2013 adults—the largest [illegible] congregation in the coun[illegible] founded a university that [illegible] yearly enrollment of more than [illegible] students, in his two hospitals [illegible] are treated annually. [illegible] he has written seventeen [illegible] not compilations of sermons, [illegible] graphies, stories, and travels. [illegible] his twenty-eight lectures in his [illegible] without even so much as a page [illegible] to stimulate his extraordinary [illegible] "Acres of Diamonds," mean[illegible] wealth and opportunity are [illegible] hand instead of in a far and [illegible] country, has been delivered [illegible] times at home and abroad. [illegible] languages have been learned dur[illegible] in street cars and on rail[illegible] Charles A. Dana once said that [illegible] well is the greatest of living [illegible] biographers.

IMPRESSIVE IN APPEARANCE

[illegible] not when he came into his study [illegible] was waiting, a tall man, of [illegible] about a white hair in his very [illegible] head, he was leisurely, and his [illegible] face, I thought, seemed rather [illegible] and sad. I had expected a hur[illegible] impressive. Instead, in so far as [illegible] dress and appearance went, I [illegible] were looked into the gray eyes [illegible] country doctor or the resident [illegible] rural bank.

[illegible] never believed that I am [illegible]," Dr. Conwell said at one [illegible] the interview. "I am simply [illegible] man of business."

[illegible] his church twice every [illegible] the revenues of a single [illegible] Philadelphia have reached [illegible] sum of $3000. Oddly [illegible] out of the pulpit and away [illegible] platform, neither his voice [illegible] face is particularly expressive. [illegible] was a lawyer making $10,000 [illegible] At Roseaw Mountain, an [illegible] in the artillery, he was left [illegible] lost and trampled field among [illegible] dead dying. He has worked [illegible] week as a reporter. In the [illegible] 1873 he lost $40,000. Bayard [illegible] was his friend, and so was [illegible]

[illegible] church," I asked him, "gain[illegible] ing? I should like the critical [illegible] of an expert."

"[illegible] know," Dr. Conwell replied. [illegible] I look at my own congregation [illegible] the church is gaining; when I [illegible] into the country and talk with [illegible] the members I thing it is los[illegible] the church is passing through [illegible] most dangerous periods of [illegible] years. What the outcome will [illegible] I can not tell. You see, the [illegible] drifted away from the [illegible] of Christ. Religious people [illegible] spend most of his time in [illegible] heaven. They forget that He went [illegible] about Galilee healing the sick [illegible] teaching the ignorant. The church [illegible] does, but rich men estab[illegible] schools and hospitals, and now [illegible] remains but preaching and the [illegible] side of religion.

[illegible] SOCIAL LIFE NECESSARY.

[illegible] stand, I don't deprecate so[illegible]

[illegible] Indeed, I urge it and work [illegible] After the service at the tem[illegible] Sunday morning 2000 persons [illegible] stay for an hour and visit. Our [illegible] meetings are of the Ancient [illegible] from 750 to 1500 members of [illegible] are in attendance each [illegible] two-thirds of whom remain to [illegible] get better acquainted. The [illegible] collecting $60,000 a year, is the [illegible] rich home of the people, and is [illegible] of men who work for a liv[illegible] powerful middle class that is [illegible] and bone of every Ameri[illegible] unity. They hold together [illegible] they are Christians and be[illegible] are social. But the church [illegible] must reach and heal if it [illegible] prosperous and successful. [illegible] do I mean? That cities, vil[illegible] neighborhoods have differ[illegible] which is already being [illegible] public schools are all right, [illegible] But here is a town, let [illegible] around a dozen tan[illegible] boys and young men work [illegible] day. I would teach them [illegible] they wanted to learn—[illegible] bookkeeping, law, medicine [illegible] carpentry of leather. Nothing [illegible] years of my life gives [illegible] that is found in lecturing [illegible] boys who are longing or fight[illegible] education."

[illegible] would also doctor the peo[illegible] really?"

[illegible] haven't gone all the way [illegible] Worcester, rector of Em[illegible] here in Boston, but I be[illegible] degrees, in the principles of [illegible] Years ago I was in Mrs. [illegible] Glover Eddy's attorney, [illegible] commended her, but she has [illegible] suit to a mighty truth that [illegible] have let slip through [illegible] fingers—and that is, faith—[illegible] a more militant word is [illegible] Convince a man that he [illegible] chance and the proba[illegible] that he will recover.

HIS METHODS.

[illegible] years ago I changed my [illegible] called to pray at the [illegible] dying. I quit pleading [illegible] ception of a sin-burdened [illegible] heaven and began asking [illegible] body be filled with cour[illegible] speedily restored to sound [illegible] talked cheerfully and hope[illegible] when I dared. I told a story. [illegible] whom I know, doomed [illegible] the doctors, are going [illegible] daily business, and every [illegible] a sense of them at my own [illegible]

[illegible] for a specific case where [illegible] overcome and life was pro[illegible] courage and faith."

[illegible] so to say. "Very well, I [illegible] a hatmaker who lived [illegible] street. He had malarial [illegible] marriages of the bowels, [illegible] a dead man when I [illegible] room. His face was the [illegible] and he couldn't speak. [illegible] a spoonful of stimulant [illegible] a cup at his side and then [illegible] told me in a whisper, [illegible] better, that he had come [illegible] region in Scotland. 'If [illegible] try, you will get well. [illegible] try and the people.' [illegible] man said, 'the doc[illegible] up.'

[illegible] I replied, 'is all the [illegible] you to fight them.' [illegible] anecdotes about the [illegible] examination and the [illegible] of his countrymen. [illegible] came back and he [illegible] days later he was [illegible] is back. He regained [illegible] to work, saved [illegible] now living in Scot[illegible] village where he was [illegible]

Dr. Conwell quietly [illegible] said, "anything that [illegible] done—anything. Wh[illegible] grouped on which to [illegible] we had 57 cents. Th[illegible] was $25,000. We k[illegible] would come. "What," he said, "anything that is good can be done—anything. When we bought the ground on which to build the temple we had 57 cents. The price of the lot was $25,000. We knew the money would come. Personally, I keep out of debt, but I never save a part of my salary or my income. I don't need to, feeling as I do. I test all things by the temple. If I get angry I think of the temple. The temple is my work. The same methods of thought and conduct can be followed in any business, any profession, or any employment, if it is entered upon for the glory of God."

"Dr. Lyman Abbott," I said, "once told me that character is Christianity."

"Dr. Abbott is right. I hold that Christ is the Divine Son of God and the center of all kindness, mercy, justice, and righteousness. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob believed in Christ, although they never heard his name. The good that men do is from Christ, and that is Christianity."

"But is church membership necessary to salvation?"

"No; plenty of men out of the church are saved—more perhaps, than are in the church."

"Do you preach a personal devil?"

"There are many human interpretations and descriptions of heaven and hell," Dr. Conwell answered. "I don't care for them myself. Being old-fashioned about the Bible, I believe what it says. I preach, and am sustained, I think, that good people will go to heaven, but that bad people won't."

"How have you built up the largest Protestant congregation in the United States?"

THOUSANDS ARE BAPTIZED.

"It has been built by personal work on the part of the people and the pastor. I have baptized 3000 men and women in a single year. For five years seven persons joined the church each Sunday. Seven, by the way, has always been my fortunate number.

"Strangers who come to the temple are treated cordially. We take them by the hands and tell them we are glad to have them in our pews. We learn their names and follow them persistently, intelligently and tactfully. So far, we have declined to hold revival meetings of our own. Evangelists have preached at the temple because it is the largest church in the city, but they were under the management of other religious organizations or denominations. Each year we have a fair that lasts for a week. The idea, I am sure, originated with us. We sell all kinds of things, but money-making is merely an incident in the purpose. The object of the fair is to bring the people of the church together and to attract strangers.

"This year we had a week of games. One night, for example, thirty shuffleboards were in operation. On another night our thirty-one deacons played basketball with the trustees, and I was referee of the games. We also had races of different kinds. Friday evening was given over to the children. On Saturday night all the winners of the week came together in a final tournament. Nearly 900 persons took part in the contests. They were seen beforehand and told what they were expected to do. The scheme, you see, is to bring in people from the outside, to form their acquaintance, to visit them at their homes, and finally to get them into the congregation.

"Do you write your sermons?"

"I have never written a sermon in my life, nor a lecture. I preach twice on Sunday and talk briefly at the midweek prayer meeting. Saturday evening, or Saturday night in bed, or on Sunday morning, I think about what I can say to my people that will do them good. I choose a topic and then fit it with a text from the Bible. Sometimes I start to church without a topic, but I get it on the way. When I stand up in the pulpit I try to talk common sense. I speak for about half an hour. Cohesion, coherency and construction are matters of the moment—the whole sermon, good or bad, is thought out while I am on my feet."

HOW THE SCHOOL GREW.

"Tell me about the college and the hospital that you founded?"

"A young man with no more than a common school education, having a mother and three young brothers to support, wanted to be a preacher. He asked if I would help him. I told him I would teach him at night. He spread the news, and seven other young fellows came with him for the second lesson. Inside of a month I was teaching a class of forty. I got instructors, the school grew, and we now have a university with several departments, including law, medicine, and dentistry. This year we shall have 4000 students.

"Not one of our graduates has ever failed at the State examination when he has presented himself for a license to practice his profession in Pennsylvania. We have classes day and night—for young men who are not compelled to work and for those who must get employment and pay their own expenses. The university gives its instruction to everybody. Jew and Christian alike, and asks no questions concerning religion. The hospital was begun in two rooms, with a volunteer nurse. Then we obtained a house. Now we have two separate hospital organizations, together with the necessary buildings."

"Do you remember your first sermon?"

"Only indistinctly. I was 4 years old, perhaps, and, using a huge rock near the door of the family kitchen for a pulpit, addressed myself to my mother and the chickens."

A SCHOOLBOY AT THREE.

"You were brought up in the country?"

"On a little sterile farm among the hills of Massachusetts. My father was also a stonemason. My mother read the Bible, Beecher's sermons, 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and the New York Tribune to us in the evening. I started to school at the age of 3, walking two miles each way, with Charley, my brother, who was 6. When I was older I boiled maple sap all night, and by the light of the fire committed a considerable part of Milton's 'Paradise Lost' to memory. By and by John Brown came to our house and talked slavery with my father. Fred Douglass accompanied him on one occasion. After that, while in bed, I would sometimes hear a wagon stop at our barn, and I knew a black man was being passed along to freedom. Rev. Asa Niles, my father's cousin, a Methodist preacher, as well as a farmer, talked to me about an education. I looked at the Berkshire Hills and imagined I was a prisoner.

"One night I crept out of the attic window to the roof of the woodshed and jumped to the ground. A few articles of clothing and a little bread and meat were in a bundle. I was running away from home. At Huntington, the nearest village, a conductor let me ride in a baggage car to Boston. I hadn't a cent of money. I reached Boston at night, and slept in an empty cask on the banks of the Charles River. The next day was Sunday. Hungry, penitent, and homesick, I walked the streets. George W. Chipman, a deacon at Tremont Temple, met me and took me to Sunday-school. When he heard my story he put me on a railway train and sent me home. Many years after that I taught a class in Tremont Temple and Mr. Chipman was present when I was ordained into the Baptist ministry.

"I was 15 years old when I ran away the second and last time. I sailed from New York for Liverpool in a cattle ship. When I returned my father greeted me as if I had only been absent for an hour or two. Nor did he speak of the matter afterward. Asa Niles persuaded him to let Charley and me attend Wilbraham Academy. He could give us nothing but his consent. We earned our board and our tuition by farm work. For six weeks we lived on mush and milk. A little money was made with chestnuts, which we gathered in the woods. It was at the academy that I learned to debate; but I almost starved to death.

"WAS AN UNBELIEVER.

"The second year I taught school. Then in 1860 Charley and I entered Yale. My clothing was cheap, and didn't fit. I had no money. We worked on farms in the neighborhood. I took the classical course and the law course at the same time. Fortunately, I could memorize a page of printed matter by simply looking at it. Those were hard days. I was too shabby to take part in college life. I was hungry, and I was worked to death. It was then that faith departed temporarily, and that I vaunted by unbelief.

"I wanted to go off to the war in 1861, but my father warned the recruiting officers that I was under age. So I traveled from town to town and made patriotic speeches. In 1862 I raised a company of mountain boys and became their captain. While in the army I spent every moment I could in keeping up with my class in law at Yale. John Ring, 16 years old, was my orderly. He read the Bible in my tent morning and evening. I ordered him to stop. John Ring hurt my conscience and got upon my nerves. I went to Newbern, N. C., to see about the back pay of my men. The Confederates attacked our camp while I was gone. John Ring was driven away with the rest. Then he remembered a sword that had been given me by friends in Massachusetts. He returned and got it. In his second escape he came to a burning bridge. Hanging to the girders he crossed hand over hand, but he was so terribly injured that he died. But he saved the sword.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE.

"I was arrested for being absent from my command, although I had a pass in my pocket. After months of delay I was tried and convicted. The President of the United States heard the facts, set aside the verdict, made me a lieutenant-colonel, and ordered me West for staff service with Gen. McPherson. At Kenesaw Mountain, while in command of two batteries, a Confederate shell exploded and I was hit by a fragment. When I regained consciousness at night on the field I thought of my mother and John Ring. One of my arms was broken in two places, and there was a bad wound in my shoulder. I was in the hospital for a long time. I continued to think of John Ring and my mother. I had earnest talks also with the chaplain, a Baptist minister. Since then I have tried to be a Caristian.

"When I could travel I went to Nashville for medical treatment. There Gen. George H. Thomas gave me a dispatch for Gen. John A. Logan in Washington. The rough roads caused my wounds to open and I collapsed at Harpers Ferry. When I was well the war was over.

"I read law in Massachusetts, was graduated from Albany University, and moved to Minneapolis. I joined a Baptist church in St. Paul and conducted a noon prayer meeting for men in my law office. I also started a newspaper. Mrs. Conwell and I lived in two rooms. My practice increased and I bought a home. While at a meeting of old soldiers my house burned to the ground. Reaching the scene, I suffered from a hemorrhage of the lungs. My doctors ordered me to a milder climate. But I was penniless. Friends persuaded the Governor to send me to Germany as immigrant agent for Minnesota. But my health was so bad that I couldn't perform my duties. Many hemorrhages followed. The physicians at a hospital in Paris found that a bullet with which I had been wounded early in the war had worked down into one of my lungs. I came to New York and had the bullet removed by the surgeons of Bellevue Hospital.

GOES AROUND THE WORLD.

"Then I joined my wife in Boston. We were very poor and lived in one room. I became a newspaper reporter at $5 a week, and Mrs. Conwell took in sewing. When my salary was increased we rented a house. I practiced law, sold real estate and lectured. Next I went around the world and wrote travel letters for the New York Tribune and a paper in Boston. I interviewed William I of Germany, Bismarck, and the Prince of Wales, now Edward VII, King of England. I also lectured at Cambridge on Italian history.

"I resumed the practice of law when I got back to Boston, giving my services free to the poor at night. In some of my patent cases I appeared before the Supreme Court of the United States. I was prosperous and happy. But my wife died. Two years later I lost $60,000, and was heavily in debt besides. I began preaching along the docks at night and teaching in the Sunday-school of Tremont Temple. Good fortune returned, and I was earning large fees in my profession. But I closed my offices and went to Lexington, a near-by village, and preached in the Baptist Church for $50 a month. After two years I came to Philadelphia and to a poor little congregation that owed $15,000. All the time I was a lawyer and a lecturer I never felt right. When I began to preach my mind was at rest."

TURF ON THE TABLE, A PARISIAN CRAZE.

[From The Sketch.]

It must seem incredible that grown men and women should go wild with excitement over the race-game which is so familiar in every nursery. Nevertheless it is a fact, and certain circles in Paris are as excited over the performances of the little leaden horses moved forward in accordance with the throw of the dice as other men are over horses of real flesh and blood. Indeed, racing clubs for the express purpose of matching these leaden steeds in break-neck encounters over a wooden track have already been formed, and their membership grows from day to day. The two leading organizations are known as the Racing Plomb Club, the first of all such societies, and the Pur Plomb Club, which is its greatest rival. In the former such well-known writers as Tristan Bernard, one of the authors of "Toddles," etc., and Fernand Vandérem are among the most active of the members, who also include Alfred Capus and several distinguished writers on the leading Paris papers; while in the Pur Plomb Club a leading part is played by M. Romain Coolus, M. André Picard, and M. Vuillard, the well-known painter. These men all declare that there is no distraction so great as that furnished by the races of the leaden horses, before whose activities the excitements of poker, baccarat and bridge pale their ineffectual fires.

Credit for the inauguration of these races must be given to M. Fernand Vandérem who amused himself with them in his schooldays. Later on, he established weekly meetings with some friends for the purpose of playing the race-game, and out of them the Racing Plomb Club, or the "R.P.C.," as it is more familiarly called, grew, for each of the competitors gradually got together a number of horses, which were kept in stables modeled after real ones. They gave their horses names, and then they took to racing them for money stakes, the races being called after those celebrated on the turf. Gradually, a series of rules was drawn up, one of the most important of which, gives the horse which wins a certain number of races a slight advantage. When, for instance, a horse has won stakes to the value of 75 francs, if its owner throws a six, instead of advancing the horse six points on the board it is advanced seven points. If the horse has won 200 francs, it gets two points for every six thrown when its turn comes; if it has won 400 francs it gets three points; if it has won 800 francs it gets four points, while if it has won 1600 francs it gets five points, so that if the owner is lucky enough to throw six it advances eleven marks on the board.

Few horses, however, have ever won so much as to get the addition of five points, for their appearance is, like that of real horses, limited to a certain number of years, after which they cannot take part in any competition. Then, as with horses of flesh and blood, they may, so to speak, be put to stud, and they may have colts and fillies in the ordinary way, which derive a certain benefit from the previous performances of their sire and dam.

To give greater verisimilitude to the game, each owner has his colors, while there is a stud-book, in which each horse is accurately described by name and according to the design painted on him. Many of these names are delightful fantastic, like "It'll Rain Tomorrow," and "Tangle-Foot," while other names are after well-known people, plays, etc.

The jockeys are, naturally, the owners, who throw the dice which determine the speed of the horses, and they make a point of being present at every meeting, for they love the excitement. If by chance anything unforeseen prevents their attendance, they send a friend to represent them. Substitutes are paid for their services, for they receive 20 per cent. of the stakes which they win. Certain of the prizes are comparatively large; thus the Grand Prix carries a stake of 300 francs, the Derby is worth 250 francs, the Grand Steeplechase and the Grand Prix d'Automne are each 200 francs, while the smallest stake is 40 francs. The entrance fee varies up to 20 francs for the Grand Prix. These races are begun with three or four dice, are continued with two, and ended with one dice, in order to prolong the delightful uncertainty, which carries the excitement to the same fever-heat as may be seen any day at Auteuil or Longchamps, both of which courses are reproduced on the race-board, according as the races are steeplechase or on the flat. In the former races, the obstacles and hedges, the wall and the river at Auteuil are realistically reproduced; while in the case of the latter the course at Longchamps is as accurately represented with its trees and the natural rise and fall of the course.

Some of these little leaden horses actually seem to show a special antitude for a particular form of work, and will win again and again in flat racing, and fail again and again in the steeplechase. In this way they acquire a reputation, and though originally they cost only a few pence each, a horse which has won a great many races may be regarded by its owner as being worth a very large sum, below which he would not dream of selling it, even if he would contemplate an offer for it at all.

A Typical Unionite.

Roebottom was a roofer. He was engaged on a Mickle-street house. One day, as he was lunching, he was heard to give a yell of pain.

"What's the matter, Roebottom?" a carpenter asked.

"I got a nail in my foot," the roofer answered.

"Well, why don't you pull it out?" said the carpenter.

"What! In my dinner hour?" yelled Roebottom, reproachfully.—[Philadelphia Record.

The Wise Way to Buy Soap

The following is a piece of valuable advice from a celebrated singer, who is famous for her beauty as well as for her voice. Don't trust your nose when you buy soap for your toilet. A delicate and delightful scent may cover a multitude of impurities. Many finely scented soaps are made of rancid fats, or loaded with injurious chemicals that will ruin your skin. Some are doubtless pure, but how can you tell? Buy Harfina Soap and know that you are safe. Its odor is that of the pure, healing pine tar balsam of which it is made—one of the most soothing, balmy and curative products in Nature's laboratory. Its effects show how good it is. It is deliciously refreshing. It soon makes the skin clear and velvety—no more roughness, redness, irritation and unsightly yellow "dead" tints. The clear, clean bloom of a healthy skin is a prize beyond price—don't trifle with it. Don't you want to see what this famous soap will do for your skin? Ask your druggists or any of the following druggists for this splendid soap. 25c a cake, or sent by mail on receipt of 25c. Send for book, "The Care of the Skin." PHILO HAY SPEC. CO., Newark, N. J.

Fine Hand Worked Samples Art Linen Large and Medium Scarfs and Squares To Go At Less Than Half Monday

Great big showy pieces of finest hand-drawn art linen, that have been soiled from too frequent handling. We want to put the stock in ship-shape condition. Description will hardly do these pieces justice. You must see them, note the even, careful stitching, and the fine linen upon which they are worked, and note the greatly reduced price. They are actual, not estimated, with us.

Fire in the Factory of a Trouser Manufacturer Caused Water Damage to the Lining and Pockets of 350 Pairs of Trousers

They weren't at all exposed to the fire, and as good fortune would have it, in the process of manufacturing they were turned inside out so that when the water dripped on them, only the linings and pockets became water stained. Every Woman and Man and Boy and Girl in Los Angeles Should Know Intimately —not only Bullock's Bargain Basement and the values it holds, but also the earnestness with which we are endeavoring to make it a constantly increasing help to buyers—

—From its inception our representatives have been scouring the markets of the World to secure unusual offerings, offerings which contained possibilities not found in a regular way—We wanted goods we could mark at an under price, and yet goods that would be worthy Bullock selling and this store's positive Guarantee—
—Thousands of miles have been traveled, and more thousands of Dollars spent resultfully, and thousands and thousands of customers have enthusiastically helped to make Bullock's Bargain Basement a Success——And still not enough buyers know of it and the advantages it is putting forward every day—
—Some months ago we determined on a campaign of exploitation that would exceed, in forcefulness, any effort yet put forth—
—Our corps of representatives was thoroughly instructed and went to work, not in a sensational, blustering way, but carefully and thoroughly to accomplish more than they ever accomplished before—

BIG ROUND-UP.

RUSSIAN RAILWAY THIEVES STOLE FOURTEEN MILLIONS.

Gang With Hundreds of Members and Elaborate Organization Had Railway Shipping Clerks in Its Pay Who Diverted Consignments of Valuable Goods to Its Warehouses Where They Were Sold to Merchants.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WARSAW, Oct. 4.—Now awaiting their trial in Moscow prisons are the two leaders and 150 members of the biggest band of railway thieves Europe has ever seen. They worked chiefly in the south of Russia and had no less than 400 accomplices, of whom the larger portion were well-dressed, plausible women. Their aim was, not to rob passengers, but freight trains and luggage vans, and so successful were they that since the foundation of the gang four years ago, they have been spiriting away goods to the annual value of over $3,000,000.

If it were not for the letter one of them wrote to a newspaper, and the policeman, Dotolenko, who watched the writer of the letter until he caught him making up imitation consignments, they might have been going on now. Several policemen were in their pay, but Dotolenko refused to be bribed, and, by his honesty and perseverance, did much to run the thieves to earth. Their impudence and coolness were the chief reasons for the success they so long enjoyed.

An Honest Russian Policeman.

Dotolenko, who ran down the great gang of railway thieves. Photographed with his sweetheart.

THE LEADERS.

Their organization was well managed. It comprised two leaders, Sokolow and Pietrenko, who, being employed as track engineers, knew the ins and outs of the railroad business. Under their guidance the band organized a number of departments, of which the chief was the intelligence department which informed them when and where goods of value were being sent. The chief workers here were well-dressed women, who used to go into the big shops and warehouses, and, under pretext of having some trifles they had brought there sent well packed, would ask questions which led to their getting all the information they wanted. These women worked chiefly in St. Petersburg, Warsaw, Moscow and Odessa. When they heard that some valuable goods were just going to be sent from Odessa to the Caucasus, for instance, they would telegraph to the nearest "agent" at Tiflis, who, if necessary, would ride to the station on a motorcycle in order to get the things in time. Very often the same goods were sent back to Odessa, where the band had large warehouses, under the name of some fictitious firm. So quickly were the goods stolen and sent to the various warehouses in all the big cities, that even such things as fancy goods, which fade and go out of fashion quickly, were sold, as their books show, for as good prices as were originally asked by the makers.

The thieves had a special telegraphic code, which was changed twice a year, and when the goods were found in the Petersburg warehouses, invoices and bills of lading exactly imitating the regulation forms issued by the railways, were found. Another important branch was the so-called "railway department," which, needless to say, included shipping clerks at the chief railway stations. The dispatch of goods is very slow in Russia. Before all the formalities are over and a freight train is at liberty to take the stuff several days, and even weeks, must elapse. The goods, packed and labeled, are placed in railway warehouses to which the shipping clerks have entrance. They worked as follows:

FAKED CRATES.

A wholesale dealer sent a crate or two of valuable goods from St. Petersburg to Moscow. The pies at Petersburg gave notice of this to the band's chief office, which was at Rostoffon-Don, giving, as near as possible, the date of dispatch. Then the Rostoff-on-Don thieves wired on the information to the stations at Petersburg and Moscow, in cipher, addressing it to the clerk who happened to be in their service. He looked out for these particular crates, an easy task, as he knew the name of the sender and the day they would come, and made out bills of lading, which he gave to he firm's representative. The crates went into the storehouse to await the time of departure.

Then the expedition clerk made out another invoice like the one he had given to the merchant, and sent it to the band's agent at Moscow, making it in the name of a station a few miles from Moscow, on the Petersburg side. In all other respects the paper was identical with the other. Then, with a couple more accomplices, he went to the station warehouse, had the crates exactly copied, put stones or dirt into the sham ones, which were addressed to Moscow itself, while the real ones were readdressed to the little station before Moscow. By this means the thieves were enabled to claim their crates before the faked ones reached the station at Moscow. If necessary, the accomplices there would be advised, by wire, to make difficulties about forwarding the sham crates for a day or two.

Of course, when the man at Moscow found that he had got stones instead of the goods he had ordered, he went to the station and demanded compensation, but as the bills were all in order and the numbers tallied, he did not get it. For years complaints were made about this and last spring all the papers were full of indignant letters from merchants who had been robbed. One openly accused the shipping clerks of robbery. This epistle was answered shortly in the same paper by a clerk from Wilno, who wrote thus:

"Dear Mr. Editor: Your reader, X, accuses us shipping clerks of having a hand in the robberies that go on in the various railways. Of course we steal. I not only admit, but am proud of it. And what is more, we shall go on stealing until our chiefs grow honest and we are paid a living wage for our hard work. As to X, if he likes to know, I had a hand in getting his last consignment turned into stones. I will tell him how I did it, if he wants to know Yours truly.

"A SHIPPING CLERK AT WILNO"

NO JOKE.

Some people thought this a joke, but it turned out afterward that it was true, and, thanks to this imprudent piece of "cheek," the police were able to find out who sent it, and thus discover some of the band, though 250 more are still at liberty.

When there was not time to make new crates, the goods were simply taken out of those to be sent which were filled with stones, or sometimes, only paper. This method had one great disadvantage, and that was that the crates often bore marks of having been opened. When the goods reached the various thieves' repositories "a new consignment" was advertised in the local papers and they were sold almost at once. The agents in charge of these were experienced warehousemen and vendors, and large numbers of office books, supposed to contain accounts of transactions with various big firms, were found by the police. These were shown to customers, to prove that the goods came from reliable houses. Sokolow and Pietrenko, the original organizers of the band, traveled about to the various depots and stations and kept a faithful account of all the transactions. As they inspected the railways for the government nobody was surprised to see them at stations, talking with railway clerks. As time went on the band grew rich and motor cars were bought, to allow the various accomplices to get about quicker.

SPY SYSTEM.

The strongest feature of this organization was the department of spies, some 250 in number, who were familiar with every large shipping-house in Southern Russia, and so well organized that not one large consignment left Moscow for the Caucasus but they knew of and reported it. Not only did they frequent business houses, but they did a great deal of their work in restaurants, where they talked to merchants' clerks, invited them to supper and unloosed their tongues to talk about their employer's business.

BOUGHT HIS OWN.

Another case occurred in which a man bought his own stolen goods. A large consignment of laces had been ordered by a Tiflis firm and stolen. The band sent the things back to their Moscow repositories. The Moscow merchant, on hearing that his first consignment had been stolen, and wanting to send some more to the Tiflis customer, could not find any in his own warehouse. Somebody suggested he should go to a new firm in the town, which had often a large choice. He did so and found just what was wanted, paid cash for it and sent it off to Tiflis. It was not until the capture of the gang that he found out, from the false invoices found in the repository, that he had paid for his own stolen goods.

So far very few of the stacks of papers found in the band's repositories and at Rostoff-on-Don have been examined, but those already gone over prove that all of the 400 members profited according to their activity. The band was formed toward the end of 1905 and soon numbered over 200 members, scattered over Southern Russian railway lines. Sokolow and Pietrenko seem to have been its life and soul from the beginning and, naturally, made most out of the business. Their accounts show that they have robbed the railways of no less than $14,000,000 worth of goods. This beats anything that has been done in Russia in this way before, although, of course, robberies have always flourished on the railways, for, as the shipping clerk says, the pay is bad and the high officials steal, so everybody does it.

When all the papers have been examined the leaders and the 150 members now in custody will be tried. It is expected that some of those now arrested will furnish to the police the names of more of their accomplices.

B. C. BASKERVILLE.

CONCERNING WAISTCOATS

The waistcoat, in its ordinary form, is an unnecessary garment. It is used principally to hide the prettiest part of a man's necktie, and to exhibit his watch-chain.

These things are not sufficient to justify its existence, and I therefore consider it a folly to wear waistcoats.

As, however, I am a folly myself, I naturally wear waistcoats.

But I don't like the things, and I don't think anybody else would like them either, if, like me, they had to play eleven parts in one evening's performance, with eleven different waistcoats carefully calculated to match the parts. Especially as the change, in at least half-a-dozen cases, has to be effected in less than two minutes. I can safely assert that by the end of the evening any average actor who had not gone through Pélissier's Sartorial Training School—which is a department of the Follies' Academy of Dramatic Art—would be in abject need of a straight waistcoat.

After one night's experience of "Potted Plays," "Beverage Quarielles" and "Music Hall Burlesques," he would have done with follies of every description for ever.

I, myself, have had an old waistcoat straightened out with whalebone in readiness for the moment when I threaten to take the life of the stage manager, or my salary before it is due. And my dresser keeps it under lock and key, together with the decanter.

I fancy he sees some remote connection between the two articles.

LABOR-SAVING WAISTCOATS.

Meantime, until I am put permanently into this particular garment, I continue to get into all manner of waistcoats specially constructed to facilitate quick change.

Probably no other member of my sex, wearied by the ordeal of dressing in a hurry, has realized the full possibilities of labor-saving waistcoats, convenient for the catching of a train in a railway station or a bad cold in the back.

Few, indeed, of the waistcoats which I wear upon the stage possess any backs of their own.

One of them—the invention of a fashionable West-end tailor—is made in one piece with the trousers.

This combination garment I wear when I am singing (?) the "Bedouin's Love Song," in the "Music Hall Burlesque."

The contrivance serves a double purpose. Not only does it render practicable a one-minute quick change, but it also spoils young Douglas Maclaren's gag (to which he is precociously devoted) shouted from the gallery of the Music Hall scene at the expense of almost every male member of the company as they appear.

"Look out, yer braces is a-hanging down," he joyfully exclaims. But the information leaves me quite unruffled, because, obviously enough, I don't wear braces with this particular garment.

Douglas's dilettante remark, I may mention, was originally inspired by the fob which Morris Harvey wears in his imitation of Bransby Williams.

The most noisy-patterned waistcoat in the present entertainment is worn by Morris Harvey as one of the Committee of Scrutiny appointed by the audience to watch the process of hypnotizing Margarine, the Dream Dancer.

It ought to be a really valuable piece of stuff, considering the enormous checks which cover it; but its effect upon the beholder is appalling. It has already been the direct cause of three cab accidents and one fit in Piccadilly Circus.

A FAIR LADY'S AWFUL GIFT.

As those readers who have visited the Appolo will be aware, I am the hypnotizer of Margarine, and whatever my sensations may be I have to keep a very serious face throughout the performance.

Harvey got that waistcoat as a little surprise. He calculated that its appearance would be sufficient to dry me up on the first night.

But the scheme failed.

By the irony of fate, an admiring lady friend had sent me a waistcoat earlier in the day which she said she had knitted specially for me with her own hands, and my eyesight was so impaired as a matter of consequence that Harvey's section of a tessalated pavement looked positively ordinary to me.

Ostensibly, he had ordered it (at the expense of the management) for the good of the show. Virtually, however, I believe he was paving the way for his annual holiday at Margate, where I am told he is one of the dressiest young bloods to be seen on the beach.

My revered master, H. G. Pélissier, thinks the limit of perfection in the waistcoat line is reached in the garment he affects as manager of the "Benefit Matinée."

This is a sort of glorified chest-protector, consisting of a waistcoat, a white shirt-front, a collar, and a pale pink tie, all in one undetachable piece.

The thing is nothing short of a wardrobe in itself, but in his anxiety to find the postal order for presentation to "Miss Sarah Judkins" at the end of the show, "H. G. P." needlessly upsets the whole arrangement.

True, he professes to do this solely for the sake of the laugh which invariably follows, but we of the inner circle are fully convinced that he does it merely to display the wonderful nature of his invention.

So far I fear I have dealt only with what may be termed "property" waistcoats; but one member of our company owns a waistcoat which cannot be so described—except to denote that it owner is a man of property.

Occasionally when the other Follies are staggering wearily out of the stage door late at night, after an exhausting effort to please our audience, this gentleman—Dan Everard, our jeune premier—may be discovered on the threshold, robed in a faultless white dress waistcoat, ornamented with jeweled buttons.

After playing a mere "thinking part" during the evening, he loves to hover there and excite our envy expressing gayly forth to entertain a little party of blue-blooded bon vivants at the Savoy, or, as some say, at a neighboring Bodega.

This brings me to the boundaries of my subject. Of waistcoats in private life I have but little personal knowledge. For I was brought up on strictly economical lines, with exhortations to despise all superfluous luxuries, and to cut my coat according to my cloth—nothing whatever being mentioned about waistcoats.—[Pearson's Weekly.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Lesson.

Keep this lesson well in view:
The world don't turn for to look at you!

It's task is still to roll along,
An' it never stops for your sigh or song.

Shirm or sunshine, still 'tis true,
The world don't turn for to look at you!

—[Atlanta Constitution.

Fate.

He plied his pen for the sons of men,
To lessen their toil and woe,
But the pen for buffoons ignored his runes
Till his hopes in life sank low.

When he tested the fears of the quickening years
And wary of moralists grew,
He sang one day an aimless lay,
And it echoed the whole world through.

So the work that he wrought for human thought
Men spurned with a pitying look,
While the random play of a lazy day
They claimed and called his book.
—[Charles W. Snow, in Smart Set.

The Dreamer.

We scoff at him who sits and dreams,
And will not join us in the strife,
Who will not run the race that seems
The chief and only thing in life.
We scoff at him; but there are whiles
He gives us pity in his smiles.

He sees our endless round and round,
Our ceaseless seeking for the goal,
And knows that goal is never found
Though we may scarify the soul.
We sigh that he is left behind,
But does he grieve that we are blind?

For him are ways we may not fare,
For him are all the worlds that be,
For him the breezes softly bear
The perfume of the distant sea,
And in his dreams he often stands
Within the wondrous flowered lands.

If we might know the songs he hears
Then we could hush the songs we sing
That fall all harshly on the ears,
For his beat in as birds awing
From somewhere in the pailing sky,
Serene and sweet and fair and high.

Our gain we clutch with eager hands
And from our neighbor hold apart,
But he—somehow he understands
The craving of the human heart;
His pathway holds no stumbling stones
Because of these the dreams he owns.

O, dreamer, let us fold our hands
That grasp the substance; let us wait
As you, until from alien strands
The ships of fancy bring their freight.
Let us know how the world should seem,
O, dreamer, teach us how to dream!
—[Chicago Post.

New York's Leadership.

In its steamship trade, foreign and domestic, New York leads London, and it is far ahead of London in the extent of its bank clearings. New York sends more letters, telegrams and telephone messages than London. Nearly a third of the automobiles of the United States are used by residents of New York City. Over twice as many automobiles are in service in New York as in the big British town. More millionaires live in New York than in London and Paris combined. None of these facts could be guessed from the population figures. The second city in the world in the number of its inhabitants, New York is, by a very broad margin, the first of the world's cities in the volume and the variety of its interests and activities.—[Leslie's Weekly.

J. R. LANE DRY GOODS CO.

EDUCATIONAL DRIFT.

Put in dollars and cents to it for a rudimentary education? For a committee of teachers to fix the careers of 146 lads graduated from the elementary schools of Brooklyn seventeen years ago? It was found that eighty-four were engaged in commercial life in skilled labor, twenty-two professions, eight in civil service, eleven as managers and proprietors, their average annual income and personal efforts figured almost exactly two and a half times the average yearly income of the men classed as day laborers in the city of New York. There are good reasons for the belief that the acquisition of an education a boy is more which brings within the realm of greater effectiveness.

The value of an education is one of the strongest arguments for it, but it is not to be considered as a world where young men must fight for a living.—[Boston Globe.

An industrial and educational experiment is being made in one of the Chicago public schools, which may have considerable effect on shaping public opinion regarding the course of study.

The experiment which is being undertaken, after grave consideration of the subject, involves a combination between book and industrial training. A group of forty boys, all future wage workers, have been selected. They are divided into two companies of twenty each. For two weeks the first group will work in large establishments which have promised coöperation. The other twenty will stay in the schoolroom, studying mechanical and freehand drawing, commercial geography, English and other subjects. On the second Saturday, the first group will devote the day to instructing the second group how to pick up the work in the factory. On Monday the groups will change places, the workers entering the schoolroom and the other group the factory. So on, they will alternate at two-weeks intervals for the remainder of the school year.

It is admittedly an experiment. It may not succeed, but it is at least worth watching, for it may be that the educators who are starting the experiment are on the right track.

Gifts aggregating $2,400,962 were announced by the trustees of three educational institutions last week, as follows: Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, $1,700,000; Yale College, $465,000; Columbia University, $235,962. Of the gifts to Columbia, $100,000 was from an unknown donor.

There is a popular impression that the people of California are possessed of more wealth, energy and enterprise than of intellectual culture and scientific taste; but no community is more liberal in contributing money to promote scholarship and the diffusion of knowledge, writes William E. Curtis in the Chicago Record-Herald. The University of California had received more personal gifts up to a recent date than any other institution in the world that is supported by public taxation. Omitting recent gifts to the University of Virginia and the University of Wisconsin, it has received larger private benefactions than all of the rest of the State institutions in the country put together. President Jordan of Stanford declares that "the pressure to obtain a higher education is greater to the square inch in California than in any other State," which accounts for the large number of students at Berkeley and at Palo Alto, and it is asserted that newspapers and magazines which offer prizes for literary contributions receive more manuscripts from California than from Massachusetts or Indiana or any other State. The atmosphere may not be so intellectual as in Boston, but the intellectual activity is quite as great.

Plans have been made at the University of Michigan for a course of aëronautics in connection with the engineering department. This is said to be the first aëronautical course in any educational institution.

Prof. William I. Thomas of the University of Chicago, attacks the idea that the child mind is similar to the savage mind, and that instead of the children in the schools being taught the most primitive methods of making things they would be better employed making electric dynamos or other articles that can be used in the twentieth century.

"We have every reason to think," says Prof. Thomas, "that the mind of the savage and the mind of the civilized are fundamentally alike. There are organic changes in the brain of the growing child, but these are the same in the children of all races. The savage is not a modern child, but one whose consciousness is not influenced by the copies set in civilization. And the able child is not a savage, but one whose mind is not yet fully dominated by the white type of culture, and, incidentally, there was never a more inept comparison than that of the child with the savage, for the savage is a person of definitely fixed and specialized aims and habits, while the child, as Prof. Dewey has expressed it, is primarily one whose calling is growth, and who is, consequently, characterized by flexible and unspecialized habits."

The school teachers of Illinois have just received a surprise in a notice calling their attention to a new law enacted at the last session of the Legislature which provides, among other things, that "in every public school of this State not less than one-half hour of each week shall be devoted to teaching the pupils thereof kindness and justice to and humane treatment and protection of birds and animals and the important part they fulfil in the economy of nature." This was well enough, and most of the teachers who received the bulletin didn't read any further. Those who got down to section 5, however, discovered this:

"No teacher who knowingly violates any provision of sections 1, 2 or 3 of this act shall be entitled to receive more than 95 per cent. of the public school moneys that would otherwise be due for the month in which such provision shall be violated."

Naturally there is a feeling of rebellion among the teachers over the "bogey law."

On the suggestion of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of Chicago schools, the prospective school ma'am before she can enter the Chicago Normal School to get her certificate, must hereafter pass a rigid examination in the articulation of "prunes and prisms" and the unraveling of all the classic tongue-twisters, from "Peter Piper" to "She Sells Sea Shells."

Mrs. Young believes that the Chicago teachers have not been ready enough to take their own medicine. Moreover, she asserts, there are a good many teachers in the present school system who can't even pronounce English correctly. In her report to the committee she writes:

"If attention to distinct articulation and correct pronunciation is left until students enter the normal school the day is too late in many cases to eradicate bad habits of speech. The superintendent, therefore, recommends that oral expression be added to the requirements of candidates for admission to the Chicago Normal School, beginning with the examination of January, 1910, and that one-half credit be allowed to it."

The committee approved the recommendation enthusiastically.

BANK COMBINES TO BE STUDIED.

INVESTIGATIONS TO BE MADE BY THE GOVERNMENT.

Questions of Joint Management of State and National Banks to Be Studied—Relationships Vary in Character, According to Location and Ownership.

[Washington Correspondence of Journal of Commerce.]

How far State and national banks should be allowed to become associated in management and in their general affiliation is a question to which some officers of the government are now giving serious consideration. How far there is any authority for interfering with such affiliations is another question that is receiving its due share of notice. It is not likely that anything of a significance can be done in the direction of separating the management of State and national institutions, even if it were desired to take such a step. Comptroller of the Currency Murray does not wish to interfere with the present situation in any respect that trenches upon the rights of the banks, nor has he any disposition to attempt to weaken legitimate alliances and associations among the banks. But there are certain conditions which have been revealed by the replies made by examiners to the recent questions as to the location of national and State institutions, which have strongly stimulated the interest of the Treasury authorities, and have led to the opinion that exceptionally careful examination of institutions thus located or affiliated should be had in the future, while it is believed that in some instances the conditions revealed are not of the best type from the standpoint of general banking.

RELATION BETWEEN BANKS.

Although Comptroller Murray, through his recent questions to examiners, has obtained considerable useful information as to the relationships of banks belonging to different systems, it is probable that he has merely scratched the surface of an extremely interesting situation. The question put by the Comptroller related chiefly to the location of the various institutions, it being asked whether the national banks were situated in the same banking offices with State institutions or in the same building. Included with this was a question regarding the "affiliations" existing between the different classes of institutions. The replies made by the examiners, nearly 100 in number, indicate, when digested, three classes of cases. In one, it seems that the juxtaposition of the banks in the same building or in the same offices is the only apparent relationship between them—it being assumed, of course, that there is the general good feeling that would accompany such a situation. In a second, it appears that the joint occupancy of one building or room is accompanied by the having of a number of stockholders, directors, or officers, or all three, in common. In a third, there is no open connection between the banks, the institutions being located in different buildings, but there is a community of control of stockholders, or of directors. The mere number of banks which are located in the same building or office is very considerable—they being so numerous, as is shown by the reports of the examiners, as to furnish cause for very substantial surprise to those who have never looked into this general question. In the various examination districts the number of banks thus located will vary all the way from none at all up to sixty or more, with exceptional instances where the number is even higher. There are comparatively few districts where there are not several banks thus located.

LOCATION AND OWNERSHIP.

It appears to be the case that, where banks are thus closely located together, there is a similar closeness of affiliation in management. This is not always true, as noted above, but appears to be the rule. In many instances, it would seem that the State banks or trust companies are really nothing more than departments of the national institutions to which they are allied. Where such a condition exists, there is, of course, a possibility, which is not an actuality in nearly all instances, that the assets and cash of the institutions will be shifted back and forth as contingencies seem to require. There is not necessarily anything wrong with this which not in this way, but it is obvious that under such conditions examinations conducted on an independent basis are not likely to produce very accurate results or to reveal with much correctness the true conditions prevailing in the institutions. This is why the Comptroller is seeking through agreement with State bank examiners to secure joint examinations of the institutions thus jointly located. The simultaneous character of the examination, of course, prevents any concealment of the state of facts truly existing in either institution at the moment. While the conditions are not as objectionable in the case of banks belonging to two different systems which are owned or controlled by the same people, the facts which have been revealed are such as to point directly to the desirability of simultaneous examinations of these institutions for reasons similar to those which control in the case of the institutions located in the same rooms or buildings. The conditions which indicate the advisability of such a course seem to exist more largely among the country banks or in smaller towns where banks of various kinds have sometimes been organized on the "chain" system for the purpose of coöperating with one another and controlling all the business of various classes to be found in such places. The situation in the larger cities is undoubtedly graver, since such objections as there are to the practice referred to are likely to be much increased in intensity in the larger places. But it is a noteworthy fact that in such cities there is comparatively little remark on the part of the examiners indicating affiliations between State and national institutions, while in only a few conspicuous instances do the institutions occupy the same rooms or buildings and confessedly operate in harmony.

REMEDY AT HAND.

The remedy which the Comptroller is applying is merely that of publicity That is to say, what he has done thus far is merely intended to bring to light the real state of facts existing in the banks. By so doing he will throw light on what is being done, and, at least in the case of the national banks, be able to assure himself that the reports he is getting are not vitiated through the associations with a State bank. Even this is hard to do in some cases, because of the entire absence of State banking departments, as is the case in a few States, (or else because of the refusal or unwillingness of State bank examiners to coöperate. There is, however, no doubt that the orders sent out will result in much greater coöperation than has been had heretofore. Then it will remain a question whether anything further can be done to correct unwise or unsatisfactory conditions that are shown to exist in the banks which are thus affiliated. At present it would seem that about the best results can be had through the development of uniform, or as nearly uniform as possible, rules and regulations governing the examination of State and national institutions.

MR. PARSLEY'S REBELLION.

A HUMOROUS TALE BY ALBERT E. BULL.

He had read all about it in a book, so he knew that it must work out all right. Then, again, he had talked it over with Thomas Whelk, and checked all the points seriatim, with the same result.

"You see, it's this way," he observed to Thomas, as he sat in that worthy's summer-house and smoked the pipe of peace with him. "I came upon the whole thing—a case just like mine, written up in a story, and a rare pretty story it was, too. What the man did in that case was just to wait till his missus went away for a few days, and then he pitched out all her falde-lals, and made the sitting-room just so's he could smoke in it—just the same as he did 'fore he married her."

"Ay, ay," replied Whelk. "And what then, James?"

"Oh, the missus comes back all a-nagging, as usual. Why wasn't he at the station to meet her? Why didn't he write while she was away? Did he call the brass plate clean? and all that, just as he expected."

"And what then, James?"

"Oh, he stood up, same as I'm going to do, and he says to her—just the same as I shall—'Madam,' says he, 'we've had about enough of this nonsense. I gave you your fling, and you took it. Now I'm going to have mine. In future, madam,' he says, 'there's going to be one head to this house, and that me!' What do you think of that?"

"Sounds all right," assented Thomas, nodding his head approvingly, and looking wisely into the bowl of his pipe. "What did the missus say to that—in this story-book?"

"Oh, she carried on a bit. But what was the use? He squatted down in his chair, and fixed her with his eye. 'Madam,' he says, speaking gruff, 'when you've finished your talkin', you get me my tea, 'cause I'm going down to the club.'"

"I s'pose she hadn't allowed him to go to the club?" suggested Whelk.

"That she hadn't," assented Parsley; "no more than my missus allows me to go to the institoot; but, anyhow, this man in the story, he simply glares at her when he says it, and puts his eye full on her. Ah, Thomas, it's the power of the eye that does it. Have you noticed my eye lately?"

"No. Which one?"

"Either one. It don't matter which," retorted Parsley a little pettishly. "Have you noticed my eye, I say?"

"Can't say that I have! What's the matter with it?"

"Nothing the matter—only I'm training."

"Training? What for?"

"Oh, nothing," replied James Parsley hastily. "If you haven't noticed it doesn't matter. Well, anyway, this here man in the story-book, he fixed his wife with his eye, and she suddenly stops her nagging.

"'It's no use, my lass,' he says, speaking kind but firm. 'It's no use. Your reign is over. I'm the new king.' And, to make a long story short, she felt the power of his eye, and she just crumbles up."

"Sounds all right," said Thomas Whelk. "Did he go to the club?"

"The story doesn't say."

"Now listen to me," James Parsley went on. "Things ain't all nuts and May over to my house, as you know."

Whelk shook his head solemnly.

"You ain't the man you was, James," he assented. "You'm never at the institute evenings, and if I calls over to see you I'm never asked in, while you hardly looks me up once a fortnight. When I met your missus the other day I almost tole her that my old garden seems scarcely wot it was, with you only dropping in once or twice a month."

"You didn't tell her that?" cried James in alarm.

"No; but I nearly did."

"But you mustn't. You see, she don't know."

"How do you mean, James?"

"I mean—why, I thought I told you. Well, it's like this. I'm not supposed to come here at all."

"Ho! Indeed! Not good enough for the likes of you?"

"Tain't that, Thomas. Jane Esther thinks you don't do me any good. Of course, I don't agree with her. That's partly why I'm planning my little surprise."

And then the guileless Thomas Whelk began to realize that James Parsley was right. Such tyranny, such ignorance, must be promptly made to recognize authority.

So the two hatched their plans. Jane Esther Parsley was going away for a week. It was agreed that her return would be a suitable time for the explosion of the mine.

Ten days later, James Parsley burst in upon the village philosopher like a motor-car with a leaking valve.

Thomas Whelk was gardening, and dropped his trowel.

"What's wrong, James?" he asked soothingly, as his visitor sank into a rustic seat.

But James Parsley only groaned.

"What's the matter?" inquired Whelk again. "You look harried and flustered. Tell me all about it. Didn't your little plan work?"

"Work! By gum! How I'm alive I don't know. You see, I learned up all the speech in the book, and trained up with my eye, same as I said I would. I couldn't alter the room much, so the parlor was much as usual when she came. And then she'd got her sister wtih her, who had come to spend a few days. You never met her sister, Mrs. Toler, did you?"

"I've heard you speak of her."

"Ah! but 'tisn't for me to say all I thinks about my wife's relations. Mrs. Toler's a widow woman, and—and—well, when I tell you I married Jane Esther to stop Mrs. Toler marrying me willy-nilly, you'll see what I thinks of her."

"So she was there, too?"

"Yes. But I'd made up my mind, so I fixed Jane Esther with my eye, like it said in the book; and I gave her the first speech. 'Madam,' I says, 'we've had enough of this nonsense. I gave you your fling, and you took it. Now I'm going to have mine. In future, madam, there's going to be one head to this house, and that's me.'"

"That sounds all right," said Whelk. "How did she take it?"

But Parsley buried his head in his hands.

"Didn't notice it at all," he groaned. "She and her sister kept up such a clatter of talk about the train being late, and there being 'no tea, of course,' that they didn't hear more than three words. Then, when I started again, Jane Esther gives me a whole armful of bonnets and cloaks, that almost buried me, and says, 'There, put them in the bedroom, and don't idle the time away. If you can't help, don't hinder.'"

"Ha!" said Whelk.

"So, of course, I had to wait till after tea," continued Parsley. "Once, while we were busy eating, I thought I'd try the power of the eye—you know, quell her by a look. I nearly did it, too, when Mrs. Toler broke in. 'There, sister Jane,' she says, 'I always did say that your James squints, the same as my first did.'"

"I suppose that spoilt the eye game," said Whelk, with a chuckle.

"For the time," replied Parsley. "But I was only waiting. I knew my chance would come sooner or later. After tea I went out in the hall and put on my hat and coat. My eye! you should have seen Jane Esther.

"'James,' she says, 'where are you going?'

"'Down to the institoot,' I says.

"'Eh? What?' says she.

"Then I saw my chance. I made that speech again. She listened that time, an' she looks at her sister. But I knew I mustn't lose time, so I rattles off the other one in the story.

"'It's no use, my lass; it's no use. Your reign is over. I'm the new king.'

"And what did she say?" asked Whelk.

"She hadn't time to say anything. Mrs. Toler put her oar in.

"'Is he often took like this?' she says.

"'Never knew such a thing 'appen before,' says Jane, all puzzled like.

"'Then,' says Mrs. Toler, 'you'd better put him off to bed at once and put a hot plaster on his chest. It strikes me it's the beginning of the end. My Edward was took that way just three weeks before he died. It's took 'im in the brain—it always goes for the weakest spot.'

"An' would you believe it?" continued Parsley. "Them two women forced me right into bed, and took turns all night dosing me with gruel. Oh, it's horrible."

"I s'pose they think you're better now," said Whelk, with a grin.

"Yes. But here's the strangest part of it. What do you think she says this morning?"

"I give it up."

"She says, 'It's the poor man's spirits that is all gone wrong, Jane Esther. You must brighten him. He mustn't be allowed to mope around the house and let 'is mind all get rusty. He must have company. You keeps him too close, and no wonder the poor fellow gets down. Sister Jane,' she goes on, 'he wants company, he does. Now, isn't there a nice, pleasant gentleman I've heard of, a retired newsagent, living here, what gardens and lives on his money, called Whelk or something?'"

"That's me," said Whelk proudly.

"'Oh, he's a very vulgar man,' says my missus. Mind, I'm only telling you what took place. Anyhow, they argues and argues, and at last they sends me off here to come and talk to you, 'cause Mrs. Toler thinks I want bright company."

"It's very kind of her," said Whelk, a little grimly, remembering Jane Esther's opinion.

But, on the whole, James Parsley found some good come of his rebellion. Mrs. Toler was firmly of the opinion that good company was the only thing that would keep his mind from absolute collapse.

So the old laws were relaxed. James Parsley, the invalid, could gossip all day, and openly, to Thomas Whelk, and spend his evenings if he wrapped up well, at "The institoot."

But Mrs. Toler regarded his case as serious. Her visit lengthened out into months; she would not leave sister Jane Esther alone with such a responsibility.

Sometimes she would accompany the invalid. Sometimes she would keep him in the house. On these occasions "bright company" was everything, and Mr. Whelk found himself in constant request, till at last the Parsleys' parlor was as much his center of interest as his own garden.

Then came the inevitable.

Mrs. Toler took a third.

She and Thomas Whelk were married with due solemnity, and "the invalid" henceforward was allowed to nurse himself.

"James," said Thomas Whelk three months after the wedding, "what did you do with that story-book you once told me about—you know, about the—"

"I knows," said James. "'Twasn't any good. I burnt it."

"Pity you did that," said Thomas Whelk reflectively. "I believe the idea was right, somehow. It must have been the way you done it that was wrong."

HEREABOUTS.

WHAT can be done by perseverance and energy is shown by J. George Leyner, president and general manager of the Leyner Engineering Works of Littlefield, a suburb of Denver, Colo., who is a guest at the Lankershim. A little more than seven years ago, according to Mr. Leyner, he started in the manufacture of mining machinery in a very small way. His business increased so rapidly that it was necessary to enlarge one plant and build another until at the present time 700 men are in his employ. "Mining machinery manufactured in the United States is better than that of any other country in the world," said he. "I made my way to Japan to close a contract with the Japanese government for machinery to be used in the mines of that country." Leyner is the inventor of a number of mining drills, hoists and other machinery used in getting the mineral from the interior to the surface.

Fred Salmon, one of the largest property holders in the U. S. Grant Hotel block in San Diego, has been spending a few days at the Angelus while in the city. San Diego will soon have one of the finest hotels on the Coast," said Mr. Salmon. "It is our intention to throw open the Grant before the Christmas season. The exact date has not been set, everything points to a successful opening early enough to meet the wishes of some of the winter tourists.

Pacific Coast milk, not the product that comes from the cow, but that is sold in cans, is the theme with V. H. Coffin, superintendent of Washington State Condensed Milk Company, who is now in town. "The sale of condensed milk is annually growing larger," said Mr. Coffin. "It is merely a matter of education of the public to the excellency of condensed milk to the fact that it is more sanitary, and at the same time retains all of the healthful properties of fresh milk. Further than that, it is as inexpensive as paying 6 and 8 cents a quart for fresh milk."

Baron H. de Vivier of New York, of the Paris Bureau of Paris are at the Nuys. They are manufacturers of sugar-beet machinery, and have come to Southern California to locate the different plants in this section and the methods used in reaching the best product. "There is considerable French machinery used in this state," said Mr. du Vivier. "On the other hand, there is much American machinery used in France. Our country is one in which beets were first grown in large quantities for the production of sugar. The systems in use have been copied in the numerous locations by beet-sugar refiners all over. The California plants have considered the best examples in the construction and we are here to look at the plant at Oxnard and later at Chino, to study the latest innovations.

"Help is cheap," declared J. R. Green, a capitalist of Chicago, who is at the Van Nuys. "We are in little difficulty in obtaining help for our western property, as well as for those for our clients. Most of the eastern investors are looking for investment. During the hard times of last year, the far western institutions showed as much stability as those of the Far East, and this has brought a safe feeling to those interested in real estate speculation in the West."

Dr. C. Hallows, a representative of the Toyo Kisen Mail Steamship Company, is on his way to Hankow, China, after a short visit here, last week with his family. He has been head of the transportation department for the Toyo Kisen Mail in the Orient for a number of years. Speaking of the recent resumption of business by ocean steamship companies, Dr. Hallows declared rather dubious. "In connection with the oriental lines of steamers, highly subsidized, is a practical impossibility. Until the people of this country wake up to the fact that the merchant marine must be built, in order to allow them to compete with the foreign vessels on the oceans, until that time, the ports on the Pacific Coast or elsewhere cannot assume proportions worth talking about."

Dr. C. Hayes, registering from Hongkong, has been an interesting guest at the Alexandria during the week. He has been very successful as an American merchant in Hongkong and speaks interestingly on the subject of business in China. "Hongkong is one of the most progressive cities in China," he said. "The present administration of the province of Kwangtung has provided several million dollars for the improvement of the streets, and foreign merchants are numerously represented, as are representatives of big American, English and French firms. The Chinese are entering upon a period of progress and an awakening similar to that which started in Japan about a decade ago. It will not take long for China to catch up to the present when they start."

One of ... reasons why the weather got ... was used to fly about in ... when it found her ... under her collar ... on her neck. "It ...

knew," she says, "that my neck was a nice warm place. I could tell that it was sleeping, because it would give a kind of jump when I roused it." Miss Marion's parents and sisters say that ever since she was a tiny child insects have had great fascination for her. She has always had a strong power over those that bite and sting.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

COL. RALPH W. HOYT of the Twenty-fifth United States Infantry has tendered his resignation as civil governor of Moro Province, and in his report he urges that the attention of the higher authorities be invited to the great difference in the conditions in Moro province as compared with the rest of the Philippine archipelago, and that Congress enact such laws as will affect a permanent separation of the southern islands, including Mindano, Sulu archipelago had Palawan, from the rest of the Philippine archipelago.

Lieut. Arthur H. Wilson, Sixth Cavalry, U.S.A., was in a hand-to-hand fight July 5 with the outlaw Jikiri, in the mountains 100 miles from Manila. As a result of the fight he carries the mark of a terrible slash he received. Beginning at his right cheek, just in front of his ear, the scar, an inch wide, reaches over his right shoulder and winds up over his left hip. Wilson went at once to the general hospital for observation and treatment. His wound was healed, but the muscles of his neck are in bad shape. Otherwise he is in fairly good condition.

Col. Henry O. S. Heistand, Adjutant-General of the Atlantic division and Department of the East since January, 1904, is packing up his things at Governor's Island, New York harbor, preparatory to removing to the Philippines, where he will be Adjutant-General, succeeding Col. Kerr.

Maj.-Gen. John F. Weston, Commander of the Department of California, is recovering from a serious illness of some months duration. As he reaches the retiring age on November 13, it is his wish that he may be well enough to resume his command and be on actual duty at the date of his retirement. The prospects are that his wish will be gratified.

Maj. William H. Allaire, Twenty-third Infantry, our military attaché at Vienna, together with the military attachés of other governments, was present this year at the grand maneuvers of the Austro-Hungarian army, which were held in Moravia from September 5 to 11. The attachés were guests of Emperor Francis Joseph on this occasion, and were presented to the German Emperor.

Brig.-Gen. Arthur Murray, chief of coast artillery, has submitted a plan for increase of the coast artillery corps, and it is expected that Secretary of War Dickinson will approve it, as the demand for additional men to man and care for the expensive armament of seacoast fortifications is fully appreciated. Gen. Murray proposes an increase of his corps by 370 officers and 7071 enlisted men, with ultimately another similar increase. His plan also contemplates the reorganization of the coast artillery for administrative purposes into territorial departments apart from those of the mobile troops of the military establishment, each department to have a coast artillery officer at its head, trained in the handling of troops of that arm, and having an adequate knowledge of its tactical and administrative needs.

Capt. Otto A. Nesmith, Signal Corps, has been placed on the retired list of the army on account of disability incurred in the line of duty. He is from California and began his military career during the Spanish War as captain in the Volunteer Signal Corps.

Gen. Winfield S. Edgerly, Commandant of the Mounted Service School at Fort Riley, Kan., has been given leave of absence to December 29, when he will go on the retired list for physical disability.

The retirement from active service of First Lieutenant James S. Bradshaw, Fifth Field Artillery, has been announced. He was found incapacitated, because of disability incident to service. Lieut. Bradshaw was appointed to the United States Military Academy, at West Point, from Wisconsin, in 1903. He is also a graduate of the Mounted Service School, at Fort Leavenworth. He is 25 years old.

OVER THE SEA.

MARCEL PREVOST, the new French academician, has recently been christened the "dressmaker novelist." He has a most exceptional weakness for describing dress. As a result of his recent descriptions of chic male and female attire, the novelist has had offers from both Ducet and Paquin. They offer to engage him for designing hats and costumes.

The Duke of Bucceleuch, who has an annual revenue of nearly $500,000, and is known to own art treasures worth $1,500,000, and who maintains a great London house and at least six country homes in Scotland and England, has announced to the Sanquhar Football Club that he cannot make his usual contribution to it, because of the awful budget's threatening reduction of his working capital.

Maurice Hewlett, the most fanciful of the romanticists, comes oddly enough from a family of lawyers. He has himself studied law and he was called to the bar several years ago. Like his father before him, he served for some time as Keeper of the Crown Lands in England. It was on account of his health that he gave up his law practice and following a trip to Italy he began doing literary work.

Dr. D'Arcy Power, a noted surgeon in London, says that cultivated women are the ones that are wanted as nurses. A man convalescing wants a woman who can discuss the topics of the day with him. Nurses should go to the theaters, visit the picture galleries and study good literature, he insists, if they would be good nurses.

Lord Hindlip, head of the great brewing concern of Allsopp at Burton-on-Trent, though barely 30, has already achieved considerable note as an Asiatic and African hunter and explorer. Much of what we know of the Somali regions of the Dark Continent, of the remote portions of Abyssinia and of the White Nile country is due to Lord Hindlip and to his American companion in most of these expeditions the son of William Pitt-hugh Whitehouse, of Newport and New York.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

J. A. CAHILL, who has made a name for himself as illustrator of McClure's and Harper's magazines, has decided to locate permanently on the Pacific Coast. Of late he has been making a study of western scenes.

Robert S. Webb, an expert who has devoted a lifetime to the study of the trees adapted for tropical countries, has sailed for Australia, where he will gather eucalyptus seed for use in Southern California. Webb is a native of Australia and was for many years in the government service there in the botanical department.

Dr. James A. Post, for twenty-four years secretary of the Detroit Associated Charities, has retired and intends taking a long rest. He will take a trip to California.

A few days ago Gen. Leonard Wood ran over a man in his big motor car in New York. He at once leaped out and ran to the side of the injured man. "Where's the nearest hospital?" he asked of Mounted Policeman Beck. As the policeman met the general's eye, he came to a salute. "The French Hospital, general," he said. Without another word they lifted the almost unconscious shoemaker into the motor car and smashed the speed law to the hospital. "Where have I seen you before?" asked the general, eyeing Beck curiously.

"I served under you for three years in Mindanao," said the policeman.

"I wish we were both back there now," replied the general.

Charles C. Olsen of St. Paul, is the needlework champion at the Minnesota State Fair this year, having been awarded first honors for a framed embroidery picture, an eagle perched on two American flags, exquisitely done even to the heavy padding of cotton under the bird, which gives it lifelike contour.

Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, has succeeded in abolishing the use of rats and puffs and all forms of artificial hair by all the twenty-three female members of the choir of his church.

Former Judge Henry P. Dewey, who has announced himself as the "theocratic" candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, talked for twelve hours on the "Established Religion of the State" on Boston common, one day recently. He took only one intermission, resting twenty-five minutes for lunch. Dewey recently sued the Good Government Association for $76,000,000 for alleged slander, but lost the suit.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

MARION DEXTER LEARNED, professor of German in the University of Pennsylvania, went to Germany in February for the Carnegie Institution at Washington, to calendar sources of American history from German archives. He reports that he has copied many interesting documents that would shed light on our history and relating to Americus Vespucius's discoveries, the earliest dating from 1505. From 1709 he found a flood of material bearing on immigration from Germany and the attitude of the various rulers toward the American colonies and the American Revolution. There was a strong feeling in colonial times against the emigration of people to America from the Rhine countries and edicts were published prohibiting it. One decree forbade any agent seeking to promote emigration coming into the country under penalty of death by hanging. It was feared by the authorities that the Rhine countries would be depopulated by the efflux of the best peasant blood to America. By order of the Emperor William, to whom Prof. Learned was introduced, he was permitted to copy letters of Frederick the Great to English officials on the subject of the American Revolution. In one letter to his Minister in England, Frederick told the Minister to greet the American representative "with a handshake and a smile," but not to talk politics. Prof. Learned has twenty books of notes.

Dr. W. R. Vance, dean of George Washington University Law School, has accepted a professorship at Yale University, to which he has been elected. He has been with Washington University for six years.

Rev. Dr. Charles C. Creegan of Brooklyn, N. Y., has accepted election as president of Fargo College, South Dakota. For many years he has been the efficient district secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missions of the Congregational church, and only recently returned from a trip around the world, visiting the mission stations. He is well known in every part of this country.

Prof. Paul Lasarus of the University of Berlin, has arrived in New York, and will spend a period in the United States for rest and recreation. He is the great German authority on nervous diseases and is the associate of Prof. Von Leyden, physician to the Emperor.

R. B. Marshall, chief geographer of the bureau of the geological survey has sailed for the Hawaiian Islands to prepare maps of the islands for administrative purposes and to bring the old ones up to date. He will also seek out favorable sites for reservoirs. It is said that the planters have gone as far as they can in the development of the islands, and that the problem that now confronts the government is how to provide water during the dry seasons.

PERPETUAL MOTION AGAIN.

A Connecticut Inventor Claims to Have the Real Thing in a Double-Ended Engine.

"Has he discovered the secret of perpetual motion?" asked the perplexed persons who see the "dry power" engine invented by Joseph Sutkaitis, of Naugatuck, which he asserts will revolutionize the present methods of supplying power for the running of machinery. No fuel, the inventor says, is used to keep the driving rods in motion, nor has it any gas or electrical connection. The wheels turn and the driving rods perform their work with little noise, and the building is not jarred in the slightest degree by the action of the machinery.

Every one who has inspected the machine has concurred in the opinion that whether the perpetual motion problem has or has not been solved, the engine is certainly a remarkable invention. Sutkaitis has been at work on it for five years. He has applied for a patent and has had the machine inspected by patent attorneys. He refuses to say what runs the engine, nor will he explain the interior parts, for therein lies the secret, and he is guarding it carefully until the patent shall be granted. All he will say is that the engine runs without fuel of any kind and without water power or electricity, and that it will run on and on until the machinery wears out. In a test recently the engine ran steadily for seven days. He says it is simply a dry power engine and that the power will never give out.

The engine on a larger scale, he adds, will run any manufacturing establishment. It must remain stationary, however, and cannot be used in locomotives, steamboats or anything movable.

The model is 7 feet long and 3 feet high, and here are two seperate engines, one at each end, with the driving wheel between tin boxes, in which the engines are inclosed. To start the engine the inventor does something to one of the little gears and immediately the wheels begin to turn. He goes through the same operation at the other side of the machine, and the engine is running smoothly and continues to revolve until the inventor stops it by touching the same gears.

Birds' Toes Automatic.

And let us note that the art of standing began with birds. Frogs sit, and as far as I know every reptile, be it lizard, crocodile, alligator or tortoise, lays its body on the ground when not actually carrying it. And these have each four fat legs. Contrast the flamingo, which, having only two, and those like willow wands, tucks up one of them and sleeps poised high on the other, like a tulip on its stem. Note also that one toe has been altogether discarded by birds as superfluous. The germ, or bud, must be there, for the Dorking fowl has produced a fifth toe under some influence of the poultry yard, but no natural bird has more than four. Except in swifts, which never perch, but cling to rocks and walls, one is turned backward, and by a cunning contrivance the act of bending the leg draws them all automatically together. So a hen closes its toes at every step it takes, as if it grasped something, and, of course, when it settles down on its roost they grasp that tight and hold fast till morning. But to birds that do not perch this mechanism is only an incumbrance, so many of them, like the plovers, abolish the hind toe entirely, and the prince of all two-legged runners, the ostrich, has got rid of one of the front toes also, retaining only two.—[Baltimore Star.

Letters Registered by Machine.

A machine for registering letters has been submitted to the French Academy of Sciences. The stamped letter is thrown into a special box and a nickel 25-cent piece is inserted in a slot in the box. At the turn of a little handle a receipt comes up. A magnet in the machine will draw aside any coin not genuine nickel. When all works properly the nickel coin gets to the bottom of its compartment, while the letter, stamped with an "R," remains in the box all ready to be forwarded.—[Omaha Bee.

A SUNDAY SERIAL OF UNBROKEN INTEREST.

By J. B. Harris-Burland.

[Copyright, 1908, by J. B. Harris-Burland.]

Local tradition stated that the place had once been used as a bathing pool, and that a century ago the water was clear as crystal. But, if there was any truth in the legend, some ancient system of purifying the water must have been lost, for no self-respecting person could possibly have bathed in the brown, slimy liquid which surged up through the culvert twice in every twenty-four hours. John Shil one day took a long pole and thrust it into the mud which lay at the bottom. Leaning over the edge of the wall, he buried the bamboo six feet in the slime and even then he did not reach the hard ground beneath.

It was here, by the side of this tidal pool, that John Shil, after five weeks' residence at Black Hall, spent an afternoon which was destined to leave its mark forever in the story of his life.

A flight of broken steps ran down from the wall to the pool, and he was sitting on the last step but two, with his feet almost on the edge of the water. The tide was still flowing, and the surface of the pool was stirred with little currents and eddies as the sea forced its way through the culvert.

The tide, regular and resistless as the advance of time, had always had a strange fascination for the young man. The ebb and flow of it seemed to pulse like a human life—birth and death, ebb and flow, for all eternity. And here, in the silence of the cloistered trees and the sunlit lawns, it had a new and mysterious charm. There was no roar of the waves, no thunder of breakers on the shore, no swirl of the waters past pier-head or groin. Yet the force was still there. Silent and irresistible, it had crept up from the great sea itself, over miles of sand bank, past great spaces of lonely marsh land, moving on and on through narrowing channels till it had reached this spot. And here it ceased, in a tiny eddy of muddy waters—one of the last quivering nerves in a throbbing system that covers the oceans of the world.

This link with the great sea of tall ships and distant climes had a peculiar charm for John Shil in his loneliness, and his thoughts strayed to the things outside his park, and the great scheme of life from which he had withdrawn himself—like a man overpowered in battle.

And as he thought of the things that had been and of all that he had lost, his heart cried out in rebellion against the decrees of fate.

"What have I done?" he said to himself. "Why has God broken me like a worthless jar? And what has she done, my beloved; what crime has she committed that she should be tied for life to a man she loathes?"

And then, to the music of the gurgling waters, the answer came back to him:

"You have sinned; though it was for but half a minute, you have sinned. You let a man die, and this is your punishment. You must suffer, and she must suffer, too."

And again his soul cried out to God.

"It was for such a little while. I mastered the evil thought. I would have saved him. Is there no return to Paradise?"

And again the reply came back, "Too late! Too late! The doors are closed. You cannot enter now."

John Shil rose to his feet with clenched hands and the light of rebellion in his eyes.

"I am the master of my own fate," he cried to himself. "Honor! Morality! Providence! Submission! What are all these to me? These are words for the weak and the feeble. They are not words for a man who can fight. I will return to her. I will take her from him. And the child?" His train of thought came to a standstill, and then the voice of the devil whispered in his ear:

"Perhaps the child may die."

The evil thought defined itself and almost became a prayer. But before he had defiled his soul with the wish for the death of an innocent child, the truth and horror of the thought broke on him like a blast of lightning. He cowered back against the steps, and held up his hand to his head as though to shield off a blow.

"No, no," he cried to himself, "that is not the path to happiness. I have sinned. I must redeem the past. I must do the right thing. I must bow my head. I must make amends. I must act like a man of honor. Then perhaps God in His mercy will give me peace."

Like a man of honor! The thought recalled Leonore, and he could not shut out her face from his eyes. He saw her reproachful look, and heard the piteous tones of her voice. A man of honor would make amends. Perhaps after all this was the thing God willed him to do, this was the sacrifice that he was called upon to make.

And yet, after all, was it such a great sacrifice? She was a good and talented woman, a wife of whom any man might be proud. Laura was lost to him so long as her child and her husband lived, and Tankerlane might easily live for fifty years. She could never be his wife. There was only one course for a wise man to take. He must forget, or, if he could not forget, he must silence the voice of memory with the clamor of another life. This loneliness was hell to him. He would be happier with a woman who loved him well. She would be a comrade. She would not expect too much. She would be the mother of his children, and a fresh life would open out for him—a quiet domestic life, unruffled by passion, but full of peace and gentle happiness. He had a strong regard for Leonore. He admired her intellect, and though her bitter words had stung him to the quick, he knew that they had only been the cry of a wounded heart.

His meditations were interrupted by the faint sound of footsteps on the gravel, and looking round, he saw Leonore herself walking slowly towards him. Somehow he was not surprised to see her. It seemed quite natural that she should be there.

He rose to his feet and advanced to meet her. As she drew near to him, he noticed that her face was pale and careworn, and that there were dark rings under her eyes. But she smiled as she held out her hand, and he took it in his own.

"I have been expecting you," he said, for all the world as if she were a next-door neighbor who had dropped in to tea. "Come and sit down by the pool. I am very fond of this pool."

She came to the edge without a word and looked at the yellow water eddying against the wall. Then she shuddered.

"I don't like it," she said. "Is it deep? What is it here for,"

"An old bathing place, I believe," he answered. "That water is salt, and comes all the way from the sea. When I look at it I can fancy I am in touch with all the oceans of the world."

"I don't like it," she said quickly, and she seated herself on the wall with her back to the pool. John Shil sat down beside her and for a few moments both of them were silent. The sun had gone down behind the tall fringe of trees, and the smooth green lawns were in shadow.

"You will wonder why I have come here," said Leonore abruptly. "But I have something of importance to tell you, something that I could not write. I cannot stay long, for I must return to town by the last train. Your servants told me you were home, and I took the liberty of coming straight to the place where they said I should find you." She paused, and, clasping her hands, looked on the ground, as though uncertain how to proceed.

"You did right," he replied gently. "I am glad to see you, Leonore."

There was again a pause, and then the woman, realizing that the precious moments were being wasted, leaned towards him, so that her lips were close to his ear.

"You are in danger," she whispered. "Two men saw all that happened in that wood by Laverstone. I myself know the whole story."

John Shil did not answer, and his face might have been carved out of a piece of granite for all the emotion it displayed. He looked at a flower bed as though the coloring fascinated him.

Then he turned sharply and gripped Leonore by the wrist.

"What do you mean?" he asked in a low voice. "What do you know of Laverstone? Who has told you?"

"Please leave go of my wrist," she said quietly. "You are hurting me. I know all that is to tell, but the secret is safe in my hands. In fact, I am paying one of the men to keep his mouth shut."

"What man?" he asked fiercely. "What do you mean? There was no one there; if there had been, he would have spoken, he——" Then the man paused, cursing his own stupidity. He had betrayed himself.

"The man's name is Henry Blurton," she continued. "Do you remember the little drunken cad who recognized you in Widley street? He saw everything. He has told me all he saw. I have paid him to keep his mouth shut. But the story, told from his standpoint, is incomplete. I am your friend, and I want you to tell me exactly what happened. I want to think well of you. I know that the story of an eye-witness must convey a wrong impression. He knew nothing of what was in your mind, or what passed between you and the other man. I want to know the truth. Please tell me the truth. I am your friend."

John Shil, staggered for the moment by the storm that had suddenly risen up from the past and swept over his head, could make no reply to this appeal. He could not collect and arrange his thoughts. He did not know whether to tell the truth or to keep silence.

"Please tell me," Leonore murmured softly, as she laid her hand on his arm and looked up into his face. "You know that I am your friend."

Her voice and the implied caress in her touch turned the scale. He knew that this woman loved him, and that she would not do anything to wreck his life. But he was cautious for all that.

"Tell me exactly what you have heard," he said, "and I will then give you the true version of the affair."

She told him the story that she had purchased from Henry Blurton, and when she had finished, John Shil knew well enough that Blurton had been an actual witness of the event. He decided to make a clean breast of the whole affair.

She listened to him in silence, and watched his face as he told the story. When he had finished, she clasped her hands and looked at the trees, with the light of a great joy in her eyes.

"I knew it," she murmured; "I was sure that you had played the man. I am so glad that you have told me the truth—so very glad!"

He looked at her sharply, and was silent. He wished to ask an offensive question without giving offense. For a few moments he had not the courage to speak. Then he realized that he must ask it, if matters were to be cleared up between them.

"Leonore," he said firmly, "will you tell me why you paid Henry Blurton to be silent, and also why you have come here today to tell me you did so?"

"I will tell you," she replied humbly, "though in telling you I have to make a confession of my own weakness, of my own evil thoughts. I paid Blurton to be silent, not because I wished to save you from him, but because I wished to possess your secret, because I wanted to have you in my power."

"I understand," he said simply. "At least I think I understand."

"Do you understand what it costs me to tell you this?" she continued. "What a confession it is of impotence, and evil purpose, and shame?"

"There is no shame in confession," he replied. "But will you tell me why you have come here to confess? I am no longer in your power. You have told me the man's name, and I know his address. I can buy his silence, and pay him more than you could ever afford to pay him."

"Again I will tell you the truth," said Leonore, "and this time you must not disbelieve me, merely because the truth is to my credit. I have come here because I do not want to have you in my power, because I am afraid of myself, of what I may do, of what I may say. I have come here because——" She stared at him for a moment with piteous eyes and parted lips. Then she buried her burning face in her hands, and sobbed as though her break would break.

"Leonore," said the man gently, "before you came, I was thinking of you, thinking of myself, of my future life, and how I can use it to the best advantage. I have sinned, and I wish to make amends. Leonore, will you be my wife?"

"Your wife?" she said slowly, as though she could not understand his words. Then she raised her tear-stained cheeks from her hands, and looked at him with frightened eyes. The hour for which she had schemed had come, and yet there was no triumph in her face.

"Yes, Leonore," he said gently, "if you will marry me, it will bring happiness into my life."

"No, no!" she cried fiercely, rising to her feet. "You do not ask me because you desire me for a wife. It is because I have shown you what is in my heart, because you pity me. That is why you ask me to be your wife."

He also rose to his feet, and took one of her hands in his.

"You are mistaken, Leonore," he replied. "It is for my own happiness that I ask this. You know what little love I have to give, but I will give you all that a man can offer to a woman he respects and admires——"

"Respect and admiration?" she queried passionately.

"Yes," he answered; "all that a good husband gives to his wife after the first hot blaze of love. I am a lonely man, and your love will mean much to me. Together we will do good in the world, and I will atone for the past, if God will let me make such atonement. It is for selfish reasons that I wish to marry you."

"Selfish?" she cried, joyfully. "Ah, that is what I want. That is all I ask. I want to know that you have real need of me, and that you are not trying to force your pity on me."

"I have real need of you," he replied. "You may save me from a great sin, for I cannot live this life alone."

"I will marry you," she said tenderly. "I will take what love you can give me. I am content."

He moved closer to her side, and took her in his arms. He could do no less. Her white face looked up to his, and her eyes glowed with passion. Then he bent his head and kissed her on the lips. He had intended that kiss to be a mere formality, a seal of the compact made between them. But Leonore endowed it with the strength of her passionate love, and clung to him with the frenzy of a woman who has gained the desire of her heart.

Then at last her arms relaxed their hold on his neck and she sank back on to the low stone wall and buried her face in her hands. The man watched her with fear in his eyes. What had he to offer in return for this? Yet he knew that he must play his part.

"Leonore," he said, with an effort at calmness, "when will you marry me?" He did not know that she was still a married woman, and was not free to marry at all.

"In two months' time," she murmured, faintly.

"Two months from today?" he queried.

"Yes, two months from today. I am going to America next week, and shall be away for a month. I will marry you two months from today."

She did not look at him as she answered his question. Her head was turned towards the pool, and she watched the yellow water slowly circling past the walls. He came forward and seated himself by her side.

"Leonore," he said, after a pause, "I ought only to be thinking of you, but there is much else in my mind just now. A little while ago you said that two men saw all that had happened in the wood by Laverstone. We have Henry Blurton safe enough so long as we can buy his silence. But who was the other man?"

"He will also be silent," she replied. "He has sworn an oath to me, and he will keep it."

"What was his name?" persisted John Shil.

"I cannot tell you now," she replied, without taking her eyes from the pool. "One of the conditions he made was that you should never know his name."

The lie came smoothly and readily from her lips. It had to be uttered, for John Shil must never know that Tankerlane had witnessed that scene in the woods. If he once knew the truth, he would realize why Laura had refused to marry him, and his love for the woman who had made this sacrifice would blaze out afresh with still fiercer flames. He might even seek out Sir William Tankerlane, and demand a reckoning.

"No," she said to herself, "for his own sake, he must never learn the truth."

John Shil looked at her averted face with hard, questioning eyes. It was not the look of a lover, nor even of a friend, but his own safety was then uppermost in his mind.

"There should be no secret between use," he said sternly. "Still, if it was a condition——"

She turned slowly and looked at him with the light of love in her eyes.

"Perhaps I may tell you," she whispered, "when we are married. It will be no breach of faith, for we shall then be one."

Then she rose to her feet, and looked at the darkening sky.

"I must go," she said softly. "I will write to you when I come back from America, and today two months, that is settled."

She came close to him, and, clinging to his arm, turned her face up to his. Once more he bent his head and kissed her on the lips.

"Good-by," she said, "my dearest." Then she laughed and looked at the pool. "Even this dismal place seems beautiful," she continued—"beautiful for me. But it has changed. The walls seem higher. There is less water."

John Shil looked at the pool and smiled.

"Yes," he replied; "the tide is ebbing fast. In two hours' time this water will have reached the sea. Good-by, Leonore, till—but I will walk with you to the house."

They disappeared arm in arm through the trees. An the tide still ebbed out to the sea.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE SCOURGE OF GOD.

Late in the autumn, when the leaves had nearly all fallen from the trees, Laura Vane was married to Sir William Tankerlane. The marriage took place in a registry office, and was carried out with all the secrecy which the law allows to such ceremonies. It was a mere formality, to be forgotten and thrust aside, until some too zealous historian should dig it out of the records of the past. They had both agreed that, as far as the world was concerned, the first marriage was to stand, and the boy was to be proclaimed as their lawful son and heir.

The death of Sir Robert Tankerlane had smoothed down one of the chief difficulties that might have stood in their path. It was easy now for Sir William to say that his father had objected to the match, and that he had kept it a secret for fear of his father's anger. The fact that the Tankerlane estates, unlike most great properties, were not entailed on the heir male, lent additional color to this falsehood. The fear of disinheritance would seem a strong enough reason for concealing the marriage.

But there was no longer to be any concealment, and even before the two were legally joined together, the romantic story of Sir William Tankerlane's alliance to the daughter of one of his tenants had reached Laverstone. Laura had written at last to her father, and had asked his forgiveness, and had told him most of the truth. Only the one central lie of all remained, and that would have to remain forever.

Old Sam Vane received the news with sturdy equanimity. He thought less of the splendor of his daughter's marriage than of the small postscript which said that she was well and happy. And, above all, he rejoiced in the certainty of her return to Laverstone.

"I'm not saying as I ain't proud of the lass," he said, when old Mr. Wingate, the rector, expiated on the glories of the position to which Laura had attained. "I ain't saying that, sir, though I'm thankful I've had her turned out like a lady as'll grace any gentleman's home. But it's not that I'm thinking of. It's the coming back, and I thank God for it."

Then the news came to Laverstone that Sir William would like a reception on his return to Tankerlane Court. The request came from the mouth of the agent, and was at once interpreted as a command. The tenants on the estate knew but little of their lord and master, and that little was not all to his credit. But most of them had a sincere regard for the daughter of old Sam Vane, and they resolved to give her what they called "a bang-up homecomin'." It is even possible that a little worldly wisdom entered into the kindliness of their thoughts. Even in this enlightened age they were all the subjects of their over-lord, bound to him body and soul.

The arrangements were placed in the hands of a committee, which included four clergymen, seven farmers, and the agent of the Tankerlane estates. As might be imagined, much time was pleasantly wasted in slow speech and controversy, and nothing would ever have been settled if it had not been for the firm but polite insistence of the agent. This worthy young gentleman, who was instructed to provide the funds for everything, was naturally listened to with respect, and when a deadlock ensued, he put in his word with the skill of a trained diplomat, and every one agreed with him.

There was to be a fete, of course, with unlimited food and beer. There was to be a cricket match, and sports with prizes worth the winning. There were to be swings, and all the fascinations of a fair, which was to be imported wholesale for the occasion. There were to be fireworks—large expensive fireworks. And then, of course, there were to be banners, triumphal arches, a reception at the railway station, the presentation of a wedding present, and all the outward show of homage and loyalty that is offered to a local sovereign.

For three weeks the vast tract of country covered by the Tankerlane property talked of nothing else. And then at last the day came, and for miles round the inhabitants streamed to the railway station to do honor to their new master. The gentry came in their carriages, the farmers on horseback, or in their gigs, the poorer folk on foot; and there were many on bicycles, from the well-to-do doctor on a machine that glittered with plating and enamel, to the laborer on his rusty piece of scrap iron, that recalled the earliest days of cycling.

Sir William Tankerlane had graciously consented to arrive at the earliest hour possible, so that the people should have a long day in which to enjoy themselves, and the train was expected at 11:33 in the morning.

"This be a proud day for 'ee, Sam Vane," said a farmer, reining in his horse by the side of the old man's trap. "A mortal proud day it must be, for sartin."

"I'm glad to see the lass back," Sam Vane replied with a smile, "and as for pride—well, she be a lass to be proud of, Mr. Redholt. What be the time by your watch; I'm thinkin' mine's stopped, or else it's goin' mortal slow this mornin'."

Mr. Redholt laughed.

"You're over-impatient Sam," he replied, looking at his own watch. "It ain't only half-past eleven."

"She should be signaled," growled Mr. Vane, "but it ain't to be expected as trains'll allus come up to the mark."

But five minutes passed, then ten, then a quarter of an hour, and still the train was not signaled. The crowd began to show signs of impatience. The gentry hummed and hawed, and disparaged the directors of the company, in which many of them held stock. The rougher element indulged in horseplay to while away the time.

"She'm late," said the station master in answer to all inquiries.

But a few minutes later he emerged from the booking office with a white face, and hurried to the side of Sir William Tankerlane's agent.

"There has been an accident to the train," he whispered; "four carriages smashed to bits. Shall I let the people know, or wait for further news?"

But the whisper, soft as it had been, had reached the ears of a bystander, and almost before the agent could make reply the news had spread through the waiting crowd.

Men looked at each other in horror, and women chattered and clung to each other as though some danger threatened them. On all sides rose the one question, put in various forms, and asked in various tones:

"Sir William and his lady—are they safe?"

But there were some among the crowd who had friends and relations of their own in the train, and they gave no thought to Sir William or Lady Tankerlane. They besieged the station master with questions, and he, poor, patient man, half distracted by the turmoil, lost his head, and gave them answers that drew down wrath upon his head.

The attitude of the crowd became sullen and even hostile. Some of them cursed the directors of the line, and were of opinion that some one should be punished for all this.

"It's a fine day," growled one old man, "and liker June than Oct'ber. It'd ha' been a grand day for a fete, if them railway folk hadn't bin and spiled it."

And he voiced the sentiments of the lower classes, dull workers that had looked forward to a little merriment in their dreary lives, and thought nothing of the horrors that lay across the railway line thirty miles away from them.

"If he'm killed," asked another, "who'd rightly come into the property?"

"The child, of course," replied another, "he'd be a chanc'ry, he would, and we'd have a soul to look after us, till he was come to manhood."

"But belike the child's killed, too."

"Then a cousin's have the lot, some feller as don't know a blade of grass from a blackberry—a clerk, mebbe."

But all further speculation as to the destination of the Tankerlane estates was brought to an end by the agent, who came on to the steps of the station with a genial look on his face, and waved a telegram above his head.

"I have good news for you," he cried out, as he faced the crowd. "Sir William and Lady Tankerlane are much shaken but unhurt. They cannot get here today, as Lady Tankerlane cannot undertake the journey. They both, however, send you their best wishes for a happy day. The fete will take place as originally arranged."

A loud cheer broke from the crowd, and it began to disperse. After all, the presence of their lord and master was not indispensable to their happiness. His absence would, on the contrary, remove some of the stiff formality of the proceedings. The beer would flow well enough without him, and the fireworks would blaze and bang right merrily.

But when the agent turned away from the crowd, the smile died from his face. And there were tears in the eyes of the station master, who stood behind him.

"She's a brick," said the agent gruffly, "a regular brick. Go and fetch Sam Vane, will you?"

And when the old farmer came, the agent drew him aside and told him the truth.

"Your daughter is all right," he said gently, "and Sir William has escaped with a few bruises. But the child is dead. I had special instructions to withhold this last piece of news, Lady Tankerlane wishes the people to enjoy themselves. They will be down here the day after tomorrow, and the funeral will take place here."

And all day long the people shouted and ran races, and drank and ate as much as they could hold, and all day long the banners floated in the breeze and the band played popular music with cheerful inaccuracy.

But thirty miles away Laura Tankerlane leaned over the dead body of her little child, and cried out to God to restore the life that He had given and taken away. And so bitter was her sorrow that she did not even remember how she had sacrificed herself for the sake of this little child, and how all her sacrifice had been in vain.

The Cheapest Steak.

A skirt steak is not exactly a piece de resistance, or a flirtatious piece, as some thoughtless sillies may think, but is quite another piece, the cheapest piece of a steer. It is a piece of the diaphragm, or midriff, between lungs and bowels, and makes good steak, stew or sausage, having the great advantage of being absolutely fresh, being too cheap to be kept in storage.—[Indianapolis News.

Continuing the journey on the following morning over roads winding through virgin forests of pine and redwood, ever ascending until across the highest point of the journey is reached at Quail Flats, where a pause is made that the feast of nature spread before him may be appreciated by the traveler. From this point of vantage, elevation 7000 feet, distant peaks covered with the eternal snows are plainly visible while range after range of pine-clad mountains seem to stretch away to infinity, an impression strengthened by the moaning of the wind in the trees and dying away in the distance. Upon turning from this inspiring picture, the journey is resumed, this time down the opposite side of the range into the valley in which is located the new logging camp of Hume, the mountain headquarters of the Hume-Bennett Lumber Company. As the stage follows the winding road into the valley occasional glimpses may be had of the construction work going on, of logging roads being pushed into the gulches and around more distant spurs, of actual logging operations—the falling of trees, sawing into logs, engines skidding these logs to the landing, donkey engines loading them onto cars at the temporary to their trip to the mill, and scores of other sights incidental to actual logging operations, but novel and interesting to the amateur. However, these are all forgotten as the stage rounds the last turn of the journey's trip and a scene of great beauty and picturesque presents itself to the weary traveler. Stretched before him is a picture which once seen will never be forgotten. In the midst of the Acadian scene of "forests primeval," with the trees extending to its very edge, a body of water, smooth as polished steel, Hume Lake, and unobtrusive clustering pines that fringe its shores, the camp proper, a mountain village cut off from the outside world, whose sole reason for existence and activity is—lumber.

Set apart away from the outside world the members of this mountain village lead happy and contented lives, possessing many advantages and suffering but few inconveniences. Of pure air an inexhaustible supply, to the ice-cold mountain water, whose health-quenching properties cannot be surpassed, in the summer all the products of the San Joaquin are available to escape its torrid heat, while in winter all the sports and "socialdes" of the city are to be enjoyed. At the company headquarters, situated just above the mill, are grouped the office, general store, hotel, hospital and school house, and under the trees are the cabins of the men while the families of the department heads are housed in substantially built cottages, overlooking the water and a prettier view could not be imagined, as miles of forest stretch away in all directions, with a most effective background for the woodland and lake.

However, this body of water was created at great expense simply for the purpose of making an Eden in the wilderness. That it is present is purely incidental. It's creation was one of necessity and its purpose entirely commercial. Realizing the necessity of having a large body of water for flume purposes, the company has erected a modern concrete dam and the mountain streams have gradually accumulated the present body of water which is utilized for the double purpose of flume supply and to float the logs from the logging terminal of the railway to the

PRODUCT OF MILL SHIPPED OUT THROUGH A SIXTY-MILE-LONG FLUME.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

TO THOSE who annually hearken to the instincts of the "Call of the Wild" and his them away to the haunts of oak and pine, of mountain quail and soft-eyed deer, in early spring when nature is just awakening from her slumbers, at high noon of summer when our common mother has donned her brightest colors, or in the autumn when falling leaves and general activity among the denizens of the forest apprises him who will heed their language, that a change is at hand, heralding in unmistakable terms the approach of the monarch of winter—the mountain city of Hume with its beckoning hand.

Leaving the heat of the valley behind, the first day's stage ride out of Three Rivers, Cow, in Tulare county, brings the traveler into the beautiful Eshom valley, where spreading oak and luxuriant gardens dot the fertile meadlands in the wilds, and to the child of the tourist lends a new and enjoyed phrase "back to the land." Continuing the journey on the following morning over the still virgin forests of pine and cedar, ever ascending until at the eighth point of the journey, at a height of Quail Flats, where it is said that the feast of nature first bursts him may be appreciated by the traveler. From this point of vantage, elevation 7000 feet, a forest path covered with the eternal snows is plainly visible while the range after range of pine-clad mountains seem to stretch away to infinity, that is augmented strengthened by the sighing of the wind in the trees and the roar of a stream in the distance.

Leaving this inspiring picture, the journey is resumed, this time down the opposite side of the range into the valley in which is located the new logging camp of Hume, the mountain terminus of the Hume-Bennett Lumber Company. As the stage follows the winding road into the valley many picturesque glimpses may be had of the logging work going on, of logging trains being pushed into the gulches for more distant spurs, of actual logging operations—the falling of trees, cutting into logs, engines hauling these logs to the landing, and cranes loading them onto cars preparatory to their trip to the mill. These and other sights incidental to lumber logging operations, but novel and interesting to the amateur. However, these are all forgotten as the traveler rounds the last turn of the road on the trip and a scene of great grandeur and beauty presents itself to his enraptured view. Stretched before him like a picture which once seen will never be forgotten in the midst of the dense ocean of forests primeval, with the trees extending to its very edge, a body of water, smooth as a mirror, Hume Lake, and unbroken by towering pines that fringe its shores, is the camp proper, a mountain clearing cut off from the outside world for the reason for existence by lumber.

Far away from the outside world the members of this mountain camp lead happy and contented lives, enjoying many advantages and suffering but few inconveniences. Water is an abundance, of an inexhaustible supply, to wit, mountain water, whose purifying properties cannot be surpassed. In the summer all the products of the soil, of orchard, etc., are available in torrid heat, while in winter months and "sociables" of the kind to be enjoyed. At the commissaries, situated just above the mill, are grouped the office, general store, hotel, hospital and school house, spreading in all directions from these, while the trees are the cabins in which the families of the heads are housed in neatly built cottages, overlooking the lake and a prettier view could not be inclined, as miles of forest are in sight in all directions, forming an effective background for the lake.

The source of this body of water was at first a great expense simply for the purpose of making an Eden for the lumbermen. That it is practically accidental. It's creation was a necessity and its purpose is commercial. Realizing the necessity of having a large body of water for flume purposes, the company erected a modern concrete dam and the mountain streams are thus accumulated the pressure of water which is utilized for the purpose of flume supply. At the head of the flume the logs from the logging railway to the lake.

Here at the lake fronting the dam the structure wherein the products of the forest are changed into lumber and started on their journey to the world's lumber markets. The mill is only intended as a feeder to the mill at Sanger, the latter being capable of supplying a million feet of lumber per day, with its modern facilities, a very short duration, when it is remembered that a thousand foot must float through the necessary connections of the various machines in the mill, electric power and all purposes for the business of converting the dam is the head of the flume, the steed that swiftly and silently conveys the products of the forest from their mountain home to new and distant mission fields. Large sums have been and are being lavished on this turbulent, but efficient, burden-bearer, winding as it does for sixty miles around mountains and through valleys to its ultimate destination at Sanger.

To one who has never witnessed the ease and rapidity with which this modern conveyor does its work, whisking its load around mountain spurs and across gulches without noise or effort the extreme utility of a modern flume can scarcely be realized. Placing his boat of rough lumber in this express in the morning, the traveler may take his evening meal in Sanger, having traversed sixty miles without dust or noise, in the morning passing through virgin forests and rough, desolate gorges, and in the afternoon across the fertile ranches of the San Joaquin, where vineyard and orchard constitute a wonderful contrast to the scenes of the early morning.

After being placed in the flume, the lumber is carefully watched by "flume herders," stationed at varying intervals along the route, and any mishap is speedily remedied, or if too serious, news of the trouble is immediately telephoned to the various stations, and a repair crew is hurried to the scene of the disturbance. Doing the work of a railroad, the flume is regarded as its equivalent, and as such, much the same system is in vogue in regard to its maintainance and operation.

Hume is not a "dry" town by any means, a condition of affairs that is not due to any fault of the company. Located on a neighboring timber claim owned by private parties is "the joint" wherein every one with a "thirst" may double the same, and the age-old game of fleecing the men out of their hard-earned wages goes merrily on, thanks to booze, poker and like diversions. But to the credit of a large majority of the men, be it said, that they prefer to "salt down" their pay checks, instead of bartering them for an extremely bad taste and a decided sense of general depression.

Situated but five miles from Grant National Park, with the new State road, now building, running through the camp on its way to King's River Cañon, twenty miles away, Hume bids fair to become popular as a summer resort, as it possesses many features that appeal to the tourist, including a wonderfully pleasant climate, an abundance of water, an abundance of hunting and fishing, good camping facilities, as supplies can be obtained at the company store, and the camper, from this point of vantage can at his leisure visit a number of points of interest, but in the meantime, and all the time, "lumber" will be its watchword, the aim and object of the camp's existence.

ONSLAUGHT ON CAPITAL.

Legislation and Suits Against Railroads and Other Corporations Will Stop New Enterprises.

[Leslie's Weekly:] In Kentucky, the Southern Pacific Railroad is being sued for $4,000,000 by the State, which demands this enormous amount of money on a technical claim for taxes that the courts thus far have failed to justify. Arkansas goes Kentucky one better. It has just brought suit for penalties aggregating $65,000,000, under the State anti-trust law, against sixty-five insurance companies doing business in that State on the ground that they entered into an illegal rate combination a year ago. Mississippi comes along with a suit for $11,000,000 against the Standard Oil Company, for alleged violation of the anti-trust law of that State. Arkansas has also filed an action for alleged violation of the anti-trust act against the American Book Company, and seeks to collect $2,000,000 in fines and to prohibit the company from doing business in that State. It is easy to see that any State can frame a law directed against invested capital in such a way as to penalize it to death. It may be said that such a course would not be tolerated, but who, with knowledge of the highwayman methods of the demagogue and political self-seeker and with the power such men wield with the thoughtless masses, will doubt that they will go to the limit in crippling capital and despoiling wealth?

If this policy of seeking to enrich State treasuries by robber methods directed against railroads and industrial corporations continues, does any one believe that the captains of industry or any one else will feel like investing money in any new enterprises or leaving it very long in existing corporations?

WONDERFUL VESSEL HOIST.

Canadian Canal Has the Most Massive Hydraulic Lift Lock in the World at Present Time.

Largest of its kind in the world is the hydraulic lift lock at Peterborough, Can., where it operates to hoist vessels a height of sixty-five feet. Not only does it carry the distinction of being the record lift lock, but its substructure, containing over 26,000 cubic yards, is the most massive specimen of monolithic concrete in existence, says the Detroit News-Tribune.

Gigantic chambers are mounted on steel pistons which work vertically in enormous cylinders. The external diameter of these cylinders is 8 feet 3½ inches. The diameter of the ram is 7 feet 6 inches, and the working stroke of the pistons is of course the height of the lift—sixty-five feet. The pressure in the presses during operation is 600 pounds to the square inch.

Each of the chambers is 140 feet long by 33 feet wide. In depth it is 9 feet 10 inches, and is built of steel plates. Water sufficient to fill one of these chambers weigh 1200 tons. The lock proper is automatic, while the gates and capstans are worked by hydraulic power.

But there are still other massive things about this great lock. The height of each of the guide towers is 180 feet; the breast wall of the lock is 40 feet thick by 50 wide and 126 long. The total amount of earth removed was 120,000 cubic yards, and the cost of the lock was $500,000. The actual time of vertical motion is one and one-half minutes, while the complete time of lockage is twelve minutes. This immense engineering work is part of an artificial canal at Peterborough.

Could Make Short Pipes.

A tourist went into a pipemaker's shop with the intention of seeing the method of making pipes. The proprietor, who was a Scotchman, had arrived from Edinburgh a few weeks before.

When the Philadelphian got in the shop he found only a boy back of the counter, so without any more ado he thus addressed him:

"Well, my caliant, I'll give you a quarter if you show me how you make your pipes."

"I canna mak' a peep, sir," replied the lad. "I ca only mak' a cuddie (donkey.)"

"A cuddie! What's that, my hinney?"

"It's a short peep," replied the boy, "sic as men and women smoke oot on."

"I'll give you a quarter if you show me how to make that."

"Gie's yer quarter furst," was the reply.

The gentleman gave the boy the quarter and the boy took the long pipe and broke a piece off it, saying:

"There, now, sir, that is the way I mak' cuddles."—[Philadelphia Times.

"FADS"

You hear a great deal in these days about "NewThought" "Brain Culture" and other interesting studies. It is proper to improve one's mental attainments, but it is equally proper and desirable to improve the physical attractions. No feature of PHYSICAL beauty is more easily cultivated than the hair. "Hair Culture" is a fad with women of society and the stage, not only because it is a pleasure, but also because it consumes so little time and effort and is inexpensive. If you want to make your hair beautiful and KEEP it lustrous and luxuriant, brush it carefully night and morning, shampoo it once or twice a month with a pure soap and apply two or three times a week a little of ED. PINAUD'S HAIR TONIC (Eau de Quinine). Massage it into the scalp with the finger tips before retiring and do up the hair in a loose braid. This is REAL hair culture—practice it for a month or two and watch your hair improve. Ask at any drug or department store for ED. PINAUD'S Hair Tonic—insist upon the genuine, with ED. PINAUD'S signature in red on the label.

If you want to TEST this wonderful preparation before buying, send us 4c. in stamps for a 10c. trial bottle. Write to-day to our American Offices.

Newbro's Herpicide

Saves Worry Saves Money Saves the Hair

If you want to free your head of dandruff and stop falling hair, you must sooner or later resort to Newbro's Herpicide.

By using Herpicide first you save yourself worry, which is desirable, you save money, which is a consideration, and you save your hair, which is the most important of all.

Why not profit by the experience of Mrs. S. A. Lee of 110 South 4th St., Richmond, Va., who writes:

"Four years' residence in India ruined my hair until it was but two inches long and very thin. I tried everything in Europe and America without benefit until I was induced to use Herpicide. My hair is now long, soft and silky and natural color, while before it was quite gray. My friends never tire of admiring my hair."

Mrs. Lee's story is a typical history of hair troubles. After everything else fails, Newbro's Herpicide brings relief. It would be just as effective if used first.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and prevents falling hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly. No matter what the claims of others, Herpicide is the only genuine original dandruff germ destroyer.

Happy Feet—Happy, Healthy Child

There is nothing so important to a child's physical health—to a happy disposition as proper shoes. The ordinary shoe cramps the growing, tender muscles and bones—pinches the toes and often results in serious nervous diseases, not mentioning the lesser disorders—corns, bunions and enlarged joints.

Why not guard against any possible chance of ruining your child's health due to improper shoes—especially as when it costs no more.

"WOLFE'S-Columbus"
FIVE TOE

gives nature a chance, because they are made to conform to the natural shape of the foot. All five toes rest comfortably without cramping or overlapping. The broad tread forms a solid foundation, inducing the child to stand and walk gracefully and naturally, thus relieving the strain on nerves and muscles. And the shoe itself is graceful and beautiful, because it is natural.

The "Five-toe" is a strong, well-made, serviceable shoe. We guarantee it: "Good Wear or a New Pair." Call for it at your dealer's.

[BY THE TIMES REVIEWER.]

Important Biography.

THE LIFE OF MARY BAKER EDDY AND THE HISTORY OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE. By Georgine Milmine. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $2 net.)

While in the office of Doubleday, Page & Co. a few days ago, I inquired into the "Life" of Mrs Eddy by Miss Milmine, which had been scheduled for publication some time ago. I have heard there had been a libel suit threatened in England, and learned that this had delayed the book's publication. Mr. Steger informed me the book would be published on November 3, and gave me the advance pages to read, as I had not followed the work when it appeared in McClure's. The book is more conventional than I had thought when I heard of the little flurry in England, and on the whole, seems in its nature to be as fair and as unprejudiced an account of a religion and its instigator as one might wish for.

There can be no doubt that Mrs. Eddy is the most powerful woman in America today, and that her influence is strongly felt in England and Germany. Her very limitations make her career the more interesting because the struggle of an individual against adverse environment always presents a problem of absorbing human interest. This is the first time that any reliable facts have been gathered together of the career of this remarkable woman and of the history of the movement which she inaugurated. The author carefully and impartially takes up the period of Mrs. Eddy's erratic youth, her years of invalidism, and her acquaintance with Quimby, and acquisition from him of the idea of the Allness of Mind. She describes the years in which Mrs. Eddy developed and absorbed this idea, and made it her own, going about from one New England mill town to another and teaching it to village laborers and factory hands; her first success through her pupil and partner, Richard Kennedy; her long struggle and bitter jealousies and animosities toward such of her students as manifested any individuality in their development of her teaching; the final evolution of the idea of launching her system of healing as a religion; the organization and growth of her church; the two schisms in which the more independent of her students revolted and left her; the long series of machinations by which she got the church completely under her control and convinced her followers that their success lay in absolute obedience, and, finally, the rapid strides by which from then on she achieved wealth and power.

A careful study is made of Mrs. Eddy's peculiar personal contribution to Quimby's theories, namely, "Malicious Animal Magnetism." The facts of Mrs Eddy's life show that while she was asserting the Allness of Good and the Goodness of All, her personal life was affected, and her relation to her students almost entirely determined, by her fear of this malign power. Quite unconsciously she repeated the history of all religions, and while she asserted the supremacy and allness of good, her daily life was a history of her combat with evil.

Aside from the life of Mrs. Eddy the work has also a profound interest, as the history of the origin and development of a religion and of an American system of optimistic thinking. So-called philosophies of healthy-mindedness have been peculiarly characteristic of America. Miss Milmine's work, which deals with the most widely-known expression of this school of thought, is the first complete history that has been written of any one of these movements, and as such constitutes an invaluable source for future historians of American metaphysics.

Hitherto everything that has been written on the historical side of Christian Science has come from the salaried officials of the Christian Science publication board. The facts that are set forth here represent years of research and careful shifting of evidence, and are presented in an entirely impartial manner—not with the zeal of a religion, but by one who chronicles facts and events and has no other purpose than the historian's purpose of accuracy.

Miss Milmine's work is remarkable not only for the material which it conveys, but for its exceptional grasp of historical art. In its power of vigorous and graphic narrative, its penetrating insight into motive and character, its faculty of representing the vital forces underlying a course of events, and its philosophical conception of its subject as a whole, it forms a work of distinguished value in American literature.

The Influence of Books.

HALF A CHANCE. By Frederick S. Isham. The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)

It is not quite just to the hero of this tale to say that he had half a chance. As a matter of fact, he had no such thing. His chance was so very small in comparison to the chances which we give our criminals today, that I am inclined to think the average person would say he had practically no chance whatever.

John Steele was an American born in the lowest dregs of society, but, we are informed, with a strain of fine parental blood. He started out merely as a roustabout, became a sailor, evolved into a prize fighter, and in the end was unjustly convicted on British soil of a capital crime for which he was deported to Australia. A shipwreck interferes with the exceution of his sentence. He is washed ashore on an island, together with a complete library of literary, scientific and legal books. He sets to work on the library thus miraculously saved for him, and toward the end of the book he has become a barrister in London, respected, and with a glowing career before him. Incidentally, he wins the hand of Jocelyn Wray, the life of whom he had saved as a child.

The story, as you may have gathered from the foregoing paraphrase, is rank melodrama, and the author has striven hard to write what the reviewers call a powerful novel. I cannot with honesty say that he has succeeded, but I can say that the book is interesting, and this is more than I can say of many a novel of today.

Bi-Centenary Edition.

BOSWELL'S LIFE OF SAMUEL JOHNSON. Edited by Roger Ingpen. Six hundred illustrations. Sturgis & Walton Company, New York. Two vols.

The two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Samuel Johnson is appropriately commemorated by the publication of this edition of Boswell's famous biography—the best known biography, perhaps, in the English language and one of the most interesting and universally popular non-fiction books in literature.

The feature of the present edition is its illustrations. In this respect it is first, and will doubtless prove definitive. There is no book in our literature that so insistently calls for illustration, and this demand has been fully met by Mr. Ingpen, who, by the careful explanatory notes that go with the cuts, adds an invaluable commentary to this well-loved English classic. These volumes cannot fail to afford satisfaction to every Boswellian, and will be prized in addition as a pictorial record of the men, the manners and the varied social life in mid-eighteenth century England.

This collection of illustrations is, among other things, a gallery of portraits from authentic sources of practically all the men and women who were famous in Dr. Johnson's day in letters and in art, and of many of those distinguished in the drama, and in social and political life. The illustrative materials include portraits of eighteenth-century celebrities by Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney and others. Not the least interesting of the cuts is the series representing Dr. Johnson's haunts—the streets where he and Boswell walked, the houses he frequented in London and its neighborhood, the inns where he brewed his punch, the drawing-rooms where he indulged in a dish or so of tea, the theaters and gardens where he took his pleasure, the churches where he "made his soul." Reproductions of old prints, of drawings made especially for this book, and the pen and ink sketches, facsimile autographs, and facsimiles of the title pages—these together with the accompanying notes that give the source of, and general information about, each illustration, combine to make these two volumes a unique and interesting work.

Not only is the book recommended to those who have yet to read Boswell's Johnson, and to the confirmed Boswellians, but also to the students of eighteenth-century literature. They will find here a record of the inner life, a graphic and complete picture of the outward and visible aspect of the world of Johnson, Goldsmith, Reynolds and Garrick.

whose new book is out.

AUTHORS AND BOOKS.

"Actions and Reactions," the new volume of short stories by Rudyard Kipling, just published by Doubleday, Page & Company, covers, perhaps, more inclusively than any other volume, the phases of Kipling's genius. "An Habitation Enforced," is the story of an American business man who, worn down in his thirties, is ordered abroad for his health, and finds, with his wife, a place in England for happiness and activity. "Garm," is the story of a man who so loved his dog that he gave him away as a hostage for his own good behavior. "The Mother Hive," is an allegorical story, wherein idle reformers make trouble. "With the Night Mail," one of Kipling's best-known productions, has, in perfection, his atmospheric machinery. "A Deal in Cotton," is an Indian story, wherein Strickland and Strickland, Jr., reappear. "The Puzzler," shows how a Colonial statesman, for long unable to transact the business for which he has come to the Mother Country, meets, in a chase after a monkey, the dignified ministers with whom he would confer—and so gets what he wants. "The House Surgeon," is a story of mystery in Kipling's best vein.

Mrs. Fannie C. Macauley, who wrote "The Lady of the Decoration," under the pen-name of "Frances Little," and whose "Little Sister Snow" will appear in October, is a near relative of Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice, the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." It is said that Mrs. Rice is the "mate" to whom the letters in "The Lady of the Decoration" were written.

Sherman, French and Company will have ready shortly "Selections From the Writings of Sir Walter Raleigh," edited by Frank W. C. Hersey, instructor in English in Harvard University. This little booklet is in the form of a text-edition which has been issued to make accessible in inexpensive form a few extracts from the prose and poetical works of Sir Walter Raleigh, which illustrate his life and character. Soldier, sailor, explorer, colonizer, courtier, poet, scientist, historian, patron of letters, Raleigh represents better than any other man the versatility and spontaneity of the Elizabethan age. Raleigh's insolent and passionate vein, which was mentioned in his own day, is to be found in his poems, in his spirited prose narratives of sea fights, and in his great "History of the World." The present volume includes Raleigh's best poems; the "Elegy Upon Sir Philip Sidney," "A Vision Upon This Conceit of the Fairy Queen," "The Petition to Queen Anne," "Verses to His Son," "The Pilgrimage," "Verses Found in His Bible in the Gatehouse;" his account of Sir Richard Grenville's heroic flight in the "Revenge," the "Relation of Cadiz Action," letters to his wife and King, and the last pages of the "History of the World."

President Taft has taken with him on his western trip a reminder of his vacation days at golf, for at the Chamber of Commerce dinner in Boston last week he was presented with an advance copy of "The New Golfers's Almanac," specially bound for him in full leather, with his initials on the cover. This little book, just published by Houghton, Mifflin Company, was compiled by William Leavitt Stoddard, and with its amusing silhouette illustrations, is likely to prove one of the most popular little gift-books of the present season.

Several newspaper men who have seen the manuscripts of articles Mr. Roosevelt has already sent his publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, describing his African experiences, have been impressed with the vigorous picturesqueness of the author's narrative and with the fact that such finished "copy" (there are but few corrections or interlineations) should have been written amid all the distractions of an adventurous journey through new country and during the short intervals of rest in camp after a series of exciting and fatiguing hunting experiences. They show in a most convincing way the author's equipment not only as a ready writer, but his wonderful memory and fund of detailed information about the natural history of game that he had never before hunted. In his first article he makes a comparison between the conditions on an East African ranch and those that he knew so well thirty years ago in our own great West. The list of books which he took with him on his journey, and which he calls the "Pigskin Library," from the fact that they were bound in pigskin, affords an interesting contrast with another selection of "best books" recently very widely commented upon. The description of his first lion hunt, with its most successful ending, which will appear in November, is a story of the pursuit through the brush and killing of the game. Everywhere were signs that "the lion was lord and his reign was cruel." There is a picture of the return to camp by moonlight, with the black porters bearing the skin of a lion on a pole, and marching along chanting in deep tones of triumph. One of the animal pests of the country, he says, is the cowardly and skulking hyena, whose attacks are made upon the helpless and sick. The illustrations for all of Mr. Roosevelt's articles are from photographs made by Kermit Roosevelt and other members of the expedition.

Henry T. Finck's life of Grieg, recently published by John Lane Company, is being rapidly accepted as the definitive biography of the great Norwegian composer. The book is now being translated into the Norwegian language by Frantz Bayer.

Not content with the prospect of a whole-hearted rumpus over the discovery of the North Pole, certain sections of the scientific world are busily fomenting a controversy over the existence of water-vapor on Mars. This is a question of considerable importance, since the absence of water-vapor would leave practically unassailable the old belief that Mars is not inhabited. With this idea in mind a party of scientists from Lick Observatory spent seven days on the summit of Mt. Whitney, taking photographs of the planet. In this there seems to be a general impression that the astronomers were breaking new ground. As a matter of fact, eighteen months ago the discovery of the water-vapor was made at the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., and the amount measured by Very. The print of the spectograph showing the vapor has been published in Prof. Lowell's "Mars as the Abode of Life." Without this knowledge, Prof. Lowell would hardly have become the enthusiastic believer in an inhabited Mars that he shows himself to be in this work and in his forthcoming "The Evolution of Worlds." In this new book, to be published this fall, Prof. Lowell discusses not only the possibility of human beings living on Mars, but the whole problem of the beginnings of the universe as we see it.

Cicely Hamilton's "Marriage as a Trade," which Moffat, Yard & Co. published in this country two weeks ago, is announced by the English publishers, Chapman & Hall, as the "sensation of the season" across the water. It has been published there some two months, and has sold out two large editions, the third edition being nearly exhausted.

Clare Kummer, the author of "Dearie," and Oliver Herford collaborate in "Bible Rimes for the Not Too Young," published by B. W. Dodge & Co. next month. The verses and pictures are at once a parody and a satire on certain striking events of man's earlier history.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have purchased from the Outing Publishing Company two books by Stewart Edward White: "The Pass" and "Camp and Trail." The popularity of "The Girl of the Limberlost," by Gene Stratton-Porter, the author of "Freckles," lends interest to the purchase by Doubleday, Page & Co., also from the Outing Publishing Company of the plates and stock of another of Mrs. Porter's books, "At the Foot of the Rainbow."

FORTHCOMING PUBLICATIONS.

The first treatment of Indian music as a whole will be published in the near future by Moffat, Yard & Co. The title is "American Primitive Music," and the author is Frederick R. Burton, ethnologist and composer, who spent years among the Indians transcribing and studying their music, and who is widely known as a lecturer on the subject here and in England. The work is one of first importance, likely to remain the authority for many years. Mr. Burton illustrates his points by including in the volume, as a part of it, twenty-eight characteristic and often very beautiful Ojibway songs, with English translations of the words and pianoforte accompaniments.

Six of the fall juvenile publications will be book issues of serial features which have proved their worth by St. Nicholas publication this last year—Ralph Henry Barbour's "Captain Chub," Helen Nicolay's "The Boys' Life of Ulysses S. Grant," W. W. Denslow's "When I Grow Up," Agnes McClelland Daulton's "From Sioux to Susan," Bradley Gilman's "A Son of the Desert" and Mary Constance Du Bois's "The Lass of the Silver Sword."

"Robert Emmet," the new novel by Stephen Gwynn, will be published in America by the Macmillan Company. The book, as its title implies, deals with the life of the Irish patriot, and will be published in a few weeks. Mr. Gwynn is an Irish M.P., and the author of numerous books, his life for many years having been divided between politics and writing.

"Other People's Houses" is the title chosen for the novel by E. B. Dewing, which the Macmillan Company is to publish next month. The choice, it is said, was occasioned by one of the chief characters in the book, a woman who is compelled to gain her knowledge of life, not from her personal experience, but from her study of those about her and her sympathy with them.

It has now been decided to bring out William DeMorgan's new novel, "It Never Can Happen Again," in England and America on November 16. William Heinemann will be the London publisher, while the American publishers will be Messrs. Henry Holt & Co.

The fall publications of the Baker & Taylor Company include: "Retrospections of an Active Life," by Hon. John Bigelow; "Longfellow's Country," by Helen A. Clarke; "The Wistful Years," by Roy Rolfe Gilson; "A Garden in the Wilderness," by A. Hermit; "A Child's Guide to Reading," by John Macy; "A Child's Guide to Music," by Daniel Gregory Mason; "Medieval Architecture," by Arthur Kingsley Porter; "A Child's Guide to American History," by Henry W. Elson.

TAKING THE OATH.

Peculiar Customs Observed in the Different Eastern Countries—Fingers Crossed in Some.

[Sunday Magazine:] Taking of the oath in this country and in Great Britain, whether in court or in the assumption of official duties, is a simple matter. Not so everywhere, however. When a Chinaman, for instance, swears to tell the truth, it is customary for him to kneel, when a china saucer is handed him and the oath is administered as follows:

"You shall tell the truth and the whole truth. The saucer is cracked. If you do not tell the truth, your soul will be cracked like the saucer," the last words being spoken as the one kneeling breaks the chinaware.

The exact significance of this oath has never been made precisely clear to occidental minds; but its solemnity and force, however, are quite clear, it appears, to the oriental temperament.

Other symbolic variations of the Chinese oath are the extinguishing of a candle or the cutting off of a chicken's head, the light of the candle representing the witness' soul, and the fate of the fowl symbolizing the end of a perjurer.

In parts of India tigers' and lizards' skins are substituted for the Bible of Christian countries, and, it is averred, the penalty of breaking the Indian oath is that in one case the witness will become the prey of a tiger, and in the other that his body will eventually become covered with scales, like the skin of a lizard.

In the courts of law in Norway there is a prelude to the oath proper, consisting of a long homily on the subject of its sanctity and a disquisition on the terrible consequences of not abiding by it. When the witness is thought to be appalled by the sense of his fearful responsibility, the oath is then administered, he holding aloft the while his thumb and fore and middle fingers as an emblem of the Trinity.

Turks and other Mohammedans take the oath with their foreheads reverently resting on the open Koran. The one sworn takes the book into his hands and, stooping low as if in the presence of a higher power, slowly bows his head until it touches the volume which is to him inspired.

In some provinces of Spain the witness must cross the thumb of one hand over the forefinger of the other; then, kissing this symbol of primitive cross, he announces, "By this cross I swear to tell the truth!"

INGENIOUS THIEVERY.

Steal the Fence Around a Man's House and Furnace and Flues from Cellar.

Mrs. C. J. Sparks of Vancouver, Wash., reported to the police officers an unusual theft, says the Seattle Post Intelligencer. Mrs. Sparks and family went to the neighboring precinct to spend the day, and when they returned could not find their place, though the surrounding buildings and fences were familiar. They finally spotted the house and barn, the strange appearance being caused by the disappearance of the board fence which surrounded the small farm. Some one had torn down the entire fence, 260 feet in length, and also taken the posts. The holes in which the posts had set were remaining remnants of what once had been a "pig-tight" board fence. The dog, which had been left to watch the property, had gone the way of the fence.

All records for impudent thefts were broken at Bloomsburg, Pa., last week, when a furnace with all its flues and attachments was boldly stolen from the home of C. C. Barger, says the Philadelphia Record. The thieves, who were arrested, admitted their guilt, and were held under $500 bail by Justice Jacoby. They learned that the Jeremiah Butler estate, which owns the Barger house, was to place a new furnace in it, and on Wednesday went to the house, carted it away in a wagon they hired, and sold it to a junk man.

SOME FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

Salonika district, Turkey, is a promising market for American goods. In 1908 the port imported $14,000,000 worth of foreign goods, but the American share was only $371,600. The principal imports are spirits, bedsteads, chemicals, ready-made clothing, coal, coffee, cotton goods, raw iron, hardware, leather, machinery, oils (olive, cotton-seed and oleo), petroleum, sacking, sugar and woolen goods. The best American sellers would be agricultural machinery, iron bedsteads, cotton goods, typewriters, cheap clocks and watches, hardware and raw iron, wire nails, cotton-seed oil and oleo, leather shoes and rubbers. Since July 1, 1908, only one American commercial traveler has visited the district. His work was in every way successful.

Moving-picture shows are very popular in Winnipeg and the other large cities of the Canadian Northwest.

Brazil's excess of exports over imports this year will reach $125,000,000 gold, meaning large receipts of gold from the United States.

The Egyptian War Department wants bids by noon of October 26, for the furnishing of 100 tons of cocoanut oil.

Turkey, as a whole, is open as a market for American lubricating oils, manila and sisal rope, matches, linseed oil, rum, cornstarch, structural steel and steel bars, steel, iron and brass wire, iron and wire nails, small hardware, motors, lead type (Greek and Latin,) earthwork tools, mining machinery, railway materials, paper stock, pen points, boots and shoes, blankets, saddlery, linen and cotton thread, in bobbins, cotton flannel, cotton tissues, cotton cloth (cabot,) plain and printed cotton sheets, woolen tissues, tanned and salted skins, sugar, coffee, rice, cotton yarns, wheat flour (considered second to Russian flour,) soap, candles and working powders. Names of some "desirous" imports are on file for free public use in the Bureau of Manufacturers, Washington, D. C. "Payment in New York before shipment" is keeping down the American share of these goods, imported liberally, to quite small quantities. It is a fact that Turkey now offers a wonderful opportunity for the sale of American goods, if the terms of payment are made less rigid. Turkish importers are financially responsible as a class, and pay promptly at maturity.

Argentina is buying abroad this year more freely than last year. Imports from $127,000,000 to $136,000,000 in the first half of this year over the first half of 1908.

Scotland is a market for marine motors for the Scottish fishing fleet. In North Scotland alone 1200 large herring boats are suitable for being equipped with oil motors.

China's import of cotton goods in 1908 amounted to $72,000,000, a decrease of $22,000,000 from 1907. Each supplying country consequently suffered.

Salonika, Turkey, is reported as a "splendid opening for American boots and shoes."

Exceptionally rich coal deposits have been discovered near Kemerovo, Verhotonish district, Tomsk, Siberia. In places the vein is five miles wide and many feet thick.

Cuba buys more than one-half of her imports from the United States—$42,600,000 of $83,900,000 in 1908-9 fiscal year. The United States took $100,000,000 worth of her $115,000,000 exports in the same year.

The piping of natural gas from Clatham, Ontario, to Sarnia, Ontario, creates a new market for American gas stoves, heaters, etc. Names of possible buyers on file with Bureau of Manufactures, Washington, D. C.

I Cured My Rupture

I Will Show You How To Cure Yours FREE!

I was practically helpless and bed-ridden for many years from a double rupture. I wore innumerable different kinds of trusses and appliances. Some of them were tortures, some positively dangerous, and none would hold the rupture in its proper place. The doctors told me I could not expect to have it entirely healed unless I would consent to a surgical operation. I fooled them all, however, and cured myself completely and permanently by a simple method which I discovered. Anyone can use it, and I will gladly send the cure free by mail to anyone who writes for it. Fill out the coupon below and mail it to me today. I will send the cure by return mail, postpaid.

"GOLDEN THOUGHTS."

The Benefit Performance of Mrs. Long's Operetta to Be Given on Friday Evening.

Before the Each and All girls meet again here in our cosy corner the benefit performance of the pretty operetta, "Golden Thoughts," will have become a thing of the past.

The operetta will be given next Saturday evening, October 23, in the auditorium of the Gamut Club. Reproduced in our department today is a picture of Mrs. Gertrude Allyn Long, author of both words and music of the operetta. Mrs. Long is a member of Each and All Society. She has also been a regular contributor to this department, with bits of charming verse and original stories. "Golden Thoughts" was written especially for the Each and All Society benefit, Mrs. Long has drilled the little people in their different parts, and it is safe to predict that the performance will be a most artistic one. Mrs. Long's little daughter, Pauline, will sing the leading part of Hildegarde.

The financial success of the venture is in the hands of the Each and All girls and those interested in the work of the society. The purpose of the operetta is to raise funds for the carrying on of the Christmas cheer work for a year. This laudable object should serve to fill the auditorium of the Gamut Club next Friday evening, aside from the fact that the children have prepared a rare treat for those attending. Earl Valentine's stringed orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion.

Tickets for the performance may be secured at the Frank P. Long piano store, Nos. 625-627-629 Hill street, near Fifth street. Orders from out-of-town members for tickets may be sent to the department, care of The Times, by mail. Tickets are 25 cents.

Sewing Ashes.

Jessie sat down by her mother to sew. She was making a pillow case for her own little pillow.

"All this?" she asked in a disconsolate tone, holding the seam out.

"That is not too much for a little girl who has a work basket of her own," said her mother.

"Yes," thought Jessie, "mother has given me a work basket, and I ought to be willing to sew," when that she put a few stitches quite diligently. "I have a dreadful pain in my side," Jessie said in a few minutes. "My thumb is very sore," she complained. "My hand is so tired," was the next. But there was something the matter with her foot, and then with her eyes, which was very full of pain.

At length the sewing was done and Jessie brought it to her mother.

"Should I not first send for a doctor?" asked her mother.

"A doctor for me, mother?" cried little girl, as surprised as she could possibly be; a little girl so full of aches and aches must be ill, and then we get the doctor the better."

"Oh, mother," said Jessie, laughing as they were sewing aches, I am well again."—[Sunday-school Evangelist.

THE GREEN ORGANDIE.

[KINDLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Marylis and her "best friend," Elizabeth Haddon, came running down from the attic, where they had been having a "party" in honor of Marylis's birthday.

"Oh, Aunt Mary, look!" cried Marylis breathlessly, holding out a prettily made thin green frock. "Isn't the dearest little dress! I couldn't wait to put it on. I wanted to show you first, and ask you about it. It was in the tiny trunk with some clothes. Whose was it, auntie?"

"Why, darling," Aunt Mary replied, looking in her deep brown eyes. "I made it for you—let me see," she reflected a moment—"nine years, two months ago!"

"Made it for me?" Marylis cried, laughingly, reading in the motherly look bestowed upon her a tender affection to which her own brown eyes made ready response. "Why, how could you, Aunt Mary, when I was only a baby then!"

"Sit up your chairs, dearie, and I'll tell you about it," said Aunt Mary. The little girls seated themselves, Elizabeth in Marylis's small rocking chair, with Marylis's big doll in her lap, the other little girl sat on Aunt Mary's footstool, with the green organdie spread carefully over her lap, and waited expectantly.

"It was very lonely here on the farm for a few years, after my mother died," began Aunt Mary.

"Didn't you have any one at all to play with you?" interrupted Marylis. "Why, there were Marta and Abner?"

"Marta couldn't afford a maid then, my dear, and Abner was with me, though, for I had to have a man to run the place. As I was saying, I was very lonesome, and one day I was sitting in my very chair about ready to cry, when Abner came in with the mail.

"There are two letters for you," he said, as he laid them down.

"One was a second one, and found that an old friend of mine, whom I had been very fond of as a child, had chosen me for a guest for many months."

Marylis interposed softly, "Dearie."

I had been able with my small income, yet I felt that I must take something to afford it, for clothing and education all cost a good deal these things had to be met, I said to myself, 'I'll do it some way.' Perhaps I can."

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEWS.

Extracts from Letter to the "Westminster Gazette" in Regard to Woman's Dress.

One who signs himself "One of the Mere Men," has sent a letter to the Westminster Gazette, which gives the masculine opinion of the prevailing fashions. It is reprinted here in part:

Woman's dress is a folly, from the pointed shoes which cramp and deform the delicate foot to the wide-spreading erection decorated with some half-cooked fowl which crowns the head; but for domestic peace it is wiser not to say these things. Woman has chosen for her own happiness of mind to distort and deform her body and to wear clothes which serve practically none of the useful purposes for which clothes have been designed, and no woman of spirit will dare, though she spend her last penny in some absurd and short-lived gimcrack of the moment, to be out of that great procession of fashion which does honor to the gods of Regent street or the Rue de la Paix.

The use of the hatpin, dangerous as it is alike to the wearer and to all whom she approaches, is not going to be discouraged by the invention of a cartload of bandeaux or other devices. The hatpin is an ornament; the self-fixing bandeau is merely utilitarian—what woman compelled to a choice would hesitate for a moment which to select? I do not believe that one could find a lady to declare that the vast hats, bearing almost a poultry farm in themselves, which have been the fashion of the present summer, are comfortable or anything but an annoyance to the wearers. Yet all women have worn them, and men have met the huge bills with what complacency they can summon. Which is merely to say that women, and, in their turn, men, are the subjects of the most ruthless tyranny the world has known—the tyranny of the dressmaker and the milliner.

Within the last few days I have seen a hat with half a dozen white birds placed on its crown, and the only thought it suggested was of St. Paul's churchyard when the pigeons are feeding. There are other hats to be seen in all the shops which recall nothing so much as inverted waste-paper baskets with some curious outgrowth of feathers or ribbons. Nor is it enough that the hats should be of ungovernable dimensions. The hair must be built up to them, and so great quantities of false curls, of transformations, and of artificial coils are added to the natural hair to produce designs which seem to have caricatured all nature in their efforts to be strange and wondrous. With these hats and these masses of hair women have chosen dresses clinging with almost eel-skin tightness to their forms, until a general effect has been obtained of a walking mushroom or attenuated pegtop. These dresses can give neither comfort nor even ease to their wearers.

A week or two ago I read in an article intended for ladies the account of a scene in a Paris cutting-room in which an English lady clamored to have her skirt made even more attenuated than it was. "But it will be so tight madame will not be able to sit down," exclaimed the dressmaker. "Then I'll stand always," was the answer from firmly compressed lips. There is probably very little exaggeration in the tale; certainly some of the dresses seen today would never allow their wearers to bend sufficiently to sit down. So one could write endlessly of the absurdities of the clothing of women, with whom warmth, ease of movement, cleanliness, and simple elegance are one and all sacrificed to some fad of the moment. If a change is to be brought about it will be by men. Women are probably conscious enough that all is not well, but they have not the courage to alter their ways. Men have the power of the purse. As soon as they firmly determine that they will not have the money, which is so hard in the earning, squandered by their women-folk on gee-gaws which have no recommendations but fantasy and cost, then a change will be brought about. It is useless to appeal to woman's intelligence in these matters; one can only alter the extravagance of taste and of waste by withholding the funds which make it possible.

What Woman's Work Is.

"There are 75 per cent. more applications from women for employment and 75 per cent. less employment to give them than for years past," is a statement recently made by the superintendent of the Working Protective Union in New York City. This fact is sensational, but less so than a further statement from the same source. The greatest handicap of women workers as a whole is marriage. Women have their ambition to excel in any kind of work checked by their expectation of getting married, and the most helpless woman in the world is the one who has been taken care of all her life by a good man, and, for some reason or other, has to get out and earn her living in middle age or later. I have no desire to say anything against marriage; I am simply stating facts.

This statement of facts, however, is misleading, because it implies that if one were so disposed something might be said against marriage, whereas the fault of the situation described lies in the education of women, says Harper's Bazar.

Since women, as a class aim eventually to find occupation in marriage, they should be perfected in domestic trades and sciences as men are perfected in their life's work; their education, in the beginning, should correct the erroneous idea possessed by the generality of American women that to marry is to go out of business. Every sort of work a woman has to do in home-making might profitably, in case of necessity, be undertaken as a means of bread-winning, if women were educated for such work.

All professional schools for women in France are erected with a view to educating women to be wives and mothers first, and afterward anything that the particularly gifted or singularly needy ones may elect to become, and the women of France are universally conceded to be the "better" half of a very thrifty and happy people. It would be unfortunate, indeed, for the notion to become current in the United States that the problem of the unemployed women is to be solved by putting restrictions upon marriage or by subjecting the holy state of matrimony to the suspicion of being bad for the industrial progression of the sex. It is to be solved only by the right education of women, and this, as President Eliot of Harvard has so justly observed, should take cognisance of the fact that the rearing of children and the making of homes are preeminently the work for which women, even twentieth century American women, are destined in the world.—[Unidentified.

Real Work Begun.

Lucy S. Mitchell, secretary, furnishes the following report:

Everything "buzzed" at the Each and All meeting held Wednesday afternoon in Mammoth Hall. It was the best attended meeting thus far this season, and it marked the beginning of real work for the year.

Marguerite Winnifred was there full to the brim of good plans for the Would-Be Authors, several new departments being created. She hopes to be in the city once a month to help with the work. Miss Ella Rhoades chairman of the story department, will hold the initiatory meeting at her home, No. 2484 West Eleventh street (Ninth-street car,) Tuesday, October 19, at 2 p.m. On Wednesday, the 20th, those interested in dramatic composition, poetry, song, writing and the like, will meet with Miss Winnifred at room 434, Hotel Chickasaw, No. 628 South Hill street, and on Thursday, at the same place, she wishes to meet those interested in essays, art illustration and branches of newspaper work. She is especially anxious to secure as associate members those who enjoy literature, whether they are producers or not.

The Emergency Chapter reported need of a wheel chair for invalid young man, and go-cart and baby buggy for needy family. Infants' clothing is also required.

Mrs. Payne was made chairman of the Art Chapter, with Miss Myers assistant. Mrs. Payne also was given charge of a Purity Chapter.

Mrs. A. W. Whitfield will conduct a Mothers' Chapter by correspondence, and suffrage and anti-suffrage work will be carried on in like manner. Mrs. Gertrude Allyn Long, who has in preparation the children's play for October 23, was appointed chairman of the Music Chapter.

A new department, which promises to be of especial value as a market for handiwork, is given the name of Arts and Crafts, and will be in charge of Mrs. Ethel Marshall, No. 737 San Fernando street. An exchange work bulletin will be a feature of this chapter, of which details will be given later.

An entirely new departure presents itself in the form of a "Funny Chapter," with Mrs. Fitzgerald as leader, which insures its success. Those interested are invited to her home, No. 1423 West Thirty-sixth street, (West Jefferson car to Normandie,) Thursday, October 28. You are requested not to come earlier than 2 p.m., or stay later than 5; also to come equipped with pencil and picture of some animal, original or clipped. A mystery under the name "Ooggy Wugg" calls for rhymes connected therewith, without which no one will be admitted. A full attendance is desired.

"Work and play" is to be the slogan of the Each and All girls this year.

The Peaceful Isle.

I know a peaceful island where
No children weep, no women moan,
Where all the days are free from care
And icy blasts are never blown.

Upon that pleasant peaceful isle
No rich men in their greed oppress;
No proud one lives in splendor, while
Some neighbor, worthier, has less.

And there is neither jealousy,
Nor hatred in that peaceful spot;
And no one there regretfully
Speaks of his hard or cheerless lot.

I know a peaceful island where
No wrongful schemes are ever planned,
Where no man's actions are unfair—
But it's no larger than your hand.

MOTTO.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on!
'Twas not given for you alone.
Pass it on!
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deed appears.
Pass it on!"

Recently, a sunshine branch has been organized in Bermuda. The members are natives of the island. This branch has been named the Oliver S. Westover branch, in honor of the father of our president-general, Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden.

Bermuda is a place of sunshine and flowers, with a wonderful climate, but it is out of the way, and right here is a chance for sunshine readers of The Times to "pass on" magazines and periodicals to this recently organized little society. News from the outside world reaches the branch but once a week, when the steamer arrives and newspapers and magazines discarded by the passengers, are eagerly received. Mrs. Alden wishes that Sunshiners would help to form a sunshine reading-room down in Bermuda. Send new and old magazines, in good condition, to Mrs. Eva Darling, St. Georges, Cut Roads, Bermuda. The postage is just double that in the United States, and the English post laws are very strict, so be sure that all packages are properly weighed.

"Why are there no money dues in sunshine?" is the astonished question so often asked by women wanting to know the sunshine rules, and wishing to join the beautiful order whose "raison d'etre" is the desire to brighten the dark corners. What a pleasure it is to say, "Oh, no! Sunshine is free, and when you have received it, you cannot help it, you 'must pass it on' to some one else."

Would you like to know the sunshine pledge, as Sunshiners know it? Listen:

SUNSHINE PLEDGE.

"I join the International Sunshine Society, promising to pay my fee in the form of some kind act, carrying sunshine into another life, within one month from today. I also promise to pay annual dues in the form of kind acts, and agree to report the nature and circumstances of these acts to my president, in order that she may help, and call upon her members to help, in the scattering of cheer."

Suppose everybody in Los Angeles would take that pledge! How many strangers in our midst would feel at home here! How many "shut-ins" would receive "wheel chairs" to take them out into the sunshine that they know of, but cannot now enjoy! Only the other day, came a pitiful letter from a woman who has been a sufferer for years from an intestinal abscess located near the spine, and who is now passing away with tuberculosis. She cannot sit up, unless reclining, and cannot get out into the sunshine without a wheel chair. The Los Angeles branch has so many more calls at home for its wheel chairs than it can respond to, it found it necessary some time ago to make the rule that chairs are to be loaned to "shut-ins" within an hour's ride of Los Angeles. This dear woman lives at Patton, which is further away. She closed her letter to the organizer by saying: "I am sure you will do all you can for me. I am selfish in so longing to be in the blessed sunshine. Over three years—and never out of doors!"

Surely some one will answer this cry for aid, which they can give! If in your home there is an invalid chair doing duty no longer, won't you send it to this "shut-in" whose days on earth are numbered? You can get her address from Mrs. McLeod, and after its mission of love with her is ended, it could come back to the Los Angeles branch, and scatter sunshine in our own city. Here is a chance to pay your sunshine dues for a year! Will you do it?

Three women—and only three—live in a certain isolated mining camp. That they are women of heart and sympathy for the world from which they are shut out is shown by a letter from one of them. She wrote that if the Los Angeles branch would send patterns and material for children's dresses and rompers suits, they would use the only machine in camp to make, at odd times, the material into clothes and pay the charges on them back to Los Angeles in time for the Sunshine Santa Claus to take them in his pack the day before Christmas. Of course, the branch voted enthusiastically to send the material. What a lesson in loving forethought for others, that letter was to all who heard it! God bless the writer, who will make many children happy with a new dress! Little children to whom a new dress is almost as rare as the Christmastide!

"When the heart is heavy, and the days are long,
Let each passing moment, echo with a song.
Fill some life with courage, comfort now the sad—
Many lives are lonely; you can make them glad.

Some one needs the comfort that a song can bring,
If your heart is happy, let it gayly sing.
Some one's pathway brighter; lift some load of care,
Seek some heart to brighten, and its burden share."

Smile.

Smile, my friend, and make it gay;
Scatter sunshine on thy way,
Smiling when the sky is blue
For smiling makes it brighter too.

Smile, my friend, at evening tide;
Brighten it as it glides.
Smile when all is dark and black,
Just smile and get on the sunny track.

Smile, my friend, when one's in tears;
Yes, smile, and give them a cheer.
For friend is not a friend in need,
A friend, yea, a friend indeed.

Smile, my friend, if you have the blues;
Just smile and you'll have brighter views.
Smiling, dear friend, is in demand,
For it makes the world more grand.
L. B. BENSON.

One day Nina ran to meet her papa, saying, "Papa, I ran away this morning and mamma whipped me, and you will just have to put the latch on the gate higher, so I can't reach it."

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

[CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Mary and her "best friend," Elizabeth, came running down the street, where they had been to "party" in honor of Marylis's birthday.

"Aunt Mary, look!" cried Marylis excitedly, holding out a pretty, made chiffon green frock. "Isn't it a sweet little dress! I couldn't wait to put it on. I wanted to show it to you and ask you about it. It was in the trunk with some things Mamma was it, auntie?"

"Yes, darling," Aunt Mary replied, looking down into her deep brown eyes. "I bought it for you—let me see," she reflected for a moment—"nine years, two months ago!"

"Oh, for me!" Marylis cried, and then, reading in the motherly face upon her a tender affection which her own brown eyes often expressed, "Why, how could I? I was only a baby then!"

"Yes, to your chairs, dears, and I'll tell you about it," said Aunt Mary. The little girls seated themselves, one on each side of Marylis's small rocking chair, and Marylis's big doll in her lap. The other little girl sat on Aunt Mary's footstool with the green organdie spread carefully over her lap.

"I am very lonely here on the farm now, since my mother died," began Aunt Mary.

"But you have any one at all to play with?" interrupted Marylis. "There were Marta and Abner?"

"Yes, I did afford a maid then, my sister was with me, though, for I was to run the place. I was saying, I was very lonesome, and one day I was sitting in my chair about ready to retire, when in with the mail came letters for you," he said, "and found that an old friend of mine, whom I had known as a child, had written me for a great many years."

"Dear friend Marylis" softly.

"We were eleven or twelve years married shortly after, and settled there for good. Then that he and his wife became fond of each other, and that their little girl, was to be sent to live with Cousin Dick's family. You can't imagine how I was reading that letter! I had wanted to adopt a child, but was not able with my small income, yet I didn't see how I must take to afford it, for clothing and education all cost a lot, and all these things had to be bought. I said to myself, 'I'll write him a letter. Perhaps I can help him.'

"I opened my other letter, and found it was from Dick, and said that Dick left word that he would bring in a little girl, and that he would be quite a sum of money. No one was ever so glad as I found that that dear child was really to be mine. I wrote for them to send her on at once, and then I began making preparations. I fixed up the room next mine——"

"Isn't it the dearest little bedroom!" cried Elizabeth.

Marylis nodded so vigorous an assent that the brown velvet bow that held up her auburn curls slipped off.

Aunt Mary deftly tied it on again.

"Then," she resumed, "I began cooking. I filled up all the jars in the house with cookies."

"What kind, auntie?"

Aunt Mary blushed. "I am ashamed to say I made up four different kinds—enough to kill any child. White sugar cookies with caraway seeds, chocolate cookies, ginger snaps and walnut wafers."

"Mum mu-m," groaned Marylis and Elizabeth rapturously.

"I planned the dinner I was to have the first day, too. Fried chicken, peaches and cream, angel cake, and all sorts of good things. But as I couldn't get 'this until my guest arrived, and had to be doing something to pass the time away, I decided to make her a dress. So I went to the village and bought the prettiest piece of green organdie I ever saw, and yards and yards of fine narrow lace, and then I came home and made this beruffled little gown."

"But, Aunt Mary," began Marylis uncertainly.

"It is confusing, isn't it?" said Aunt Mary, with a smile. "You are wondering why I should make such preparations for a baby. Well, I'll tell you how it was. Ten years before Cousin Dick had sent me a photograph of a little daughter, a little daughter in long clothes, and held in her mother's loving arms, and it was this child, Lillian Mary, named for her mother and me, that I expected.

"Wasn't I surprised when Marta came walking in with you in her arms! And such a darling as you were! So rosy and dimpled and loving and sweet! I felt that no ten-year-old lassie could ever compare with my baby, though I have rather changed my mind of late!

"Marta, who had been with Dick and his wife from the very first, explained that the other little one had lived only a short time. Poor Dick had evidently never had the heart to write me about it. And he and put off from day to day writing me about you, until it was too late.

"So I put away the organdie dress, and fashioned baby clothes instead. And I combined your mother's name and mine, and gave it to you, so that you might love and remember us both.

"I do, Aunt Mary," said Marylis very earnestly.

"And now," suggested Aunt Mary, bending forward, and imprinting a kiss on Marylis's soft bright curls, "run and put on the green organdie if you like, and get all the dolls, and we'll have the birthday dinner."

EDNA A. NEEDLES.

Three of a Kind.

The generosity of the stork upon its visit to a home in Portland, Or., two and a half years ago, is exemplified in a Thornton-avenue bungalow at Venice by the sea, where three bright baby boys of the same parentage and birth date are enjoying a visit on the sand. The triplets, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Digman of the web-foot metropolis, are healthy, happy and care free youngsters. They are as alike as three peas in a pod, except for the fact that the eyes of James, who occupies a position on the left in the group picture, are of blue. Those of Clarence, on the right, and Earl are brown. The children weigh in the aggregate, almost a hundred pounds. Mr. Digman is engaged in business in the city by the Willamette. While Mrs. Digman admits that it is more trouble to clothe and care for three babies than it would be for a single tot, yet she declares there is added ample pleasure to compensate for the extra burden. She finds they are alike, and yet different, and it is a pleasure to study the development of the three minds. As might be expected, when one is gay and playful the others catch the spirit, but on the other hand, when one feels inclined to cry it not infrequently happens that the other two absolutely refuse to join in the chorus.

James, Clarence and Earl, are the names of these triplet babies, who are alike as three peas in a pod.

Tale of Three Zebras.

There were three little zebras, all as cunning as could be,
Who went out for a frolic, just to see what they could see.
They twisted up their necks, indeed,
In triplicated knots
And stretched them over fences into other people's lots.

They couldn't see their hind legs, their heads were up so high—
They must have breathed a purer air than either you or I—
And so their feet got tangled and the little zebras fell;
But, on the ground, what part of them was first, can any tell?

Now when they saw their tangled legs,
they straightened out the lines;
And when they stood erect once more they gazed on lofty pines.
When one of them, quite delicate, was seized with fainting spells
The others searched for water, which they took from deepest wells.

They saw the lofty pyramids, with green grass on the top,
"Oh, come along," the eldest said,
"let's go and eat it up."
They loosed the triplicated knots until they were duplex,
And then they were just tall enough to reach the high apex.

The youngest zebra, getting bold, on seeing Luna rise,
Was just about to eat her up before
our very eyes,
But his brother told him not to, "For if you did, you see,
The man might thump your insides
in your dorsal cavity."

"Let's go to sleep," another cried, "upon the mountain side,
It's excellent for pillows, though it's never yet been tried."
"All right," the others answered, "although it's rather steep,
With our bodies in the valley, why we guess our heads will sleep."

So they loosed the duplicated knots and stretched their supple necks;
Their heads were up so very high they looked like little specks.
"What shall we do tomorrow?" said the youngest of the three,
"Let's wash our faces early in the Caribbean Sea."

Fun from the Tots.

Tommy: There was a case of kidnaping at our house this morning.

Grandpa: Did you call the police?

Tommy: No. We called the kid—he overslept.—[St. Louis Times.

Mamma: What are you doing with that string, Lola?

Lola (aged 5:) Tyin' it on my finger, mamma, so if I forget anything I'll be sure to 'member it.

"Whenever I use a speck of powder every one notices it!" declared Johnnie's sister to her chum.

"Why don't you use smokeless powder?" put in the boy, overhearing.

A woman, passing along the street one frosty morning, saw a little fellow scattering salt upon the pavement for the purpose of melting the ice.

"Well, I'm sure," said the woman, "that's real benevolence."

"Oh, no, ma'am," he replied. It ain't benevolence—it's salt."

Most children are good listeners, as well as good observers, and, more than that, they are quick to use the knowledge acquired through keenness in these directions. A case in point is that of little Janet, who had evidently spent part of her day in the kitchen and had overheard remarks made by the cook. Like all good girls, little Janet said her prayers regularly just before being tucked in for the night. On this particular night she said: "God bless me, bless father and mother and everybody, make me a good girl, keep me pure—pure as Loyal baking powder. Amen."—[New Orleans Times-Democrat.

"Look, mamma, at the nice big hole I cut out of the dollar bill Uncle Ned gave me!" gleefully cried little Bobby, holding up the mutilated long-green for his mother's inspection.

"Oh, you young villain!" exclaimed mamma, "what did you do that for?"

"Why," said Bobby, tearfully, "only yesterday a heard pap tell Mr. Galey that every night he went to the club he made a big hole in a $10 bill!"

When the stork brought little Johnnie a brother and Johnnie saw it bathed for the first time, his bright little eyes spied on baby's plump shoulder a large black mole. Putting his little finger on it, in great surprise he exclaimed: "Why, mama, God started to make this baby a nigger!"

The stork brought twins to Mrs. Jones's house.

All were ahxious to see what 4-year-old Johnnie would say to them.

He went and looked into one basket and said, "Baby," and then into the other basket and laughed and said, "More babies."

A little boy returning from Sunday-school was asked by his mother what he did while there. He promptly replied: "We passed Jesus on a card."

His mother was, of course, greatly amazed until she learned by further inquiries that there was a picture of Jesus on a card which was passed from one pupil to another.

An Upper Harlem man named his twin sons Theodore Roosevelt and William Taft, says the New York Sun.

A friend asked him the other day how they were getting along.

"Famously," was the answer. "William digs steadily into his breakfast bowl while Theodore yells and pounds him over the head with a spoon."

In a country district of Southern California the school board employed a teacher for $50 a month. The teacher one day kept two of these boys after school. She was trying to punish them, and told them they would have to remain until they could each recite an original verse of poetry.

Finally one little fellow held up his hand, then recited the following:

"I killed a skunk, and Lord a Massey how it stunk."

Then the other little fellow held up his hand, saying this is mine:

"Lord pity us poor scholars. We hired a fool to teach our school, and we pay her fifty dollars."

"Uncle's going to bathe in the sea. Would Johnny like to come, too?"

Johnny (politely:) Will there be room for me?—[Cassell's Journal.

The Cruse That Faileth Not.

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting? Rise and share it with another,
And through all the years of famine
it shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving; all its wealth is living grain;
Seeds which mildew in the garner, scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy? Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains, wouldst thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe that frozen form beside thee and together both shall glow.

Art thou stricken in life's battle?
Many wounded round thee moan;
Lavish on their wounds thy balsams and that balm shall heal thine own.

Is the heart a well left empty? None but God its void can fill;
Nothing but a ceaseless Fountain can its ceaseless longings still.

Is the heart a living power? Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving, and by serving love will grow.

A Salutation.

Listen to the Salutation of the Dawn!
Look to this day!
For it is Life, the very Life of Life.
In its brief course lie all the
Varieties and Realities of your existence.
The Bliss of Growth
The Glory of Action
The Splendor of Beauty.
For Yesterday is but a dream,
And Tomorrow only a vision.
But Today well lived makes
Every yesterday a Dream of Happiness.
And every tomorrow a Vision of Hope.
Look well, therefore, to this day;
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.

IN AND ABOUT PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Not every one who admired the handsome military arch, with which the Los Angeles High School greeted President Taft, knew that not only was the design the product of the art department of the school, but that all the work, practical and esthetic, was done by the school, under Mr. Stewart's direction. Especially appropriate to the location, upon old Fort Moore, was the imposing arch with battlemented towers.

Echoes of Taft Day still reverberate through the school. In the art department, an outline of the United States Capitol was given as a basis for original design, and in the study of lettering, "President Taft" formed the theme. A surprising range of individuality was shown in the execution. A series of lectures illustrated with lantern slides, many of which were selected by the teachers themselves, during trips abroad, will be given this term, by the art department. Subjects ranging from ancient sculpture and painting, through the various periods of art history and architecture, down to present-day domestic and public construction, will be presented. A series of mural decorations will be undertaken in this department, translating into color and heroic figure, some of the most dramatic of the German operas, whose stories are founded upon the Niebelungen Lied. It is the plan to have the most stirring parts of these operas rendered upon the piano-player, as inspiration for the art work. The boys of this department are now engaged in making six-foot posters for the Rugby games.

The subject of games is a vital one, just now. On Thursday, the school asked Prof. Housh if Los Angeles High School would continue the inter-scholastic games, after Thanksgiving. His reply was that it would depend upon how the contests were conducted. If they were supported by the school, so that there would be no deficit in the finances; and if the behavior of the pupils at the grounds was orderly; and if those taking part in the contests kept up their school work—he would be in favor of continuing as heretofore.

Responding to the demand of the pupils for more facilities for play ground, the hill back of the school is being cut down to make room for four new handball courts and a basketball court.

Under the supervision of Miss Palmer, at the head of the botanical department, a plan to beautify the grounds around the school is being put into execution. The work is being done by the pupils, who thus learn how to prepare the soil and how to plant and care for shrubs, trees and plants. Even the girls take part in cutting the lawn and know the use of spade, shovel and hoe. Twenty-five small gardens, under the care of pupils, attest their practical knowledge and careful attention. A roof garden is under construction, which will not only teach how to arrange this luxurious adjunct of California architecture, but will answer as a hothouse and experimental place for the botanical class. Pruning, budding, grafting and pollenation are being practically taught in this class; and the shrubbery used to beautify the school-grounds will serve also to forward the study of plants and trees. The idea is to equip pupils for the making of home gardens, in this country, where this art is so highly appreciated.

The value of any teaching may fairly be judged by its effect in actual daily life. Is it practical? Does it translate itself into higher and better living? The arts and crafts movement, as represented in the schools, has produced some pretty articles, in various materials, and is doubtless absorbing in interest to its students; but has it any meaning in every-day life? This has sometimes been asked, in all seriousness, by those who believe that the practical should be the test of all education. Out in the beautiful Glendale Valley, a group of art teachers of the Polytechnic High School have founded a little community, in which the principles for which they stand, are being put into actual daily use. Mr. Winterburn, head of the art department of the Polytechnic, was doubtless the moving spirit in the establishment of this "colony." His bungalow stands upon the bank of a small arroyo, and is so located as to obtain fine views of mountain and valley. The arrangement of pergolas, porches and patillos, proclaims at once that this bungalow is removed from the ordinary domiciles of commerce. This is a home; and moreover, the home of an artist—of two artists, in fact, for the artist's wife does her full share in beautifying this abode. The promise of the exterior is more than fulfilled when one enters the living-room. It is individual in every respect. The interior finish of woodwork, the built-in seats, nooks, bookcases, all were done by artists' hands. As different from the usual "built-in" features of bungalows as hand-made, real lace is different from that turned out by machinery. All but the roughest of the exterior carpenter work has been done by the artists themselves. During the past summer vacation, hands were busy in this quiet nook, putting into wood and metal the artistic ideal. A soft, greenish-brown tone has been given to the exquisitely finished, interior woodwork, a color which reveals the grain and hints of the forest. Copper is used in place of ordinary building hardware, in many places, while candelabra, sconces and other useful and ornamental pieces are original in design and execution. The masterpieces of the artist occupy the walls, whose spaces were planned for the pictures. Mr. Winterburn and his wife have traveled in many lands and his canvases preserve much of the beauty which he has seen. At every turn, windows are so placed as to frame the loveliness of the out-of-doors. Still, utility is not forgotten; but is lifted up into the sphere of beauty. The most prosaic utensils are sanctified, when made in beautiful brown metal, after an artistic and original design. Even in the convenient kitchen, where the most practical arrangements exist, beauty is, also.

There is a workshop, where wood is made into fine, substantial furniture, of a school all its own; and metal is hammered and riveted. Here, in vacation and on holidays, the forces are gathered which make for strength and originality, in daily work. These artists believe that all art should be linked together; that the making of a sincere piece of pottery, or furniture, or metal plate is as much art as is the painting of a picture.

In speaking of the pottery which is Miss Tesky's specialty, Mr. Winterburn said, "I believe that the boy or girl who puts his or her vital force into the shaping of a piece of pottery, who strives that it shall be true, that it shall be correct, receives in turn, from the pottery created, an impulse toward truth, and beauty, and strength. It reacts upon his character."

Miss Tesky's bungalow is built upon quite original lines; wings inclosing an almost triangular court, or patillo, upon which all rooms open. The living-room is domed, following the contour of the roof, giving a sense of space, beyond the actual size of the room. Most charming, and unexpected nooks and crannies have been invented, and utilized for practical and artistic purposes. Beautiful specimens of the pottery, the making of which Miss Tesky teaches to the Polytechnic pupils, ornament shelves and bookcases, and some of the fine weaving, in which she is equally proficient, is shown upon walls and floor. One room is dedicated exclusively to the work of arts and crafts. Here, one sees metal work and wood-carving in process of forming; pottery in chrysalis, emerging from the clay; and here is found the loom upon which art fabrics are being wrought. Adjacent to this workroom, the pottery kiln is to be built.

A prodigious amount of work has been accomplished, during one short summer. No mere dreamers, these artists! In the arroyo, among the trees, like a temple of the woods, is a third bungalow, almost more wonderful than the others, in that it is a one-room studio home. Exquisitely finished, and so arranged as to completely fill the necessities of a home—what a lesson to city landlords, if they would but learn! An apartment, which is a home! Let us send the builders to school to arts and crafts. Art in use, and use in art, might well be the motto of this community. Over the doorway of each home is an inscription in Arabic, the sense of which is "God is here," or "God is within." Better, perhaps, and even more lovely than the beautiful art of these homes, is the sweet, and simple and sincere life lived there. Genuine comradeship in work—nothing could be finer. The earnest desire to translate every waking moment and all vitality into beautiful creation; and a cordial sympathy for all such efforts in others. If the arts and crafts movement carries its students along the way toward "the good, the beautiful, and the true," it is surely fulfilling a high mission.

DEATH AND THE POPINJAY.

BY RICHARD KING.

The quiet little country churchyard lay bathed in afternoon sunshine. It was one of the long sultry days at the end of July. There was hardly a breath of wind anywhere, not a leaf stirred on the trees, not a sound came from the valley stretching far away into the distance. The passing hours as they toiled from the belfry tower seemed only to accentuate still more the wonderful silence. Even the sunshine lying upon the old moss-covered gray tiles of the church roof seemed to be resting there fast asleep.

The Popinjay came to the tiny wicket gate that led into the churchyard and paused a moment, gazing there at the peaceful beauty of the scene before her. Even her butterfly soul told her that it was beautiful. This quiet "God's acre," half garden, half meadow, with its multitude of low grass-covered mounds indicating the last earthly resting place of some tired sleeper, some identified by a simple headstone, some still carrying on their sleeping bosom the withered emblems of a living love and remembrance; others, alas the majority, downtrodden, neglected, forgotten. Oh it was all too mournful and piteous and sad! She could have wept her heart out standing there at the gate. Yes, she could have wept and wept and wept, but Sir Charles had promised to call for her in his motor in half an hour. What was she to do? She sighed deeply and brushed away from her pretty blue eyes what she hoped might be a tear. Only a year ago today. Poor Jack! How kind he had been to her and how he had loved her. The verse of song came into her head:

La vie est vaine!
Un peu d'amour.

She could not remember the other line:

Et puis bon jour.

What a sweetly pretty thing it was. How Jack had loved it too. Well, she would sing it every night and think of him. Poor dear darling Jack! How sad it was. Only a year ago today. Sir Charles had told her she had a wonderfully pretty voice. Yes, she believed she had. Poor Jack!

She pushed open the wicket gate and entered the churchyard. For a few moments she stood, one hand still resting on the latch, hesitating which way to go. It seemed to her that she was lost, bewildered. She had only been there once before, a year ago today, but she had been so affected then that she had barely noticed the surroundings at all. However, she seemed to remember vaguely that they had laid him to rest under the long sweeping branches of some tree. It might have been a willow; possibly it was a cedar. On the whole, however, she decided that it must be the Roman cypress standing a little way from her on the left. At any rate she would go and see. She had plenty of time. Sir Charles would not be here for half an hour. Besides, at any rate she would not be in a fit state to join him all at once; she would be too affected. It would take her at least ten minutes to get over the sadness of her present mission. She even felt ready to cry already. Poor Jack!

She glided towards the Roman cypress, sweeping the daisies with her long, trailing gown of black crepe de chine and feeling certain that she looked a wonderfully pathetic figure all alone there in that quiet country churchyard. It was rather too hot an afternoon perhaps for a black dress, but in a few months' time she would be able to wear half mourning. People she knew didn't stay in black so long as they used to. Heliotrope and mauve, too, were among her favorite colors; they suited her fair beauty admirably. Poor Jack always used to admire her so much in that pretty little lilac print dress that she used to wear years ago. But he wouldn't have liked the new Directoire costumes; they certainly were unbecoming. Next summer she would have a very, very pretty gown of the palest mauve; she had seen just the right shade at Paquin's only a few days ago. She would have the bodice tucked with the tiniest possible tucks—rather after the style of Lady Hamborough's new dress, only, of course, it would look much nicer than hers. So ridiculous of poor Julia to wear tucks; she hadn't at all the figure. Oh dear, she nearly fell! Yes, this must be poor Jack's grave. Yes, this must be poor Jack's grave. Poor dear darling Jack! To think that it was only a year ago today.

Only a year. Oh, oh!

For the next five minutes the midsummer sunshine fell upon the figure of an ultra-fashionably-dressed woman with her arms clasped around the low marble headstone of a lonely, deserted, somewhat neglected-looking grave in a country churchyard. It was certainly a very beautiful picture. An artist could have found in it subject enough for his genius. He would probably have called it "The Price of Victory" (introducing a small child with a bayonet and a red coat) or he might have entitled it "Mater Dolorosa" or "The Widow's Portion," and it might have been the picture of the year at the Academy and died a natural death on some grocer's almanac. As it was nobody saw it at all, and the picture will always remain among those perfect effects which like so many beautiful things are born to blush unseen.

As it was the kneeling figure, when after about five minutes it had recovered somewhat from the first paroxysm of its grief, got up slowly and commenced to arrange its hat. Certainly such a dainty costume had not been designed to play its part in tragedy, and it had a strangely crumpled-rumpled sort of look when the figure rose at last to its feet. It all had to be shaken out and brushed before the second act of the tragic comedy could proceed.

When, however, the hat had been replaced at its proper angle and the gown had been pressed back into its proper folds, the figure threw itself down in a graceful attitude compatible with crepe de chine and began to ruminate upon events.

Yes, it was certainly a terrible, a very terrible thing. Poor Jack! He had been the very kindest husband woman ever had. How he had worshiped her too. It seemed as if she had been placed by him upon some pedestal and he had been content to pass his life in adoration before her. But other men had admired and loved her too. Poor Jack! People said she had been unkind to him. How ridiculous, how utterly ridiculous, it was. His mother had even gone as far as to say that his suicide had been all her fault. Just as if she had not been the very dearest, sweetest, prettiest little wife to him in all the world. She could not help him being jealous—could she? That certainly was not her fault. Just as if Sir Charles was not able to admire her without any harm being done. Perhaps she had been a little indiscreet—just a little—but then poor Jack had always been so unreasonably suspicious.

Just because she had gone about with Sir Charles for a few—a very few—times people had manufactured all sorts of horrid uncharitable lies and had poisoned poor Jack's mind against her, and then he had gone and done this terrible thing. Oh! she hardly dare think of it, and her life was ruined for ever and ever. It was too hard. She had never deserved so much suffering; she really had not. It was all bad luck—horribly bad luck. Jack had been very cruel to her; he had placed her under a cloud with everybody and she had suffered terribly. During the year she spent abroad she had hardly smiled once. She would suffer perhaps all her life. It really was very hard upon her. She felt quite sorry for herself, yet perhaps she had been a little, a very little, to blame.

Well, she had done everything he had asked her to do—she was thankful for that—though why he wanted to be buried in this outlandish sort of place she could not for the life of her imagine. Still, she had come down to visit his grave on the anniversary of his death as he desired and she had not found it inconvenient in the very least; in fact, she had rather enjoyed it. She should come down again every year of her life; that is unless she and Sir Charles happened to be out of England at the time. In that case—No; she would not be married in cream again. It was an unlucky color, there was no doubt of it. She would have a white dress this time—yes, even if she were only an eighteen months' widow. She would get all her trousseau in Paris and it should be of the very best. How thankful she was that poor Jack had left her well off. Other husbands might have left her practically nothing. But then Jack always had been a dear; but if only he had not been so absurdly, so ridiculously, jealous. But Sir Charles had come to fetch her; she was positively certain that it was the toot-toot of his motor. Well, she would have to go she supposed. How terrible it was though for her to tear herself away; but she would come again next year. Oh! there was no doubt about that; and she would order Gerrards to send down a wreath every Sunday while flowers were so inexpensive. In winter—well, she and Sir Charles would probably be at their villa on the Riviera by then; but she would often think of Jack—oh so very often! Poor, poor Jack! She really must have a cup of tea! She was positively dying for it. Good by.

Hope.

You are hoping, hoping, hoping—
So am I;
We may both go blindly groping
Till we die;
Though we ceaselessly must strive,
Though we never quite "arrive,"
We are keeping hope alive,
Wet or dry.

You are trying, trying, trying,
Day by day,
To clear every cause for sighing
From your way;
I am trying daily, too,
Trying to possess what few,
Though their best they bravely do,
Ever may.

You are dreaming, dreaming, dreaming—
So am I;
We may both go vainly scheming
Till we die;
We may never reach the shore
That is strewn with precious ore;
But if men might hope no more
Who would try?

My Own Work.

Let me do my work from day to day
In field or forest at the desk or loom,
In roaring market place or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the only one by whom
The work can best be done in the right way."

Then shall I see it not too great, nor small,
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours,
And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall
At eventide, to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

Opens Wide the Gates of Happiness And Prosperity For You—

Hundreds of young married people in Los Angeles continue year after year to rent stuffy furnished rooms, flats and near-furnished houses. These unfortunate young people never feel the joy of having a home of their own. Apart from the inconvenience and dissatisfaction experienced by furnished room renters, there is another side to be considered—the actual financial loss.

The reason ninety-nine out of every hundred room renters continue this unsatisfactory way of living is because they feel they have not money enough to furnish a place of their own. This is a big mistake. For many years we have been furnishing cozy homes for people, supplying every need for comfortable housekeeping, and arranging payments that the most moderate pocketbook can meet.

No matter how you are fixed financially, no matter how little ready cash you can spare, we can arrange to furnish your place tomorrow. The little we ask you to pay each week will prove no hardship at all. And it won't be long before your payments cease, but the enjoyment of your charming little home will go on indefinitely.

Do not hesitate. Come and see us tomorrow. We want you to take us into your confidence. We can refer you to thousands of people right here in this city who owe their comfort and happiness to the fact that they chanced to read an advertisement of ours such as you are reading now.

Remember, we make no extra charge for credit. You buy the very highest grade furniture, carpets and draperies at lower prices than would be quoted in another store in this city.

FACT AND COMMENT.

A EVENT took place at the Hollywood Hotel Saturday evening, October 9, which throws light upon a trend of events in California. The Security Land and Loan Company, conducted by its executive officers and a number of shareholders, invited a couple of hundred friends to celebrate the return to the stockholders of the last cent of their original investment. It is about four years since this company began operations in what was then a wilderness in the midst of the San Joaquin Valley. The investment was heavy, the amount of land secured very large, and the enterprise had to be built up from the lowest foundation. The stockholders have received back all the money they put into the enterprise and there is property enough left around Corcoran to bring in at least 100 per cent. on the dollar in profits to the stockholders.

Obstacles Encountered.

Half a score of the men who aided materially on the enterprise told by request the story of the four years. This historical sketch developed the fact that unusual difficulties had been encountered in this project. These difficulties might well have proved to be insurmountable, that they were not, that they were overcome and marked success followed where threatened failure. The work had scarcely got under way when the great earthquake shook the whole part of the State, and San Francisco, the Coast metropolis, was a heap of smouldering ashes after the fire. This stopped operations for a full year. Again things were getting under way at Corcoran when the water began to rise in the basin of Tulare Lake, and the warning cry went forth that the whole bottom of the valley was to be drowned out. This also lasted for many months and conditions had scarcely restored when the world-wide financial flurry came down upon it, checking the onward course of everything, and investment being hit hard and hardest and the effect of the stringency lasting longest. In spite of these and many other things have kept moving from time to time and the fine results noted above were brought to pass, leaving Corcoran a promising city, with banks, a newspaper, mercantile houses and a great industry in a cotton ginning establishment costing $1,000,000. The country around is all studded with prosperous farms. Dairying is one of the principal and most promising industries of the region. Raisin growing is coming to the front. Asparagus development has not been undertaken there which has proved so successful in other sections, and all sorts of fruits and orchards are in a very flourishing condition.

The Reason Why.

The head of this enterprise, the president and general manager of the company, H. J. Whitley, has as many monuments erected by his own hand to perpetuate his memory as Andrew Carnegie has libraries to hand him down to posterity. In Oklahoma, in Dakota and other places in the Northwest he has developed the wilderness into flourishing communities. It was he who in a practical way discovered the possibilities of Hollywood and made that beautiful suburb of Los Angeles so very memorable among the financial achievements of the last few years. Mr. Whitley is regarded by the bankers and operators in real estate generally as an exceedingly capable manager and a very successful one. A critic might say that the man is overcapitalized. The fact of the matter is, he picks out the choicest and most promising enterprises in the section of country where he happens to be and thus insures success from the very start. It is rather unfair to compare his achievements with those of persons who tackle enterprises beset with almost insuperable obstacles. Selecting the very cream of everything in sight, the final success is plainly seen from the start. It was so at Hollywood. All one had to do was simply to undertake the job and the attractions of the place made the work easy. At Corcoran an immense area of country, rich, fat bottom lands with plenty of water obtainable, was selected, and this most important step once taken, all one needed was energy enough to keep the march right up, step by step, moment by moment, to the great success obtained there.

—o—

This San Joaquin Valley.

The Times has frequently in recent months dwelt upon the possibilities of the San Joaquin Valley. The achievements of Corcoran are typical of what may be done all over the great expanse of rich agricultural land. How few of us realise its vast proportions, the vast fertility of its soils, its close proximity to markets and therefore the vast possibilities of developing wealth in that central portion of California. Do you know, Mr. Intelligent Reader, that the San Joaquin Valley, beginning a little south of Bakersfield and extending up to where the Southern Pacific crosses the San Joaquin River, embraces a territory almost as large as the State of Indiana? You know how large that is. It is over 36,000 square miles. What does that mean? Do you realize that this is three times the area of the kingdom of Belgium; that you could take three realms like that over which old Leopold rules and set them down in the San Joaquin Valley and have unoccupied lands left over? Can you fix in your mind's eye the Emerald Isle, the auld sod from which the Irish come? The island contains about 21,000,000 acres of land. The San Joaquin Valley contains some 3,000,000 acres more than Ireland. You could take green Erin up by the roots and float it across the ocean, transport it across the continent or bring it "the Horn around," and drop it in the San Joaquin Valley and there would be a great rim of unoccupied territory all around every edge.

—o—

Little Waste Land.

Another thing worth attention is that of these 23,000,000 acres of land about, there is less waste in the San Joaquin Valley than in Belgium or in Ireland. The greater part of the San Joaquin will run 90 to 95 per cent. good land, in fact the best land for agricultural purposes in the world. Taking the whole area of Ireland, it is known that 25 per cent. of the country is either bog or mountain, practically useless for agricultural purposes. This leaves only 15,000,000 acres of good tillable land in the island. There is no such amount of waste land in the San Joaquin Valley. In Belgium a dense population makes it necessary to cultivate to the utmost every rod of land. But the country lies very low, with surface water coming almost to the grass roots. More drainage has to be used to raise crops at all, and then every effort arrives at only partial success. Another thing in favor of the San Joaquin Valley is that nearly all this soil is of virgin richness, none of the productive elements exhausted calling for continued, heavy, expensive fertilizing such as must be practiced upon exhausted soils like those of Belgium and Ireland.

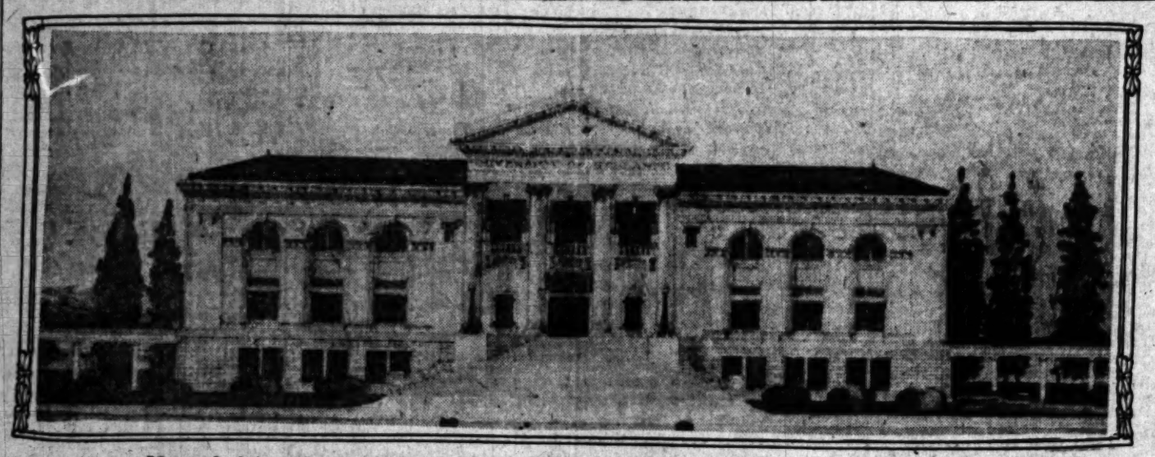
Possibilities Here.

Land, however vast in its expanse, however rich in its fertility, is worth little or nothing per square mile, unless human beings take it up and make use of it. The value of the lands depends directly upon the number of human beings subsisting upon it. Four years ago the wilderness around Corcoran lay neglected at about $15 or $20 an acre, being used mostly for grazing purposes. Fenced, cultivated, irrigated and cropped, the lands have risen in value to $50, $100 and $150 per acre and upward. In the townsite the property has risen from a value of a few dollars an acre to many hundreds of dollars for building lots. The intrinsic value of the best lands here and at other points in the San Joaquin Valley is today not less than $500 an acre, and that will be the market value of them before long. The kingdom of Belgium, with a third of the area of the San Joaquin Valley, supports a population of 6,500,000 human beings. Ireland, with 15,000,000 acres of good arable land, sustained sixty years ago, a population of nearly 9,000,000 human beings. Until the potato blight came about the time we are speaking of and produced a famine, driving half the inhabitants out of the country in the two generations, the people lived well and happily, each acre supporting its man, at least in the richest portions of the island. At the present time Ireland supports a population of 4,500,000. Ten years ago there were not much more than 10,000,000 people in the San Joaquin Valley. There are ten times as many today, or thereabouts. The multiplying of the population by ten has developed the resources of the land, and the unproductive stretches of wilderness with productive farms under intense cultivation. But the work is only begun, the enhancement of values only started. It is not an impossibility that ten more years may see close to a million human beings in the San Joaquin Valley. When that number of people are there and the possibilities of the farming lands have been thoroughly proved, the best of these lands will be selling at $500 an acre, where they are used for the production of alfalfa and the feeding of dairy cattle. The fruit orchards are likely to sell at a very considerably higher figure. In considering these matters we must always remember that the population of the United States is now nearly 90,000,000, of North America over 100,000,000; that all points in the continent are connected by lines of railroads opening up an accessible market for all our products; that this population is growing at the rate of one and a half to two million a year; that when there are a million people in the San Joaquin Valley there will be something like 120,000,000 people in the United States, and crowding 150,000,000 on the North American continent. The branch railroads will be extended. The train service will be much improved. The better markets will be much more accessible and the marketing of the products of California soils much easier and less expensive than at present. The Panama Canal will be open, giving us access to the markets of our Eastern States at less cost, and opening up new markets all through Western Europe.

—o—

We Are Showing No Favors.

The San Joaquin Valley is selected for these comments, not with any invidious thought in mind nor because of any interest had there by The Times or friends of this journal. The comment of the newspaper is generally founded upon some interest of the moment. The banquet at Hollywood called forth the remarks. The possibilities of the San Joaquin Valley are dwelt upon here not because there is anything exclusive about that valley. It is the largest body of find land within easy reach of Los Angeles, developed mainly by Los Angeles capital, furnishing our markets with its products and inter-related with this city by many ties of trade. That is all. We have had to say and will have to say similar things about the great Imperial Valley on this side of the Colorado, and about the bottom lands on the other side in Arizona, where a budding empire is coming forth with promise of a very great future. We might come closer home and dwell upon smaller bodies of land as good as any in any valley in the State or out of it. But we cannot cover the whole of California every week. The reader may project his thoughts here, there and yonder throughout the southern part of the State and over into the farming lands in Arizona and build up pictures in his own mind where he will see many Corcorans springing from the wilderness and becoming promising, prosperous, growing communities in spaces of time measured by a few years. It is the opinion of the Fact and Comment writer that there lie before us from five to ten years, beginning from today, of the greatest growth in population, the greatest progress in development, the greatest prosperity in the accumulation of wealth, we have ever known here yet, and one of the most astonishing periods of growth and development the world has ever known.



New administration building of the University of Redlands. Norman F. Marsh, architect.

TO ADD TWO STORIES.

I. N. Van Nuys has had plans drawn by Morgan & Walls for the addition of two stories to the four-story and basement building owned by him at Nos. 420-424 South Spring street. The structure, which is now being vacated by Parker Brothers will be completely overhauled and modernized throughout. The improvements will cost in the neighborhood of $40,000.

RECORD DEALS ON OLIVE.

Local Dealers Report Big Cash Sales Aggregating Quarter-Million in Garage Section.

The realty firm of Bryan & Bradford reports record activity in close-in South Olive street property within the past twenty days. The deals made through this company alone, during that period, total more than a quarter million dollars. The property that has changed hands all lies between Eighth and Pico streets, in a section which is rapidly being given over to the automobile industry. The firm in question has acted as agent in the following cash deals in this region:

Mrs. Emma Markham has sold to Mrs. Clara Shatto, 70 feet frontage on the east side of Olive, between Eighth and Ninth streets, by a depth of 165 feet. The improvements consist of a single story pressed brick building, leased to a garage company at $900 a month. The price was $35,000 cash. The purchase was made for investment.

Mrs. Mary Cake has transferred to George Peck of San Pedro 50x165 feet on the west side of Olive, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, for $35,000 cash. The improvements consist of a frame residence, of nominal value. The buyer is planning to build a large automobile supply house on the site, believing that it is but a question of a little time until the supply house business will have followed the garages to the chosen neighborhood of the latter.

A. C. Palfrey, a capitalist from Honolulu, has bought from local holders 100x165 feet on the west side of Olive between Tenth and Eleventh streets, paying $70,000 cash. Mr. Palfrey is said to have studied the possibilities of the entire Pacific Coast before arriving at his decision to invest in Los Angeles realty.

J. Benton Van Nuys has purchased from W. Amase & Son fifty-three feet frontage by 165 feet depth on the east side of Olive, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, with nominal improvements, for $32,000 cash. Mr. Van Nuys bought for investment.

For a consideration which is said to have been in the neighborhood of $30,000, a local investor has purchased from Mrs. M. Goldwater 50x165 feet on the west side of Olive between Twelfth and Pico streets.

The same dealers have sold sixty feet frontage on South Spring street, to a Los Angeles capitalist for $150,600. Details of this transaction are at present withheld at the request of both parties to the deal.

LARGEST EVER CAST.

Columns of Administration Building of University of Redlands Triumph of Engineering.

The administration building for the University of Redlands, which is nearing completion in the Foothill City, is attracting wide attention on account of the dignity and beauty of its architecture. The eight artificial stone columns which adorn the front of the building are said to be the largest ever cast in a single piece.

The forms for these large casts weigh nearly two tons and required a freight car for transportation. The columns themselves, without bases or capitals, are twenty-nine feet long and weigh 17 tons each. In the casting of them twenty hours of continuous labor was devoted to each one. The facing are of white Medusa cement and granite. The reinforcement is of the best quality of steel.

The building itself contains sixteen class rooms, two laboratories, an amphitheater, lecture room, two society halls and an executive office. The structure was begun in May, and it is probable that its completion will be early in December. Norman F. Marsh is the architect.

BUILDING PERMITS.

MILLION MARK IN EASY HAIL.

NEAR SEVEN HUNDRED THOUSAND IN PERMITS.

October, Half Finished, in Sight of Coveted Million Mark, Which Is Considered Good Record for Any Whole Month—Lead Over Last Year Sixty-seven Per Cent.

The builders in Los Angeles during the month of September secured 837 permits for construction projects. This astonishing figure gave this city fourth place in the number of construction items undertaken by all cities in the United States. If October continues to gain in permits at the rate maintained during the two weeks of the month just closed, it is probable that New York and Chicago alone will be able to show statistics more impressive as to totals than Los Angeles.

The report of the chief inspector of buildings covering the half month ending yesterday reveals the fact that to date in October 467 permits, representing a valuation of $680,880, have been issued by his department. For the corresponding period in 1908, 382 permits were issued at a valuation of $406,752. The gain is over 67 per cent. The visit of the President and the State holiday together operated to prevent still more flattering reports.

MEMORIAL CHAPEL.

Religious Edifice for McKinley Industrial Home for Boys Nearing Completion.

The Mennell Memorial Chapel, given to the McKinley Industrial Home for Boys by T. C. Mennell, in memory of two children who died in infancy, is nearing completion. The building, which was designed by Dennis & Farwell, is of frame construction and 38x62 feet in size. The interior is in Oregon pine, the walls being wainscoted with burlap to a height of seven feet. A beautiful feature of the interior treatment is the triple Gothic arch at either end of the church. The seating capacity is about 300. The windows are of art glass throughout.

The same architects have drawn plans for a new dormitory and laundry house for the home. The former of these structures, which has just been started, is the gift of Mrs. Flora Howes Farwell as a memorial to her father, the late Felix C. Howes. The building will be two stories, of frame construction and 32x45 feet. Beds for twenty-five children will be installed. In addition to dormitory facilities the building will contain living-room, dining-room, washroom, locker-room and rooms for the matron. The floors will be hardwood.

The laundry house will be of brick construction, one story in height and 24x36 feet in size. The floor will be of cement.

BARGAIN IN BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW.

Here we have a new bungalow, complete to the last detail, which must be sold. With that end in view, the owner has named a figure far below the actual cost, and we must say that it is the best value for the money we have ever offered. There are eight large rooms and splendid sleeping balcony, a roomy attic, good shed, hardwood floors and cement porch, and the lot is highly improved with numerous shrubs. The location is most desirable, being carefully restricted, and any one seeing the property would realize that it is a bargain.

The owner of the new and modern seven-room bungalow is a non-resident and had occupied the place but three months. The house is most conveniently planned—hardwood floors, cellar, furnace pipes, large garage and every convenience, which contributes to making a house livable. On a large lot, within one block of the car, just across from Berkeley Square; you will readily see that this is a good price for that locality. It must be seen to be appreciated, and we will gladly show it to you at your convenience. 'Phone us for an appointment.

In the heart of the Westlake section, we have this new home on an east-front, sixty-foot lot, at a price which cannot be duplicated in that locality. There are nine large rooms with hardwood floors throughout, a handsome stone and cement veranda extending across the entire front of the house, the hardware and plumbing are of the best, and a thorough inspection will convince you that neither time nor money has been spared in planning and building this splendid house. The construction will appeal to you, and the location leaves nothing to be desired—Westlake district, split in two blocks of Alvarado, near Ninth st. Such a combination at this figure is seldom offered, and it will bear investigation.

On a large east-front lot, just off Wilshire boulevard, we have this house now ready for inspection. The architect and builder have combined in producing a most artistic and pleasing exterior and an interior which cannot be matched for its completeness and attractiveness. The hall and living-room are finished in Spanish mahogany, which has that dull finish found in high-grade and expensive furniture. The dining-room is handsomely beamed and paneled in Oregon pine stained to a golden oak finish, and the adjoining den, with numerous built-in features, is also in the Oregon pine. The convenient buffet, kitchen and servant's room opening from the screen porch complete the lower floor. On the second floor are four airy sleeping-rooms and a commodious sleeping porch. The large garage will easily house two machines. This property would be cheap at $11,500, but, in order to make an immediate sale, we are offering it at the above figure, which will undoubtedly move it quickly.

When we say "sunshine" we mean it. Overlooking the whole city, this home is built on an elevated lot, 62½x150 feet, close to two car lines and only twenty minutes to Broadway. This beautiful property with nine rooms, two baths and two sun rooms, has been completed about two weeks, and must be sold at once. The above figure is away under value and won't last a week. So if you are looking for one of the sweetest homes in the Wilshire district, act quickly. This house is built on a solid concrete foundation, and is so arranged that every room gets the sunshine. On the first floor as you enter you will find an immense living-room, 20x40 feet, finished in mahogonized curly redwood with a massive Chatsworth stone mantel at the west end. To the north end of the room is a winding stairway. Too much cannot be said of this beautiful home, which is $500 below what it ought to sell for. Call on us and let us show you this house. It's a bargain.

Here is a nine-room house, just completed and ready for occupancy. Where is a better location today in the entire Wilshire section than the lot on which this house stands—overlooking the city and with an unobstructed view of the ocean. Downstairs is finished in Flemish oak, upstairs in white enamel; hardwood floors throughout; cellar, furnace, every conceivable built-in feature, handsome fireplace and elegant surroundings. We are authorized to offer this beautiful twelve-room home, finished in hardwood, at the above figure, which, you must confess, makes it a decided bargain. Surrounded by handsome homes, less than a block from Wilshire boulevard, it is the most artistic in that section of artistic homes. Much time was spent on the plans and, afterward, on the construction, as the owner expected to make it his home, and you can rest assured that nothing was omitted which might add to its desirability. The principal living-rooms are finished in quartered oak, and the five bedrooms in white enamel, with running water in each room. Spacious closet, Billiard-room or ballroom with carefully arranged servants' quarters occupy the third floor. Large cellar with furnace and Rudd heater, and fine garage complete a home which for location, construction and general desirability cannot be equaled. See it with us and be convinced of its superiority.

East front home on one of these beautiful big lots of almost half an acre each. To tell you just where it is would be giving too much information that would come into the hands of real estate men. The property cannot be tied up, for it has got to be sold this week. We will say this, however, it is worth $30,000 of anybody's money; has ten rooms and finished attic, five bedrooms, three tiled bathrooms, a living-room, 25x48, dainty breakfast-room, cellar, furnace, Rudd heater, and is located east of Vermont ave. Will show it any time. The first to see it will buy a bargain.

FOR SALE—

$20,000 HOME FOR $14,500.

One of the most imposing residential edifices in the southwest, price considered, is the one just finished at 1711 Westmoreland blvd., and if at all in the market for a good home you should not fail to see it.

The architecture is of Old English type supplemented with many original and attractive features. The exterior trim and ornamentations are unusually heavy and massive, and with its pleasing lines give the house a very attractive appearance. The structure is of the most substantial character.

The arrangement is a marvel of convenience, every possible modern feature being provided. It is impossible here to describe fully the interior, but will say there are 12 rooms of extra large size; the finish is expensive and artistic. Whatever your demands may be this house is very apt to suit you. Must be seen to be appreciated.

Fine 3-room garage, lot 62½x162 —east front. Price very low. Call at premises or phone 72156.

Rich sandy loam soil; free water. Just the place for a self-supporting home—a place to raise all you eat, with a ready market for your surplus. Acres $350, some less; $10 down, $10 monthly. Go get your acre now. Excursions every hour daily and up to 1 p.m. Sundays.

FOR SALE— Business Property.

FOR SALE—$2000 PER FOOT.
SPRING ST. NEAR FOURTH.

The old man has sold 5 pieces of property on Spring st. and has heard "your price" too high" till it don't worry him at all. You have a right to your opinion. I've made some men who disagreed with you lots of money, though. If you want the "center" of Los Angeles of 1930 as well as of today, see me. It means you'll be in the center of a half-million city soon. That means $2000 to $10,000 per foot. You don't believe it? All right, Bud, that's your business. I have no quarrel with you about your opinion. But I sold one piece down there within 100 feet of this lot and when the sale was reported one of the papers had a list of interviews with fellows who said the buyers had paid too much for it. But the buyers were offered $50,00 profit in about a year, and could get a whole lot more now.
I sold another lot to a non-resident, and when he came into Los Angeles to pay for it, think it was five bankers who told him he had paid over 25 per cent. more than it was worth, and he tried his best to get out of the deal, but I was much in debt then (as now,) and told him I had already promised to pay my debts with that money and he MUST come across. He came—and in less than 4½ years, sold that lot at more than double what he paid me. He made $112,000 profit on $52,000, (besides income for the 4½ years,) though the wise "old timers" were talking about Spring street "high prices." then also. The same as some of them are doing now. Any "doubter" as to above deals and facts can get the names and see those fellows by asking the old man.
The town grew—the price grew. If the town grows more, the price will still go higher.
But you still think the price is too high? All right, Bud, that's your business. Making fellows who disagree with you rich is mine. I'm looking for optimists. In order to get rich on Spring st. lots, they don't have to be as great an optimist as Jones either. Some one asked Smith if Jones was an optimist. "Well, I should think so," said Smith. "Two weeks ago he found on the street a ticket entitling the holder to a chance on an automobile to be raffled off tomorrow and he went to work the day after he found the ticket and built a garage."
Now, Bud, do you know the difference between you and Jones? Well, when Jones looks at a doughnut he sees the dough—while "you frozen-footed pessimists see the hole." But that's all right—your eyes belong to you and I'm not kickin'. All I want is to find the fellow who has sense enough to see the "dough" to be made on Spring st. If you're it, "come be my rainbow."
You'll find me at the old Spring-st. bargain counter,
447 Wilcox Bldg.,
BOAZ DUNCAN.

P. S.—No trade, Bud, the old man is afraid of you fellows with a lot of "chips and wheatstones" and other things up your sleeves. Except this. I would take $50,000 of California Development bonds at par. There's your chance, Bud. The old man has always made good on all his offers up to yet. But you must do business by Tuesday noon, if on this promise. x17 B. D.

FOR SALE— Business Property.

FOR SALE— BY R. J. WIDNEY.
BUSINESS PROPERTY.

Prices are advancing.
Particularly in that district between Seventh, Pico, Main and Figueroa streets, Where the great permanent center Of Greater Los Angeles will be located.

For example, on July 13, 1909, I had 53 ft. on 12, side of Broadway, Between Seventh and Eighth streets. Listed at $2250 per front foot. Since then $2500 cash per front foot has been twice offered and refused.

The price is now $2700 a front foot And will probably be $3000 a front foot By January 1, 1910.

I tried hard to sell this in July To one of our bank presidents. Had he bought then, I could have made him $250 a front foot, Or $13,250 cash profit Inside of sixty days.

You can find Other opportunities just as good.

I am making a specialty of this district, And of this kind of property.

RANCHO LA PUENTE.

ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.
ALFALFA LAND. WALNUT LAND.

—2000 ACRES—
—2000 ACRES—
—2000 ACRES—

TWO THOUSAND ACRES OF THIS FAMOUS RANCHO HAS BEEN SURVEYED AND SUBDIVIDED INTO LOTS OF 10 ACRES AND UP AND WILL BE OPEN FOR SALE, BEGINNING OCTOBER 11.

This new subdivision is by all odds the best that we have ever offered to the public at any price.

We have no fear of contradiction when we say that there is no land in California that is superior to this.

The soil is a dark sediment loam, of great depth, and is free from alkali or any other objectionable features. See it and be convinced.

Alfalfa flourishes in this fertile soil, producing easily 10 tons per acre each year.

This tract adjoins four other subdivisions that we have sold during the past few years and all of the purchasers have become independent and have comfortable homes. In nearly every case alfalfa was the source from whence their good fortune came. And it comes surely and surely. Go out and see the beautiful homes, the thrifty walnut orchards and the waving fields of alfalfa. Then you will admit that our statements are founded on facts.

IRRIGATION.

There is an abundance and a never-failing supply of water under this land. To the north and west of this tract are scores of plants in operation, one of which pumps over 800 miner's inches of water. There is not a plant that pumps less than 150 miner's inches of water. The cost of development is very moderate. Just consider for one moment the advantages of having your own water system.

LOCATION.

It is 14 miles northeast of Los Angeles and close to the thriving towns of El Monte and Covina, and convenient to the Southern Pacific, Pacific and Salt Lake R.Rs.

Good roads, telephones, schools and all other conveniences.

MARKETS.

There is a good home market for all produce right on the ground; alfalfa sells in the field at not less than $10 per ton.

PRICE.

In order to close the estate this land will be sold at rock-bottom prices. It is away below what others are asking for inferior land, and anything adjoining this tract cannot be bought for less than $500 and $600 per acre. Price $250 per acre.

Terms: one-third cash, balance payable on or before three years, interest 7 per cent. Unlimited certificate of title, by the Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

LOTS OF 10 ACRES AND UP.

THE SUB-IRRIGATED LAND.

Do you believe that it is possible to grow alfalfa, vegetables, walnuts or other produce without irrigation?

Just south of El Monte and only 12 miles east of the city we have a tract of sub-irrigated land that will grow any kind of crops without surface irrigation.

Go out and see the growing crops and be convinced.

We have about 500 acres more of this land surveyed and ready for sale. Lots of 10 acres and up. Don't buy land, but get one large tract.

If you want to take advantage of an opportunity of a lifetime, go out and secure a piece of this land, paying more profitable for its investment or income; you will double your money in a short time.

The location is good; only 1 mile from electric cars and the thriving town of El Monte. Just 30 minutes' ride from the city.

PRICE $300 PER ACRE.

Terms, one-third cash, balance on or before 3 years, interest 7 per cent. Unlimited certificate of title by Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

FOR SALE—ORANGE AND LEMON GROVE. Locations, San Dimas and La Verne; no better districts; none more free from frost and wind. Do you know that the best and highest priced groves are the cheapest and best to invest your money in? We ourselves are here and have been for 24 years, orange growers in Southern California. We advise prospective buyers at all time is to buy the best and consider it the cheapest. This is the whole secret in making money in the orange or lemon business. As a rule, the orange groves you see advertised for sale as SNAPS, by men who hardly know an orange tree from a weeping willow; such groves are not the best to buy; if money making and success is the motive of the buyer. We, of course, carry a full line of orange and lemon groves in our business, and always have some so-called SNAPS, which we sometimes refer to as our side shows. Consult with any successful orange grower and you will find his groves are not SNAPS but the real thing. Don't. Home office, Pomona—W. T. MICHAEL & SON, 204 Coulter Building. x

I CONSIDER I HAVE ONE OF THE BEST and biggest investments in California today and I want a number of persons with $100 or more to join me in organizing a company to develop and work the proposition. I have just secured an oil lease of large acreage adjoining land where more than ten wells are now and have been pumping for over fifteen years. Light oil worth $1 to $1.50 per barrel. Company organizing to take lease and develop property. I want you if you become one of the organizers and get in right and at once. I will tell you all about it and the prominence of those ready to help organize. I will also take you to the property before investing and convince you of its money-making possibilities for the organizers and stockholders. First sale of stock at 5 cents per share. BASED ON PRODUCTION (THE TRUE test), Central Oil is easily worth $2.25 per share. Based on the value of proven land holdings (the usual way of figuring oil properties) Central Oil is worth $2.50 per share. It has an honorable record of over ten years as a dividend payer and if its management was not so conservative the stock would be selling for $3 today. The light oil gusher brought in over a month ago is still flowing over 1000 barrels per day; the new low grade well is pumping over 150 barrels per day and the old production is still keeping up in good shape. No. 51, which is expected to be another big light oil gusher, may blow in very shortly. For all of these reasons I urge the early purchase of this stock at any price below $1.50.

YOU are a recent arrival in the city—the trip to the top of Mt. Washington, Los Angeles' highest and most beautiful residence district—will fascinate you. New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, London, Paris and Berlin have beautiful suburban places—but none of them possess anything that parallels Mt. Washington from the standpoint of picturesque beauty and breadth of view. Mt. Washington is NOT an ordinary residence subdivision with a high sounding name but is a splendid reality—a veritable mountain brought within 10 minutes of downtown by means of one of the most unique incline railways in the world. See it today. Take yellow Garvanza cars to Avenue 43—foot of the incline.

MT. WASHINGTON MOST HEALTHFUL OF LIVING PLACES.

Sanitary Expert Pays Fine Compliment to High Subdivision.

A well-known sanitary expert who visited Mt. Washington last week, in a talk with an Eagle representative, expressed himself as follows: "Mt. Washington is indisputably one of the most healthful locations for the erection of an all-the-year-round home that can be found in Southern California. Being constantly swept by the high uncontaminated breezes, the air is always of the purest character. Not being covered with a heavy growth of foliage and trees, the sun's rays have full play upon the mountain—which is a strong aseptic influence. The property being high and of an undulating character, naturally renders the drainage perfect. If I were going to build a home in this city, I should certainly erect it on this wonderful, high, nature-favored spot. Why any man will pay a fancy price for a lowly-situated building lot and plant a house upon it, when big, generous homesites may be obtained on this majestic plateau for $1500—is more than I can understand. Building sites will be worth a fortune up here some day."

Requests for maps and price lists will receive prompt attention. Send postal card with name and address, or call at office of Robert Marsh & Co., general agents for Mt. Washington, No. 140 W. 5th St., Security Bldg.

READY FOR AUTOMOBILES.

Mt. Washington Drive Now in Splendid Condition.

Since the oiling and rolling of beautiful Mt. Washington Drive, that thoroughfare is now in splendid shape for automobiles and other vehicles. It is smooth and dustless and from its glorious curves may be seen a panorama that grows in breadth and grandeur as one ascends. If you are an autoist, an equestrian or a pedestrian Mt. Washington Drive will captivate you. The thoroughfare was constructed at heavy cost and is the only route to the summit of the mountain, except via the incline railway.

GENERAL MANAGER PERRY RETURNS.

After a month's absence from Los Angeles, spent in the northern cities of the Coast, A. St. C. Perry, General Manager of the L. A. & Mt. Washington Ry. Co., has returned with greater enthusiasm than ever, if possible, for Southern California.

"I never had a more pleasant trip than this one, nor was I ever quite so glad to get back where they "boost and do things," he said to the "EAGLE" representative. "Los Angeles is the pride of the Coast, and unfortunately the envy of some of our northern sisters. In conversation with traveling acquaintances only two terms were used by visitors to the Coast regarding Los Angeles—enthusiasm and praise by all those who had visited the South first, and the determination of making a stop with us before their return East by those who entered from the North. The feeling of Seattle towards Los Angeles is very friendly, and this city has more of the Los Angeles enterprise than any other place visited. Its present and future are certainly bright. Mt. Washington, considering the term of its existence, is one of the best known places south of Tehachapi, and inside of the coming year will be firmly established as one of the show places that cannot be missed."

KEEN INTEREST IN MT. WASHINGTON.

Thousands Continue to Visit the Property—Many Inquiries.

Public interest in Mt. Washington continues to increase by leaps and bounds. Thousands of people are visiting this residential masterpiece and inquiries about the property are coming into the company's offices from almost everywhere. Present conditions would indicate that in the not far distant future Mt. Washington will be one of the most heavily visited points of interest in picturesque Southern California. The novel incline railway and the wonderful scope of view are features that, when once enjoyed, are not soon forgotten.

The completion of the Mt. Washington Hotel will contribute to the popularity of the place.

REALISTIC OF OLD TIMES.

Students of College of Fine Arts in Costumes, to Present Indian and Spanish Pageant.

The Indian and Spanish Pageant, celebrating the opening of the Arroyo Guild, is to beheld on the campus of the College of Fine Arts, No. 201 Avenue 66, tomorrow, Tuesday and Wednesday. Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock a reception will be held.

Indian and Spanish pageants will be presented in the evenings. The customs of the Indians, before and after the coming of the Spaniards, will be represented in a series of tableaux vivants. There will be Indian and Spanish songs and dances, a mission procession and realistic representations of thrilling ceremonies of the Hopi Indians. There will be 100 performers, most of them being students of the College of Fine Arts.

Monday evening the occupations of the Indians will be shown. A brief description of the work and materials used by the red men will be given. Indian songs will be sung and translated, among them the grinding song, the mother's lullaby to infant and the invocation to the sun. Monday's entertainment will close with the recital of Chief Wallapai's story of the creation of the human race.

The first part of Tuesday evening's programme will be the washing of the snakes in the underground Kiva. It is a ceremony supposed to take place in a solid rock, hewn out underground. Sixty priests will participate and the snakes will be washed in a bowl of sacred water, while the priests sing and give the Hopi war cry at appropriate intervals.

The second part of the programme will be the snake dance by sixty men and thirty-five women. The snake dance and the washing of the snakes is a part of the annual celebration of the Indians.

The story of the missions and the padres will be given Wednesday evening. Mexicans, Spaniards and Indians will be represented, led by Franciscan friars. The blessing of the friars will be followed by the presentation of the old fiesta. Games will be played and Spanish and Mexican dances will be presented.

The students are taking much enthusiasm in the work and it promises to be amusing as well as of historical interest.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

Five hundred members of the Prohibition party and their friends attended the picnic at Eastlake Park yesterday to celebrate its fortieth anniversary. Reminiscent talks were given by the veterans and a general social held. The forenoon was occupied with sports, which included races for boys, girls and women. The men were apparently bashful and did not participate.

The winners of the events were presented with prizes such as dumbells, athletic books and Indian clubs. Packages of peanuts were given all contestants, whether winners or not. An hour was taken for a picnic lunch. The afternoon programme started at 1:30 o'clock with Frederick F. Wheeler as chairman.

This part of the celebration was arranged by a committee of which Prof. A. Dobbins was chairman, and included the following: Singing of "America" by every one; prayer, by L. C. Pfaffenberger; song, Prof. and Mrs. A. Dobbins; addresses by Rev. S. H. Taft of Sawtelle, T. D. Kanouse, W. J. Phillips, Rev. S. D. Ramsey, Rev. Charles V. La Fontaine and A. W. Pearce. A resolution, commending Gen. Fred D. Grant for his recent attitude toward prohibition, was unanimously adopted by the gathering.

WELCOME TO MINISTER.

Alhambra Church Members Give Reception to Returned Pastor and Family.

ALHAMBRA, Oct. 16.—Members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church tendered a reception last night to the pastor, Dr. Alexander Hardie, and wife and daughter, Miss Ethel. About 200 friends welcomed them back for another year. The address was given by R. F. Bishop. Short speeches were given by other pastors. Vocal numbers were contributed by Misses Anna Weeks and Margie Halstead and Mathew Algie.

Prof. F. V. Routt was the recipient of several surprises on his birthday. The senior class of the High School, of which he is class teacher, surprised him at his home on South Fourth street and presented him with a pair of gold cuff buttons. At the completion of the morning service at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, where Prof. Routt is choir leader, Dr. Hardie presented him with a beautifully-bound copy of the Methodist hymnal, as a token of appreciation of his services.

A social was given at the Presbyterian Church last night. It was also intended as a reception to the new members, who have joined the church the last year.

TOBACCO TRUST SUPREME.

Cincinnati Publisher Declares National Government Should Investigate Trade.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Conditions in the tobacco-growing districts of Kentucky should be brought to the attention of the United States government, said E. O. Eshelby of Cincinnati, today. Mr. Eshelby is publisher of the Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune, and one of the leaders of the Independent Tobacco Manufacturers.

"Not only has the American Tobacco Company, by the aid of the Equity society, practically put an end to competition from the independents," said Eshelby, "but the renewed efforts of the Burley Society to form a new pool are being enforced by a recrudescence of the night-rider outrages. Conditions have become positively unendurable."

Gordon, No. 461 North Fremont avenue; second, "Concordanta," a Spanish word, meaning concordant or perfect harmony, Mrs. C. Wimack, Sierra Madre.

Collins Wireless Telephone As an Investment

To telephone without wires is no longer a doubt or an experiment, and stock in the Collins Wireless Telephone Co. (Parent Co.) is on the market. Maybe you have heard of it, or, if you have, you have given it no special consideration. You don't mind if we hint that you are making a mistake, letting the opportunity slip to acquire some of this Collins stock before it begins to climb—then to leap up.

If there is money in telephoning with wires, there is certainly more money in telephoning without wires.

THE COLLINS SYSTEM Requires No Wires, No Poles, No Franchises

Subsidiary companies have been and others are being organized throughout the United States for the purpose of installing the Collins Wireless Telephone from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast

All these companies are obliged to pay tribute to this, the parent company, in cash, stock and royalties. This should make the shares of the parent company very valuable.

The condition today, of all the great electrical investments shows when was the time to have bought them. Some bought and are very rich, Many did not and are very sorry.

Today is the golden opportunity to get into Collins. Not blindly, because we say so, but wisely with your studying eyes open, investigatingly, knowing what you are about.

Do that first—then make up your mind.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The past week was one of the best weeks that Los Angeles produce merchants have ever seen. There has been a heavy demand in many lines, and prices have gone up on fresh fruits and most vegetables. The greater demand, according to the dealers, is caused by the fact that all of the people are again back from their vacations; that the hotels are all well filled, and that the influx of new people is noticeably increasing trade in many of the stores. Yesterday morning was an exceedingly busy day, and when noon came many stalls look as if they were totally dismantled. As fast as the goods were sold out the market men closed their places of business for the day and went home for a rest.

Anchor cheese was taken off the market entirely during the past week. It will be off the market for probably three months. In years gone by the Anchor cheese factory at Compton was one of the business places in this section. Nearly all the cheese made in Southern California was produced in this plant. As the city and its environs grew, the milk demand enlarged, and as a result, the surplus milk has practically all been taken up, leaving very little for cheese production. The tonnage at the factory decreased each year, so that the total withdrawal of the cheese will cause little difference in the local cheese prices. The San Joaquin Valley is now furnishing the greater portion of mild cheese, and considerable of the milk used here. Receipts of cheese yesterday were 5062 pounds. There was a fair call for Northern fresh, Eastern twins, roughout and cream brick.

Egg receipts were 55 cases. The market has not changed much during the week. There have been slight declines in case count, local. Yesterday a few cases sold at 41 cents. Northern eggs were received, and candled selected sold at 42 cents in a jobbing way.

Butter arrivals were 22,225 pounds. Few changes were noted during the week. Receipts averaged over 20,000 pounds a day, sufficient to keep the market supplied and at the same time firm.

The potato market weakened throughout the week. There were several declines in Highlands, and only light receipts yesterday kept the market from further drop. Only 582 sacks were received. Onion arrivals were light, 60 sacks coming in. Prices were firm.

Bean receipts were 17 sacks. Pinks sold well. The market on beans has been active during the past few days. Sweet potatoe receipts were 223 sacks. There is a better demand for them than at any time during the season.

Apple arrivals were 12,942 boxes. The call for apples is daily increasing. Prices are firming up. The harvest on late Bellefleurs is practically over, only a few cars are expected during the coming week. Cranberries declined to $9 a barrel. Jobbers sold among each other at 25 cents less.

SHARES AND MONEY.

BANK STATEMENT IS A MYSTERY.

INDICATES OPERATION OF SOME OCCULT FORCES.

No Explanation in Known Movements of Money for Week for Certain Features Shown by the Report. London Seeking to Stop Outflow of Gold.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The stock market today showed the effect of a large reduction of outstanding short interest which has occurred in connection with the rapid and substantial recovery in prices the latter part of the week.

While the showing of the bank statement was not known until after the stock market had closed, the increased confidence over the money market position which made itself felt yesterday, was not altered. This feeling was partly due to hopes of a more accommodating spirit, towards American borrowers on the part of the London money lenders.

It is believed that the London money market is more solicitous to stop the run on its gold supply from other quarters than to obstruct the credit operation on the part of the American borrowers.

The bank statement indicated the operation of some occult forces for which there is no explanation in the known movements of money for the week. The actual gain in cash is reported at $2,740,700 in face of an estimated augo of $6,000,000 or $7,000,000. The report of other banks outside the clearing-house does not explain the discrepancy.

Neither have the local trust companies assisted in relieving the loan account of the local banks, as is seen by the $25,208,500 loans increase reported by those institutions.

Bonds were heavy. Total sales, par value, $1,894,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call from last week.

TAFT LIKES APPLES

President Taft, while a guest of Riverside county, was presented a box of Beaumont apples in behalf of the Apple Growers. — News Item.

Beaumont Varieties Best of All

When the President was entertained by the apple sections of Yakima Valley, Washington, he was presented with apples, which he declared to be his favorite fruit.

He said he inherited an apple taste from "ancestors who never puckered their lips for less than a peck."

He also said "there is something about apples that appeals to me." "There is something about an apple that appeals to the American."

"As a hardy fruit, it cannot, as I understand, be cultivated without a certain rigorous soil and climate—and so it is with people," etc.

President Taft's keen, analytical mind grasps the idea—the fiber of an apple comes from a "certain rigorous soil and climate." Beaumont, because of its magnificent elevation and crisp atmosphere, its virile, virgin soil, is ideal apple country. The orchards now in bearing prove the quality of fruit, and such as the one which produced a $5000 crop on seven acres is proof of the profit in their culture.

Fortunes Made in Apple Culture

La Mesa Miravilla Is Apple Haven

—the Crowning Glory of Beaumont—the Latest Subdivision

This magnificent situation is unquestionably one of the coming show places in Southern California.

La Mesa Miravilla is that grandly beautiful elevated bit of ground at the convergence of Edgar and Noble Creeks. It is a mesa of some 288 acres, which offers the most ideal situation for country estates in this delightful land of ours. Its gently sloping south exposure is perfect for orcharding; its unique location, high above the surrounding country, gives a panoramic outlook over valleys for miles in extent, unsurpassed in all the world for its scenic grandeur.

Its elevation is 2200 feet, which is some 600 feet above Beaumont town site. Almost within sight of famous Oak Glen apple orchard.

Here is every element of soil, water, climate for perfect development of apples and other deciduous fruits. For more than four months landscape engineers, under the personal direction of Wilbur David Cook, have surveyed and planned the division of this ground into plats of varied sizes, ranging from five to thirty acres.

The charming winding roadways give easy ascent to every part of the mesa. Building and other restrictions have been placed on the property to insure an improvement harmonious with its possibilities, and it is the purpose of the company to here develop a situation which will rival famous Smiley Heights in beauty and profit, for La Mesa Miravilla has the potentialities of a deciduous fruit section which will be as marvelously beautiful and as financially profitable as any section of the United States.

Now, the prices are on an opening basis. Already nearly $20,000 worth of the property has been sold, and we say without fear of contradiction that such an opportunity has never been given the present-day land-buyer as La Mesa Miravilla presents.

Magnificent Country Estates of 5 to 14 Acres—Priced Now $850 to $2000

We are not putting one bit of imagination into our estimates of the profit possibilities of La Mesa Miravilla.

In the sale of all of our lots and lands in Beaumont and the valley we have merely taken concrete examples of what other sections of the country have done and laylfet that up side of the accomplishment of Beaumont Valley ranches as proving that the lands will do what we claim for them. This last year one grower produced $7 worth of cherries on one tree—80 trees to the acre. The example of $5000 worth of apples from 754 trees or 7 acres is another Beaumont example of yield. We know deciduous fruits grow to perfection here and in planning and platting La Mesa Miravilla into reasonable sized tracts, with its grandly beautiful situation we unhesitatingly say that it presents an opportunity to establish a country estate at once scenically perfect and highly profitable—quite enough to keep you in perfect content and affluence all your days.

Beaumont to Have Gas—Prices Will Advance 25 Pct.

A Home Gas Company has been formed by Beaumont men and money, and orders have been placed for the materials, gas mains will be placed at once—and just as soon as they are ready for the gas, prices will be advanced 25 per cent. You know as well as we do that gas at the front of your property makes it that much more salable and of that much more value. Now is the time to take the pick of several very desirable Beaumont town lots.

were bearish and even the best friends of the market feared this influence would soften values. The nerve, and purse of the shortsellers have been so badly hurt, however, that they were unable to accept an advantage when offered. The mills takings for the week were smaller than looked for, and the accumulation of the visible a little more rapid than expected, but there seems to be quite sufficient speculative energy to take care of this excess week by week. The rapidity of movement, which is the result of high prices and not a large yield, has served the purpose of leaving a smaller percentage in farmers' hands than ever before on this date, as the latter-day farmer has never been so tempted to sell when the forced maturity had opened the bolls and permitted him to do so. The ginning report, which is to be collected on Monday next, and issued on the following Monday, will be an interesting document.

Houses, Lots and Lands—Review of Building and Development Continued

THE MARKET.

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Demand for Residence Property of All Classes Excellent, and Building Activity Almost Unprecedented. New Subdivisions Attract Host of Buyers.

The demand for all classes of residence property in practically every part of the city was notable during the business days of last week. The visit of President Taft kept realty men comparatively idle during two days, but the volume of real estate business transacted on the other four days was most creditable, to judge by the reports which have come to this department from the owners and dealers. The wonderful building activity in Los Angeles is attracting the attention of construction men the country over. In actual number of permits issued from the department of buildings during the month of September Los Angeles held fourth place in the United States. The vast majority of these local permits are issued for residence properties, and in this feature Los Angeles, in proportion to population, is probably the leader of all. The amount of building going on in the newer subdivisions here is remarkable. Whole sections are being transformed at a rate which astonishes even seasoned dealers and followers of realty development. The 50,000 tourists who will visit this city within the next few months will have the privilege of spending a pleasant winter in what is probably the busiest city in the country. Following are the reports for the past week:

WORLD RECORD SMASHED.

TERRIFIC SPEED DASH WINS FOR LOZIER CAR.

Whirlwind Pace Marks Twenty-four-Hour Motor Race at Brighton Beach. Lozier Also Takes Second and Ranier Third Honors.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Winning automobiles and drivers in the Brighton Beach twenty-four-hour race, which ended last night with a new world's record of 1196 miles for circular track racing. The former mark was 1176 miles:

Lozier, Mulford and Patcheke, first; distance 1196 miles.

Lozier, Seymour and Cobe, second; 1169 miles.

Ranier, Disbrow and Lund, third; 1155 miles.

Buick, Burman and Chevrolet, 1153 miles.

Marion, Lewis Strang; 904 miles.

Matheson, Basle and Whalen; 871 miles.

Two Lozier cars carried off first and second honors in the twenty-four-hour auto grind, which started at Brighton Beach last night.

Lozier No. 3, driven by Ralph Mulford and Cyrus Patcheke, covered 1196 miles in two hours. The former record for the one-mile course was 1177 miles, established last year by Robberton, in a Simplex.

The other Lozier team, Cobe and Seymour, were eight miles behind the record, and twenty-seven miles behind Mulford and Patcheke, with 1169 miles to their credit. The Ranier, No. 9, with Disbrow and Lund driving, finished, with 1155 miles.

Six out of the nine cars to start finished the race. Three accidents to different cars put the trio entirely out of the running. None of the drivers or mechanicians was hurt.

The race was started at 3 o'clock Friday night at the crack of a pistol in the hands of Dr. Frederick A. Cook. A few hours after the start it was apparent that records would go to smash, the first miles of the grind being reeled off at a mile-a-minute clip. Louis Chevrolet in a Buick, took the early lead and at the end of the first hour was a mile ahead of the record.

TWELVE-HOUR MARK.

Burman, Chevrolet's team-mate, was also on the mark. Chevrolet set a dizzy pace, making fifty-six miles during the first hour, and fifty-eight in the second. He kept up the fast clip for twelve hours, and at that time had covered 624 miles, a new record.

A few seconds later, however, an accident delayed him, and put him far behind. Just as he was entering the stretch for the thirteenth mile, one of his tires blew out, and the car jumped the track landing in the grass. In the sixteenth hour, Arthur Chevrolet's Buick jumped the track, and was wrecked, but neither driver nor mechanician was injured. The car was so badly damaged that it could not continue in the race.

Meanwhile Harry Cobe, with Lozier No. 4, kept plugging along and managed to keep ahead of the record. He had covered 664 miles at the end of the thirteenth hour. When Chevrolet returned to the track he found himself seven miles behind Cobe.

The Lozier led at the sixteenth hour and was but two miles behind the record, 810 miles.

Lozier No. 4 met with a mishap shortly after the noon hour. The steering gear went amiss and Driver Joe Seymour had to ditch the machine on the paddock turn in order to avoid possible collision with the flying cars in the rear.

The only spectator injured was Miss Alice Roberts of Brooklyn. This accident occurred shortly after the race started last night when the Palmer-Singer lost a wheel which rolled through the fence and struck the girl. Her shoulder blade was broken.

CONSISTENT LEAD.

Louis Chevrolet, driving a Buick car, maintained a consistent lead during the early morning hours. At the eighth hour he was fourteen miles ahead of the former record, having completed 422 miles. His average speed for the eight hours was nearly fifty-three miles an hour.

Ranier No. 8 was virtually demolished at 7 a.m. today, when it skidded on a curve, shot through the inner rail and turned three somersaults. Charles Bowers, the driver, and J. Mause, mechanic, suffered severe scalp wounds.

With the race half over, the twelve-hour record made by Lewis Strang in a Renault a year ago, was beaten by eleven miles. Strang made 613 miles in 12 hours.

Louis Chevrolet and A. Chevrolet, relieving each other frequently, covered 624 miles in the same time, up to 3 a.m. today, and were in the lead.

The Palmer-Singer car was officially declared out of the race.

With the accident to the Buick No. 2, the probability of a new record for twenty-four hours was diminished. The accident cost Chevrolet sixty-nine minutes. During this interval Harry Cobe, with the Lozier car No. 4, kept ahead of the record. He had covered 664 miles at the end of the thirteenth hour. Chevrolet returned to the track at 9:39 and found himself seven miles behind Cobe.

A few minutes before noon Buick car No. 26, driven by Arthur Chevrolet, jumped the track and landed in the field on the outside of the paddock turn. The car was badly wrecked, but neither driver nor mechanic was injured.

Buick No. 6, which had made world's record for a one-mile circular track before it was disabled, was officially declared out of the race at 1:50 p.m.

PIRATES ARE WORLD'S CHAMPIONS THROUGH DEFEATING THE TIGERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 16.—Pittsburgh won the world's championship today by overwhelming Detroit, 8 to 0, in the seventh and decisive game of one of the hardest world's series over fought.

This was the third successive time Detroit has been defeated in the world's championship series, and consequently the third straight victory for the National League, the Chicago Nationals having won the title in 1907 and 1908.

To Charles Adams, the young Pittsburgh twirler, belongs the major portion of the credit for winning the series. This is the third victory for this youngster, as he won the first game at Pittsburgh, 4 to 1; the fifth game at Pittsburgh, 8 to 4, and the contest today.

He held the Tigers safely at all times and allowed only six hits, two of these coming in the fourth inning, but the remainder being distributed, one to each session.

Donovan started the game for Detroit and lived up to his title of "Wild Bill," by giving six bases on balls and hitting a batter in the first two innings. In the third, he allowed a two-bagger and a single, and George Mullin, the iron man of Detroit, succeeded him in the fourth inning.

It was a case of "too often" for Mullin, as he has worked in four of the seven games of the series. The new world's champions hit him hard in spots and scored four runs on him, three in the sixth and one in the eighth.

The first inning added two more accidents to the casualty list for the series. Byrne reached first base when he was hit by Donovan and went to second on Leach's sacrifice. Clarke passed him a hit-and-run signal, but failed to hit and Byrne was caught at third after a desperate slide. Byrne sprained his ankle in the play and was carried from the field.

Moriarity remained in the game until he doubled in the second inning.

ONE MORE LAID AWAY.

KETCHEL GOES TWELVE ROUNDS WITH JOHNSON

Heavyweight Champion Is Knocked Down in Last Round, Then Arises and Simply Smothers White Man in Savage Attack.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In one of the most spectacular finishes that has ever attended a heavyweight championship fight, with Jack Johnson, the holder of the title sprawling on the canvas one moment and Ketchel down for the count the next, Jack Johnson knocked out Stanley Ketchel in the middle of the twelfth round at Coffroth's Mission-street arena this afternoon.

It was a sensational wind-up to what had been a thoroughly one-sided bout in favor of the black. The crowd could not believe its eyes as it saw Johnson on the floor, taking his time in recovering himself. And before they had fully digested that, the Texan made a fierce lunge at Ketchel, caught him two vicious left and right punches to the jaw that were delivered with so much force that the negro fell over the prostrate Ketchel, and went tumbling into his own corner as Referee Jack Welch was telling off the seconds that were spelling defeat for the Michigan boy.

And Ketchel was completedly out. Lifted back to his corner, the beaten man was too dazed to talk, and was quickly removed to his dressing-room for further treatment.

Next to the defeat of Ketchel and, perhaps in spite of that, the knock-down of the heavyweight champion was the spectacular nature of the performance. Ketchel swung a hard right as the two men were advancing. To most of those who were in a position to follow closely what was happening, the punch seemed to glance around the back of Johnson's head.

Apparently, also, it had little force, and there was genuine surprise when Johnson dropped down, spun around on his knees with a smile on his face and took advantage of the count that the rules of the prize ring permitted him.

Ketchel says that he landed a hard punch. Referee Jack Welsh affirms that the blow struck Johnson, and the colored man himself declares that he was hit behind the ear as he was coming and that the impact of the two bodies rushing together was what made him fall.

Johnson says, also, that the blow dazed him for the moment, but it is significant that once on his feet he was not so dazed but that he rushed Ketchel more viciously than at any previous stage of the match, and used so much force behind the right and left he swung in rapid succession, that the right glove shows where Ketchel's teeth pierced through the leather.

It may have been a straight knock-down that Ketchel scored. It is possible of course that the negro could not save himself, but the writer did not see a punch that would have such an effect and it must also be remembered that such an ending would be of vast assistance to the handling of the moving pictures.

Ketchel was apparently too weak to have landed a telling blow in the ninth and the way he fairly collapsed when Johnson put his force behind two punches is the best indication of his condition.

That the negro could have finished the fight much earlier than he did was apparent to those at the ringside and that he was merely saving Ketchel even to the extent of holding him up in the earlier rounds when the white man was almost falling was proved to any tyro at the boxing game.

Before the fight started it was whispered about the press seats, coming from a well-known sporting man, that Johnson would fight for the moving pictures for twelve rounds and that he would then cut loose.

George Little is credited with having told several friends that Johnson would win in the twelfth round and along in the tenth when there were remarks that Ketchel might last the limit, Little offered to bet any amount of money that Johnson would knock Ketchel out before fifteen rounds had passed.

Nor is this a charge of any collusion between Ketchel and Johnson. Each man was fighting his own fight and going his own way, but there is reasonable suspicion that Johnson for the sake of the pictures preferred to allow his opponent to last a reasonable length of time.

Willis Britt loudly declares Ketchel lost the fight through his own carelessness; that he was in a fair way to capture the heavyweight championship had he been cautious once Johnson had dropped to the floor. But in no round of the fight is this statement borne out. Ketchel was as easy for Johnson as was Kaufman.

GREAT COURAGE.

That the middleweight champion showed indomitable courage and gameness against the odds he had to face is admitted. But at all times in the bout Johnson handled his man much as he would a child, swinging Ketchel clear on his feet in some of the clinches and outboxing him so that Ketchel's vaunted shift missed by a foot many times he tried to connect.

The middleweight was hardly more formidable than Al Kaufman. It is true he was more aggressive and that he injected more of the spectacular into the match, but even his strenuous friends about the ring could not but shake their heads at the feeble progress of the smaller man and his impotent efforts to land a punch that would hurt the dusky fighter.

As early as the second round Johnson showed the crowd a flash of his DESERT CARS HOT ON TRAIL.

Roads to Ehrenburg Kept Warm by Motors.

Fenner Asks for Change in Phoenix Race Rules.

Machines Are Stripped for Quick Action.

Automobiles stripped for racing are chugging over the desert roads between Los Angeles and Ehrenberg. Each of the nine machines entered will be driven over the Phoenix course as far as the Colorado River. Every driver in the race is anxious to learn the features of the first part of the course.

Much depends on the driving of the first leg. The car that is sent to San Bernardino in less than two hours can then be shot along toward Banning with a fair margin. Daylight will come before Banning is reached and good time can be made to Whitewater.

Minutes gained on the run to Whitewater will allow for loss of time out on the dreary sand waste. From Whitewater to Palm Springs each car will have a weary pull. Then will come the slightly better going to Mecca, to be followed by the tug to Dos Palmos.

Ralph Hamlin has stripped his Franklin "Greyhound" and will make one more trip before the race. He will go as far as Ehrenberg and will then be content to try his luck in the final grind. He says he knows the road well on the other side of the river.

From Ehrenberg through Quartzite and Salome the going is good almost all the way. The cars will be sent away from Ehrenberg by a representative of the Maricopa Automobile Club, and the last leg of the long race will be a test of speed.

The Studebaker E.M.F. will be stripped this week in preparation for the long race, the longest this car has ever entered. Bert Latham, who drove the car last year, will be at the wheel this year. Bert knows the road and this will be a great advantage. Harry Lord, of the Lord Motor Car Company, who entered the E.M.F., will probably drive the car as far as Banning.

STUDEBAKER'S CHANCE.

This will give the E.M.F. a good start and Latham should then be able to send the machine on through the desert to Ehrenberg, where he can snatch a few hours' sleep before the start the following morning.

The E.M.F. is fast. Latham is making a good showing with this year's small Studebaker "thirty." She has plenty of power and pulls herself through the sand in great shape. The car has a chance which some of the others have not. It is light and can be handled in the deep sand to advantage. The Studebaker "thirty" is one of the likely entries.

Walter L. Vail will be out on the road this week with the Pennsylvania. Here is a car that is only known from what it has done in its first meet here. The Pennsylvania won handily. O'Connell, the man who piloted the car to victory in the fifty-mile race at Santa Ana, will be at the wheel during the desert race. Vail will be with him and will drive a part of the way.

F. C. Fenner, who enters the Iszotta "Tarza Florio," wants the Phoenix race rules amended to read that the entrant who draws "slip No. 1" shall have the choice of position in the start, and so on down through the numbers, the No. 9 man having ninth choice, or the position left after all have chosen.

In this way Fenner says there will be no trading of slips, as otherwise "No. 1" and "No. 9" may interchange slips, and the man who starts eighth may not know who is behind him. When Referee Mitchell returns from San Francisco this matter will be taken up by the nine men whose cars are entered.

The Iszotta should be here in about two weeks. Meantime Fenner will use Black Bess to learn the curves and kinks in the desert road. Fenner will be on the car, and either Lewis Strang or a local man will be on the Iszotta during the race.

SHETTLER A PUZZLE.

Leon T. Shettler is a puzzle. He will not enter his Apperson "Jack Rabbit." There is a possibility that a four-cylinder Reo may be started. Reuben Shettler, father of the Reo agent, has a four-cylinder Reo shipped here from the factory for his own use, which will do fifty-five miles as slick as a whistle.

This is the car Shettler would like to enter in the race. If the four-cylinder Reo starts the others had better look well to their laurels, as this car enjoys a sand road. Shettler, Sr., is thinking the matter over seriously and may decide to let the Reo out of his sight long enough for it to win the Phoenix race.

D. B. Rose is sure the Elmore will win. C. S. Smith, the other man who will be on the Elmore, is equally sure of the valveless car's chances. The Elmore made good last year by getting second place. A. J. Smith, who drove the car in the last race, will be here this time and will ride on the Elmore.

This week the Elmore will be sent over a part of the course. Rose will drive to Ehrenberg, the most severe stretch of the desert race. He expects to make the round trip in about four days. This will give him a good insight into the road conditions.

The Dorris car is a likely entry. William Boshyshell will be on the Dorris all the way. He does not know the road, but before the day of the race he expects to be thoroughly familiar with the stretch between here and Ehrenberg.

BABY FORD.

One of the smallest cars in the race is the Ford four-cylinder. This midget car is entered by the Standard Motor Car Company. The Ford has the winning habit. The race across the continent was easy for the little car. It will have the advantage of being exceedingly light and can be sent over the sands perhaps as fast or even a little faster than the big cars.

A. J. Nikrent has the Buick stripped for action with two of as comfortable seats as were ever placed on a racing car. The Buick will be right this time, "Nick" says. His brother, Louis, will ride with him and the two will change places occasionally as the car plunges through the sands.

PREPARATORY TRIP.

The Elmore "26" will leave next Friday for its first trip preparatory to the Phoenix race. The car is being made ready for the desert, and will be sent away on its first run equipped as it will be in the big November contest.

During the last two weeks Rose has been securing considerable information regarding the road, and now has in this position a map and valuable data, which will guide him in laying out his campaign for the race.

It was expected that A. J. Smith, who drove the Elmore into second place last year, would ride in the car, but on account of his interests in San Francisco he will be unable to get away, and George Dake, who accompanied Smith, will be a member of the crew. Dake will go on the preliminary trip. He knows the road and will be a valuable member of the party.

GREYHOUND OUT.

Ralph Hamlin and his Franklin Greyhound will be among the cars which will make a preliminary trip to the Colorado River this week. The big six-cylinder roadster is being put in shape for this first long run, and when it is turned out it will be equipped just as it will start in the long desert grind.

Hamlin and Guy Irwin have had the experience of the race of last year, in which they started without having gone over any part of the course. They got lost repeatedly, and were ten hours going twelve miles at one place.

Hamlin does not mean to have any such experience this time. He will not trust to a guide, but will go over the road and learn it thoroughly himself. If he gets lost then he will have only himself to blame.

The Franklin will be sent through the sand as far as Ehrenberg, and if any radical changes in road conditions are reported in the last 157 miles from the river to Phoenix, Hamlin will drive over this entire section to thoroughly familiarize himself with the present conditions.

The Franklin crew will be composed of Hamlin, Irwin and C. S. Carris of the Franklin factory, who will be here about November 1.

Roger Stearns and Charley Harris will be the crew on the little Ford, which weighs, with its desert equipment, less than 1200 pounds. The two will leave today for a run over the roads between here and Ehrenberg. They expect to be out about a week. In that time Stearns expects to know the course thoroughly to the Colorado River. The car will be again overhauled and made ready for the start.

NEW STUNTS.

WOMEN MAY ENTER NOVELTY RACES AT ASCOT AUTO MEET.

WALTER HEMPEL has received a proposal for a series of women's races to be held at Ascot Park during the automobile race meet October 30 and 31. The proposition is to card at least three events in which women will be eligible. Hempel is undecided.

The events would include electric and gasoline cars. Care would be taken to avoid the possibility of accidents. High speed would be prohibited.

One of the events would be a pursuit race for gas cars driven by women. Cars would be started half a mile apart and the race could be made exceedingly interesting.

Another proposed event would be a slow race, in which women would be entered to drive gasoline cars, the last to win. The race would be a quarter of a mile, and the cars could be watched as they crawled down the stretch in full sight of the grand stands.

Another event would be an obstacle race in which women would be obliged to drive several hundred yards along a track on which barrels had been strewn. The electric cars must be driven between these, in and out, at speed. Penalties would be levied for striking or overturning a barrel.

Medals and jewelry could be offered as prizes for the women's races. They would be attractive as a novelty. While no speed would be made or records broken, the skill of the women could be shown and the crowd entertained.

There are at least fifty expert women drivers in Los Angeles. While women naturally shrink from publicity, the track events could be so arranged that each would be select and intensely interesting. Practice could be private.

Five entries in the novelty race would be to insure interest in the events. The slow race would possibly see at least a dozen electrics moving down the course.

Beside the Chief Executive is Mayor Alexander, and Maj. Archibald W. Butts is on the jump seat. Secret Service Agent Sloane is on the front seat and Ralph Hamlin, the owner of the car, is at the wheel.

CADILLACS DELAYED.

Nineteen-Ten Cars on the Way, But Are Held Up Because of Heavy Railroad Traffic.

The Lee Motor Car Company expects the first of the 1910 Cadillacs here this week. Carloads are coming on two different roads and they were far beyond the Rockies several days ago. The demonstrator should have been here last week, but due to one of those unfortunate railroad delays, it is still on the way and expected every day. Despite this handicap of no demonstrator Manager M. H. Green reports nine additional orders last week.

Three other carloads left the factory yesterday and others will follow this week. Once shipments begin to arrive, there will be a flood of Cadillacs.

Don Lee will open the Pasadena branch about November 1. This will be the largest garage in Pasadena and will be under the management of Lester Pates.

H. H. Kelly has secured the Cadillac agency for Santa Ana.

The local company received word last week that thirty Cadillac cars had been purchased for the use of city officials in New York.

P. H. Greer and Dale Carltoft are off in a Mitchell seeking quail in the Escondido and San Diego country.

AUTO SCORES.

MOTOR CAR PLAYS IMPORTANT ROLE IN RECEPTION TO TAFT.

PRESIDENT TAFT saw more automobiles on the streets of Los Angeles than any other man had ever seen before at one time. Los Angeles turned out in force to greet the President, but the auto pageant was the greatest ever seen in this city.

There are almost 6000 automobiles in Los Angeles. Every garage in town was emptied by the time the Presidential party started on its tour of the city. These cars were lined along the main streets or drawn into the procession.

As a consequence thousands of automobiles helped to show the President what Los Angeles thinks of him. At the same time it gave everybody a wonderful insight into the rapid growth of the industry.

Just what an important place in the reception of the Chief Executive the auto occupied could have been gleaned at a glance over the programme. President Taft moved in a motor car from place to place. He was taken from the steamer and returned to his train in a car. He was whisked to breakfast, lunch and dinner in motor cars, the handiest means of conveyance that could be found.

Everybody wanted to drive President Taft about the city. The committee had a hard question to solve. Dozens of cars had been proffered. William E. Bush had tendered a big Pierce-Arrow, Ralph Hamlin a seven-passenger Franklin. It seemed fitting that the President should be driven by Hamlin, the head of the Dealers' Association.

Bush's Pierce-Arrow was ready and the Franklin could be had at a moment's notice. The committee hesitated. Then came a proposal. Bush and Hamlin were invited to settle the question by lot. Hamlin won the toss, and elected to drive Taft about the city streets. Bill Bush drove Bill Taft about Pasadena.

The Franklin was handsomely decorated, and the President had an enjoyable ride. So enjoyable, in fact, that he forgot his overcoat and gloves. These were left in the Franklin, and Hamlin and Al Byers, both large men, wrapped themselves in the big coat, which covered them comfortably.

Hamlin took special pains with the car that the President used. There was not a hitch, and the motor purred pleasantly during the entire ride though it had to be throttled down to suit the movement of the long procession.

At Pasadena Bill Bush and the big Pierce-Arrow came off successful. The President was taken through the streets on his triumphal march and then back to his train. The Pierce behaved itself, and Bush was pleased.

AUTO TOUR INTO WILDS.

MR. AND MRS. LYON VISIT PARADISE OF HUNTERS.

Pope-Hartford Driven to San Francisco, But Rough Roads Compel Abandonment of Overland Trip. Seattle to Vancouver in Big Peerless.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Lyon returned Monday from a five weeks' trip passed in Oregon and Washington. Mrs. Lyon drove her Pope-Hartford touring car as far as San Francisco, but the condition of the roads were such that the trip overland was abandoned and the car was left in San Francisco until Mr. and Mrs. Lyon returned.

When the two reached Seattle they were met by Mr. and Mrs. W. Avery, who took them overland to Vancouver in a 1910 Peerless car. The trip was enjoyable and the roads followed were better than those north of San Francisco.

Riding in the comfortable big Peerless the quartette visited some of the most interesting country in the West. They followed the route of the Hood's canal and then plunged into the wilds.

Deer, Chinese pheasants and grouse abounded and Lyon and Avery enjoyed excellent hunting. Game was plentiful and the two men shot an abundance of small game, but were unsuccessful when hunting deer. The larder was well supplied at all times, however, and venison was not a necessity, says Phil, who, though he had a chance to shoot a fine buck, scored a clean miss.

Through a well-watered country where natural roads make touring pleasant, the Peerless was driven and the party had no hard luck during the long trip. On returning to Seattle, the fair was visited and several weeks were passed seeing the sights.

In San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Lyon were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Harrison and again a Peerless car was brought into requisition for seeing the sights of the Bay City.

Before leaving San Francisco, Mrs. Lyon piloted a party consisting of H. O. Harrison and Mrs. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McCoy and Phil Lyon, to the Los Banos Gun Club. The men remained to shoot ducks and Mrs. Lyon and the women took the car back to San Francisco.

"This was the greatest trip I've ever taken," said Lyon yesterday. "We had a bully good time, every day. We saw plenty of country in the right way. You might say we almost lived in automobiles during our outing.

"Me for the automobile all the time. I don't want anything better than to get out of the big cities and into a big touring car. That is the way to enjoy the country and we certainly enjoyed our outing."

Trim Desert Driver.

W. D. Tremain, one of the best known desert drivers, came up from Needles last week. Tremain operates a Pope-Hartford in the stage service between Needles and Bouse and in 13,000 miles of desert running says he has never had a delay or missed a trip. This is a record to be proud of, as the going is not always the best. Tremain is an experienced desert driver and has made the run through to Phoenix once and to Los Angeles twice. No sand is too deep to frighten Tremain and he has some of the hardest trips possible to his credit. He sends his Hartford all over the desert country and says he has never found it lacking in power or stamina.

FRESH BLOOD AGAINST OLD.

DEALERS' ASSOCIATION DISCUSSES SHOW PLANS.

Little Chance for Reconsideration of Vote Taken—Proposition to Hold Local Exhibit—Established Dealers Cannot See Matter Like Newcomers.

With the proposition of an automobile show turned down at a largely attended meeting of the Automobile Dealers' Association, there is little prospect that a motor-car salon will be held this season. The association is divided against itself on the subject, and there is only the remotest chance of getting unanimous action favoring an exhibit.

Cost has not been considered. The association is richer than it has ever been before. With more than $2500 in the treasury, Secretary Conwell urged the members to consider the matter of an automobile show in a favorable light.

When the vote was taken the old dealers arrayed themselves against the youngsters who have lately joined the association. It was the old blood against the new, and the old won by a drop. The vote was so close that many have hopes of reconsidering it with a better showing for the exhibit. Another vote would undoubtedly result in a greater majority against the proposition.

New dealers have come into the association at the rate of two or three a month. There are now almost forty dealers in Los Angeles. There are about twenty-five active members in the association. This would mean one of the finest shows on the Pacific Coast could the exhibit be held.

Established dealers do not need a show to help them dispose of their goods, the new dealers would like a show to give them a chance to meet the public. The man who has labored from five to ten years to build up his business does not want to exhibit side by side with the man who has been in business only a few months.

Two propositions for a show were submitted to the dealers. One from Dick Ferris offered a show in the Hamburger building with all the refinement of last year's successful exhibit. Dick outlined a fairyland, which, if he had been allowed to have his way, would undoubtedly have been one of the finest motor-car salons ever held on the Coast. Ferris's show would have been given on a percentage basis.

HEMPEL'S PLANS.

Walter Hempel presented a proposition to erect a building and provide an exhibit at a cost which appeared reasonable. There would have been plenty of ground space. Hempel's proposition was favored by the committee, and a report returned accordingly. Then the whole proposition was dumped overboard.

Hempel is out the money he spent for architect fees, and Dick Ferris has had a brain-storm for nothing.

Norman Church, of the Stoddard-Dayton, lead the opposition. He was ably seconded by Leon T. Shettler, Ralph Hamlin, W. K. Cowan, and others. Earle C. Anthony also decided against a show.

Church is out for the established dealer. He says it is unfair to promote the interests of the man who has been in business only a few weeks at the expense of the man who has labored for years to build up the automobile industry. Church does not want a show. He says it is too late now, anyway, and that if the show is held at all it should be pulled off in October, when the new models begin to arrive.

Here is the argument of the new dealers, and it appears to be a fair contention. They say, "Give us a chance to show our goods." New cars are coming in every week. The automobile show would give the new men the opportunity they are seeking. A number have recently joined the association for the avowed purpose of exhibiting at an automobile show. The action of the dealers has denied them the chance to exhibit.

THOUSANDS OF REOS.

Reuben Shettler Says Factory Output Will Be Greater Than in Any Previous Year.

Fourteen thousand Reo cars are to be turned out this year by the Reo factory, according to Reuben Shettler, father of Leon T. Shettler, local Reo agent. Shettler Sr. has just returned from the Reo factory, where he had a chance to inspect the new four-cylinder car. It is to be a beauty from the description given by the Reo man. The output of the Reo factory is to be greater this coming year than ever before.

Finished with drop frame and with I beam axles, and with a 112-inch wheel base, the car looks classy. It will have three speeds forward and reverse, and will be capable of a speed of fifty-five miles an hour. The factory will turn out about 8000 of the classy models.

Shettler has one of the four-cylinder Reos made last year. The car was taken out for a demonstration Wednesday and the speedometer reached the fifty-five-mile mark. The car's speed was increased from fifteen to fifty-five miles in two blocks and the Reo swung around a difficult curve at thirty-five miles an hour. The car will hold the road at high speed and is light and easy riding.

It is this car that L. T. Shettler would like to enter in the Phoenix race. The motor is almost perfect. It is light running and has all the power that could be used on a desert road. It is impossible to get a 1910 model here in time, and Shettler Jr. is counting on the generosity of his father to help him out of a situation which may result in his being obliged to enter a Baby Reo. In case the four-cylinder is not available, however, a two-cylinder car, such as C. H. Bigelow drove last year, may be used.

PACKARD TRUCK COMING.

Western to Enter Commercial Vehicle Field With High-Priced Motor Van.

When the Packard truck, which is expected here this week, is unloaded, the Western Motor Car Company will begin a campaign which Earle C. Anthony, manager, believes will result in distributing hundreds of the commercial vehicles in Southern California. The big truck has been used successfully in the East and has made good in several places in the West.

The truck has all the refinements of the high-grade Packard car. It has been demonstrated in the field campaigns of the United States army and has made good by carrying a heavy machine gun. The truck is as fast, and perhaps faster, than any other commercial vehicle in the market.

The Western people will have a number of the big vans on exhibition in about ten days. The truck will be ideal, says Anthony, for carrying heavy loads of merchandise at speed. The car has a carrying capacity of several tons and is also equipped with a body which will lend itself to lighter loads, which can be piled high on the expansive floor.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Leon T. Shettler is to leave this week for San Francisco, where he goes expecting to see his Apperson "Jackrabbit" win the free-for-all in the Portola road races Saturday. Harris Hanshue will drive the car and Lee Gehricke will be mechanician.

C. F. Hatter of the Velie factory has returned to the East after passing two weeks in Los Angeles. Roger Stearns of the Standard Motor Car Company has signed with Hatter for another year's order of Velie cars.

Phil Lyon of Chanslor & Lyon is showing a unique gas lighter, with prestolite tank key attached. The lighter can be used in the wind or rain and will ignite gas lights handily. The safety looks good to the man who forgets his box of matches.

The following persons have purchased and taken delivery of Studebaker E.M.F. "thirty" cars in the last week: W. M. Bateman, San Diego; W. S. Dorman, Phoenix, Ariz.; Azusa Implement Company, Azusa; William F. Lutz Company (two cars,) Santa Ana; R. W. Hill, Los Angeles; C. E. Striffler, Alhambra; George S. Gay, Redlands; W. H. Sutch, Los Angeles; J. L. Warnocke, Redlands; Beebe-Weisel Company, Anaheim; A. L. Burson, Ventura. New G-7 touring cars were delivered to Irving Heilman and Walter J. Trask.

L. D. Meach shipped his Studebaker E.M.F. "thirty" out here from Illinois and is having the time of his life visiting different towns and cities in the southern part of the State. P. A. Lord is to leave Los Angeles for the Studebaker factories tomorrow night. September was the biggest month in the matter of sales and cars delivered ever experienced by the Studebaker company and it has no 1910 models to offer.

The Golden State garage reports the following deliveries of Palmer-Singer cars: A six-cylinder, sixty horse power top tonneau each to T. J. Fleming, Dr. West Hughes, A. H. Braly, Nat Myrick and I. W. Williams; also four-cylinder thirty horse power toy tonneau "Skimabouts," to E. B. Rivers and E. C. Westervelt.

A number of the Mitchell subagents were in the city last week for the purpose of showing the new Mitchell "thirty" to prospective customers. Among the visiting dealers were F. A. C. Drew of Ontario, Kenzie and Bellows of Long Beach, and Thomas and Krehbiel of Pomona.

Walter Seeley has accepted delivery of the Pope-Hartford roadster which won the Mt. Baldy road race. The car was shipped to San Francisco and will be used by Seeley during the Portola. After the week of festivities it will be driven back over the road home. The car has a bright red body, but as there was no hood other than that used in the race, it presents a very unique appearance.

Apperson Little Jack

I've sold a great many automobiles in Los Angeles and California during the past six or seven years. I've made good—or, rather, the cars have made good for me. "A live dealer will sell you a live car." Some pretty strong claims have been made in our advertisements, but we haven't had to take back anything—yet.

I want to say right here that the Apperson Little Jack is even better than it's cracked up to be. Ask any Apperson owner what he thinks of his car. I will be perfectly willing to take a back seat and let him do the talking.

The Apperson Little Jack has speed to burn, everybody knows that; but I want to impress upon you that this grand car is equally as good in everything else that goes to make the perfect, up-to-date motor car. Its construction is the best that brains and money can produce; it is reliable, durable, easy riding and luxurious; it is $5000 worth of automobile selling for $3000.

Suppose you drop around, see the Little Jack and let it perform for you.

STODDARD FOR PORTOLA.

Handsome New Cars to Be Here in About Ten Days—Church Promises Sensation.

The first fifty-horse power, seven-passenger Stoddard-Dayton touring car will reach here by express tomorrow. Two models are coming, one of which will be shipped at once to San Francisco, where it will be exhibited during Portola week. In addition to the big cars there will be two five-passenger cars. The fifty-horse power roadster will follow Tuesday. This will give the Stoddard-Dayton Company four of its new models for show purposes.

The new Stoddard is said by those who have seen it in the East to be one of the season's really handsome automobiles. It is larger in every particular than any other models of this make and is finished in the usual style of the Stoddard-Dayton.

The motor last year was forty-five-horse power and was rated as one of the speediest stock cars in the country. With an increased engine, which will easily develop fifty horsepower, the car should show a terrific speed and power.

Later in the season types of this model will be received with a limousine and landaulet body. These make handsome cars for winter weather, and are very popular in the East.

The local company will soon have all the Southern California subagencies contracted for. Contracts were closed last week with F. L. Austin, for Santa Ana; George W. Bisbee, for Pomona, and J. E. Olds, for Oxnard.

A carload of five-passenger Stoddards arrived Friday. Deliveries were made to I. N. Peyton and L. W. Gard[illegible].

P[illegible] SINGER AND SIMPLEX.

Fast[illegible] Cars Is Attracting Considerable Attention—Deliveries Are Now Assured.

With the possibility of a Palmer-Singer being entered in the Ascot Park race meet, October 30 and 31, against such cars as the Chadwick, Winton and others, interest in the fast machines is increased. The Golden State garage, agents for the Palmer-Singer and the Simplex, are preparing to enter the lists in earnest.

According to the agents the allotments of Palmer-Singer and Simplex cars is practically disposed of to date, and it is now only a question of deliveries. Cars are hard to get, and even when ordered by express they are slow in coming. Prompt deliveries have been promised the local agents.

The 1910 Palmer-Singer line is attractive. The concern built a big six-cylinder sixty-horse-power car, both of which carry bodies for from two to seven passengers. A complete line of limousines are being turned out this year. Victorias, landaulets and town cars are also being made in numbers.

The Simplex line comprises fifty, seventy and ninety-horse-power cars. The chassis are sent with these cars, and any body desired can be fitted to them. The Simplex is perhaps one of the fastest stock cars in America. It won the recent twenty-four-hour race at Brighton Beach.

Two of the handsomest cars of the season were received by the William R. Ruess Company last week. One was a Pope-Hartford touring car, which went to Oxnard. This model was finished in Robin's egg blue, with straw color running gear. The upholstery was black and the effect was very striking. Another car of the same type was finished in purple lake with cream running gear. Two striking roadsters are also to be seen on the floors, one in a bright red and another in French gray, with pearl-gray running gear. Six Pope-Hartfords were delivered last week.

Cass and Wieman Share the Individual Honors.

Occidental, 29; U.S.C. Law School, 0. Occidental found the law school easy in the second half of the football game at Fiesta park yesterday afternoon, after the Barristers had played the college men to a standstill in the first period. Three touchdowns, with one goal kicked and one field goal by Drury Wieman made the total.

Wieman's pretty goal from placement in the first ten minutes of the second half began the scoring, the other tallies following in increasingly rapid succession as the Law School weakened. Until the middle of the second half the play was very even, Occidental having a slight advantage only.

After the first touchdown had been made for the Tigers, putting the score 8 to 0, the Law School seemed to lose heart, allowing two more tallies before time was called. During the last minutes of the game the play was ragged on both sides, the players being too fagged to keep up their clean tackling, allowing runners to wriggle through for big gains. The Occidental men appeared to be in somewhat better condition, holding their end up longer than the Barristers.

Throughout the first period the ball zigzagged back and forth across the field, without coming dangerously near either goal line. Twice the Tiger team attempted goals frm placement, but each time the distance was so great that Wieman's tries fell short. The game turned into a punting duel between Drury Wieman and Selph, in which honors were about even. Selph's kicks did not have the power of Wieman's spirals, but the wind was against the Occidental punter.

EXCHANGE OF PUNTS.

In the second half, with the wind behind him, Wieman egan to gain distance with his exchanges. The Law School could not gain through the line or around the ends, so were forced to punt, allowing the Tiger team to increase its advantage. Finally a fumble gave Occidental the ball at midfield, and the backs worked the leather down the field thirty yards, before the Law School held. Wieman then kicked his field goal.

Immediately after Law School's kickoff, Rouse fumbled Wieman's punt on his own 50-yard line, Occidental again securing the oval. Steady gains with old-fashioned football worked the ball to within a few yards of the barristers' goal, where a stubborn defense was put up. A first down three yards out gave Occidental three more downs. On the final, E. Wieman was pushed across for the score. No goal was kicked.

After another kickoff, Wieman punted to Law School's 45-yard line, where the teams lined up. Selph's return punt was blocked by Fred Thomson, allowing Landreth to grab the leather and run to the five-yard line before he was downed from behind. Three bucks were necessary to put Landreth across for the third score.

One more tally was added to the string of the Law School's hard luck when Rouse again dropped one of Wieman's punts, just before the end of the game. Smart gathered in the leather and ran down the field for a third touchdown. E. Wieman kicked the goal, putting the score 29 to 0.

LOSE HEART.

The heart was taken out of the Law School team on the first touchdown, when, after the barristers' plucky stand, Occidental was granted a first down three yards out. As was shown when the game was over, this first down should not have been given; it was awarded as the result of a misunderstanding among the linesmen. The sticks were struck in when Occidental was just under 10 yards from the goal; finding his stick came in back of the goal line, one of the linesmen doubled back, thinking his mark no longer needed, and stuck his flag in three yards in front of the goal. By mistake this was taken for the end of the measure, and Rook awarded first down to Occidental.

Both weather and field were perfect for fast football. The crowd of about 1200 persons gave the first taste of the season of college football footing, keeping the air noisy with songs and yells. On the east side of the field the Occidental rooters had their band with them, giving them a little the better of the preliminary din-fest.

Between the halves some excitement was caused when four Law School rooters came into the Occidental rooting section by mistake and exchanged compliments with the Tigers. The law men got hot under the fire of chaff, signalled to their supporters across the field to come over, and for a moment it looked as though the two rooting sections would make matters interesting in a free-for-all. After a moment the cooler heads prevailed, however, and the Law School supporters returned to their side of the field without bloodshed.

LAW KICKS OFF.

The Law School kicked off at 3:10 o'clock, Wieman returning on the next play to midfield. For ten minutes neither side was able to secure any particular advantage. Occidental was able to pile up both the center bucks and end runs attempted by the Barristers, but could not gain quite enough ground to make their distance.

The first decided advantage came near the middle of the half, when Occidental made a steady march for 35 yards. The advance ended with Wieman's first try for goal, against the wind from the 45-yard line. The next advance came about ten minutes later, when Occidental was again able to gain steadily for the first three downs, ending again with a try for goal. There was spectacular playing during the half, Wieman's punting, DuBois's running in, and Selph's backfield work being the features. Cass played a splendid game for the Law School in the center of the line.

For Occidental Drury Wieman was the chief star, his boot being one of the main factors in the Tiger victory. DuBois made good gains with his dodging runs under punts, though marring his work with some bad fumbles. Landreth at tackle did very well, playing an even better game than Smart. Earnest Wieman put up a good game at full. The team attempted little forward passing, and put few onside kicks, relying mainly upon straight football.

For the Law School, Cass, in the line, put up the best game, playing through his opponents regularly, and piling up plays on either side of the line. During the latter part of the game he was badly fagged, finally being replaced by Warring. Cohn at quarter put up a spectacular game, his work being particularly noticeable. He was down the field with the ends under each punt, usually getting the runner by a pretty tackle. McGregor at half put up a good consistent game, while Selph was prominent on account of his good work with punting against Wieman. Selph also made several good run-ins of Wieman's punts. Declus did well at end.

SANTA ANA BLANKED.

POMONA OVERRUNS PROPS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Pomona defeated the Santa Ana High this afternoon by a score of 34 to 0. In the second half the 'varsity played especially good ball, running the High School boys off their feet. The spectacular play of the day was an 80-yard run by Shutt for touchdown in the last minute of play.

Santa Ana kicked off to Pomona in the first half, and after a few exchanges of punts, a forward pass to Parker put Pomona in striking distance of the goal. The rest of the half was rather slow, the college men seeming to lose aggressiveness.

Santa Ana put up a strong fight from start to finish in the second half, but the college had too many plays and too much weight. The on side kick and forward pass were used effectively by both sides throughout the game.

For the college Shutt played the most consistent game, Parker and Capt. Fuller were both stars at times, and Miller used his weight well in hitting the line.

QUAKERS LOSE AGAIN.

U.S.C. VICTOR AT WHITTIER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WHITTIER, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fighting the gamest defensive game ever seen on Hadley field, Whittier College was beaten by U.S.C. yesterday afternoon by a score of 22 to 2. It took twenty minutes for U.S.C. to buck over for the first touchdown.

Three times the Methodists got the ball within the Quaker 10-yard line and were held for downs. On the fourth attempt the 'varsity was able to push it over. Paulin failed to kick goal. Crites was substituted for N. W. Renneker at quarter and played a star game for the Quakers.

In the second half U.S.C. was able to score but once. The Quakers played the Methodists off their feet, making their distance time and again, only to lose the ball on bad fumbles.

A bad piece of headwork by Capt. Renneker and a poor punt from behind his own goal line was the immediate cause of two touchdowns. Renneker attempted to return a punt with two men almost upon him and it was successfully blocked, giving U.S.C. the ball on the Quakers' 7-yard line and they pushed it over the line in three straight bucks.

The U.S.C. back field worked well, but the Quakers' ends and tackles frequently got through and tackled them for a loss.

The local boys handled the forward pass in good shape, making yardage throughout the game. Crites's passing was very accurate and Green and White both made distance three times on the play.

Both Paulin and Declus outpunted big Renneker from ten to twenty yards on each exchange, and were able to keep the Quakers from scoring by punting out of danger several times during the last half.

RIVERSIDE WINS.

COMPTON FIGHTS HARD.

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By a score of 5 to 0 the Rugby team of Riverside High School won from Compton High School team this afternoon at Evans's Athletic Park. All of the scoring was done in the first half. In the second half the locals contented themselves with keeping the ball in Compton territory.

The game was close throughout, and fast. The Riverside team showed up much better than against the L. A. High aggregation at Fiesta Park a week ago, while Compton put up a much stronger game than against Harvard on that same date.

The only tally of the game came in the first half, after a long series of dribbling rushes, in which the ball was on the ground a good share of the time. In the second half Compton held Riverside even, assuming the initiative and carrying the ball into the green and white territory. The team was not quite strong enough to score, though getting the leather across the line for several misors.

For Riverside Rubidoux again put up the star game, while Cotter also played strong Rugby. Reynolds of the Compton team distinguished himself by his fast work. McGill did noticeably good work for Compton.

Tom Higgins, who refereed the game, said after the play that in point of speed it was the equal of any preparatory Rugby game played in the south this season.

WHITEWASH SAN DIEGO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Oct 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Playing true 'varsity style St. Vincent's eleven today overwhelmed San Diego High, the score being 29 to 0.

The punting interference and forward passing of St. Vincent's were excellent, the frequent use of the forward pass being responsible for the great gains. Roeder and Gage were the stars for the collegians. Neighbor's punting was a feature. He kicked all goals but one and kept the ball going forward by a series of punts which for lack of practice the San Dieg players invariably missed.

San Diego was woefully weak at quarter-back, Roeder's plunging through was spectacular

STATE SCHOOL WINS.

CLOSE GAME WITH THROOP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WHITTIER, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fighting hard all the way the cadets of the Whittier State School won from Throop Poly yesterday by the score of 2 to 0.

Flores, the crack little left half for the locals, kicked a field goal from the 35-yard line with only 21½ minutes left to play in the first half.

Kyle played his usual brilliant game at end, getting away for two long runs, one of 20 yards in the first half and one of 30 yards in the second.

McDonald and Smith played a good game for Poly, but the heavy backs of Throoop were unable to penetrate the State school's defense effectively.

L. A. HIGH VICTORS.

San Bernardino High Defeated in a Ragged Contest at Bovard Field. Geissler Is Star.

Los Angeles High, 11; San Bernardino High, 5.

With the score 5 to 3 against them at the end of the first half, the Los Angeles High Rugby team pulled past their opponents with two tries and a goal in the second period at Bovard field yesterday afternoon.

The game was ragged and rather slow. In the L. A. line-up there were several substitutes, McGuire at fullback being particularly missed. The men did not seem to get together well, and only in the second period did the L. A. High backs show their usual speed in passing.

San Bernardino also played snappier ball in the second half, but was unable to stop the L. A. High advance. Geissler and Barman both crossed the line for tries, Harrigan kicking one goal. Boyle made the L. A. tally in the first half.

The visitors' score in the first period came when Morgan kicked the ball up 25 yards from L. A.'s goal, after a good dribbling advance, and ran close to the goal, passing to Hodge, who made the tally.

Geissler played a good game, starring with Boyle. The L. A. scrum did not show up very brilliantly, allowing the lighter visiting team to hold them nearly even. During the last few minutes of the game the play was in L. A. High's territory, San Bernardino pressing the locals hard, but being unable to score.

BIG SQUAD OUT.

Large Number of Candidates Sign Up for Fall Baseball Practice at Stanford.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 14.—Sixty-two men have signed up for fall baseball practice. Only half this number turned out last fall. Many freshmen with good high school records are among the candidates, and the prospects for a strong team are much brighter than they were at the beginning of the term. The large turn-out was quite unexpected.

Charles Taliant, '10, of Santa Barbara, and Robert McFadden, '10, of Fullerton, substitutes on last year's 'varsity nine, have been given temporary charge of the squad. The men have been divided into two groups. Practices will be held twice a week until about the first of December. Coach Presley will assume charge of the squad after the intercollegiate football game.

HOW TO PLAY GAME OF WHICH HAS BEEN

Americans are well acquainted soccer football, or association, as game used to be called. But with exception of Rugby by the Pacific colleges, soccer, the oldest and most of the English football games, gradually been coming into more season.

England soccer is not only called most scientific of the football but excites the greatest amount interest. Where record Rugby games go beyond any American attendance, with 40,000, 50,000, and even spectators at a championship and the biggest soccer matches have been attended by crowds of more than 100,000, the record attendance being more than 125,000.

description of the game here is taken from notes and explanations furnished by three well-known players of the real "foot"-ball—Joseph Gorfunkle, A., W. Milford and Higgins. These men are old at the game, having played for both in this country and abroad. Gorfunkle was a member of the great team of Belfast, and has been known locally as a leader of the game.

NO HANDLING.

greatest distinguishing feature soccer and the other games

football is that in soccer the ball must be touched with the hands or arms. It must be kicked or butted with the feet or other parts of the body, excepting the arms below the elbows. The goalkeepers alone are an exception to this rule; they are allowed to touch or carry the ball with their hands, though not being allowed to take more than three steps before throwing it.

Eleven men constitute a soccer team. There are five forwards, named inside right, inside left and outside right and left. The two outsiders are also called wings. Behind the forwards are five defensive backs and the goalkeeper. The backs are divided into a line of three half-backs (center half, right and left-halves) and two full-backs, right and left. The goalkeeper stands just before, or in front of, the goal.

The field is like that used in Rugby, but differently marked. The goals are eight feet wide, with a bar eight feet above the ground. The method of scoring when the ball goes above the bar, the soccer tally, or a single point, is made when the ball passes, under the bar, between the uprights. As the play around the goals is usually fast and free and follow, it is customary to hang a net at the back of the goal, which catches the ball whenever a score is made.

When the ball crosses the goal line back of the goal posts, if kicked out by a defending team, it is put in the field for what is known as a corner kick; a player of the attacking team kicks it from this spot to the goal. Sometimes, assembled in the most curious positions. The play is shown in the last diagram and explained. No. 4. When the ball goes over the goal line outside of the posts, kicked by the attacking team, it is put into play again by being kicked by the defenders from a point 25 yards in front of the goal.

OPPOSITE SIDE.

When a ball goes over the side lines, it is put into play by one of the players opposing the teams that sent it out, usually one of the half-backs. He stands with his feet together, facing the line at the side of the field, throws the ball into the field with both hands over his head. The throw may be made in any direction. Unlike Rugby, the ball does not go to touch and in soccer it is a poor play, as it is not a good gain, to send it out. In this respect the game is similar to basketball.

The most difficult matter for the player unacquainted with the game to understand is the question of off-side play. In Rugby, forward passes are permitted through all the central part of the field; but this is only when the defensive men remain behind the attacking player and the ball.

As stated, the on-side rule is: to be on side a player must have three men in front of him, unless he is behind the ball on a backward pass. Subject to this, a player is of course off-side when there are not three players between him and the goal. If he is off-side he is put out of play by an opponent.

When an attacking forward dribbles the ball up to an opposing full-back, he is off-side if he receives a pass from a player on either side of the field, ahead of him; if from a corner kick, he is off-side whether or not there are three players between him and the goal. If the goal-keeper stops the ball and the attacking forward is on side, he may make another try for goal, if a player stands with only one player ahead of him—which is very close to the goal he is said to be "in touch" and cannot receive a forward pass from a teammate. On a forward pass from a player on either side. Diagrams 6 and 7 show this.

The word "pass" is never made use of in soccer by hands or arms, and yet must be done as it can readily be seen why it requires more practice than any of the other football games.

Soccer work for years before the game was introduced in this most difficult point. A good forward must be able to send the ball accurately, and possibly with his head, to a player on the field within a radius of forty yards; he must practice

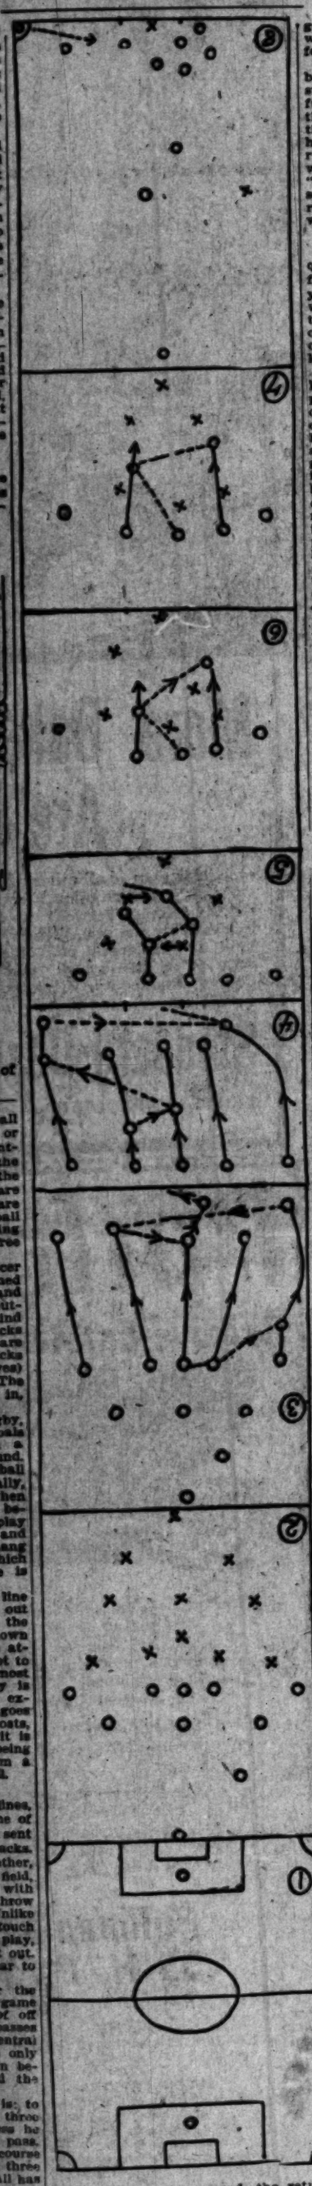
...Second, as not infre- ...quently a return a pass, ...the ball is on the ground, the return kick may not be difficult; but if the leather is traveling through the air, it must be stopped and laid dead on the ground before an accurate return can be made—unless the player happens to be in a position to return the ball with quently happens.



The positions on the team require material that is almost the exact reverse of that wanted for Rugby. The light, fast, tricky men play forward, while the heavy men are put into the back positions. The center forward is usually the headiest man on the field, as his position puts him strategically where the plays must be directed. He must be a tricky dribbler, and an accurate shot for goal, as his position in the attacking center throws most of the tries for goal to him. His two inSides, at the right and left, are usually men of the same type, and must also be essentially clever with their feet.

The outsides, or wings, are the fastest men of the team. Receiving the ball from the center or the insides, their play is usually a fast dribble down the field close to the side lines, to a location favorable for a cross pass back to the center forwards. Frequently the ball is carried by a wing to the extreme corner of the field before a pass is made back across the goal to the center, or opposite inside, who is thus on-side and can shoot for goal.

The half-backs are fast and must be good defensive players. They constitute the first line of defense. The full-backs are usually still heavier than the halves, and are picked for their booting ability as well. The half or full-backs' play is usually to run toward the attacking forward with the ball, and if possible "smother" his attempted kick or pass, securing the leather himself for a long return down the field to his own forwards.

LONG KICKS.

A good full-back will not infrequently hoist the ball back down the field for sixty to even seventy-five yards, carrying the play with one shot well into the opponents' territory. As the soccer ball is round instead of oval, a kick can always be made without any preliminary turning of the leather.

The goal keeper has a position much like that of the goal in hockey or ice polo. His business is to keep the ball out of that goal, no matter where it comes from or how fast. His eye must be good, to estimate speed and angles accurately, and he must be fast in getting to the place where the ball is coming. The goal-keeper is apt to be chosen from among the larger candidates, as a tall player has better reach, and so better chance for blocking shots; but a small, very active player is not seldom an effective goal-keeper.

Although there is more emphasis laid upon individual ability than in the other football games, team work is essential. The essence of good team play in soccer lies in each player understanding his team mates, and so being able to estimate what each will do in the circumstances. A player has to divine at all moments of the play just where the ball will travel next, so that he may be at the right spot to carry on a play or stop a rush. If on the kickoff the center boots to the left inside, both the right inside and the left wing have to know where the next kick will go, and be in position to receive the ball and carry the play along.

PRETTY ROUGH.

There is on the whole more roughness in the game than in Rugby, chiefly because of the "shouldering" that is permitted against the man with the ball. Here is where the weight of the backs comes in; a heavy back is often able to shoulder the advancing forward away from the ball, leaving the leather clear for a return punt by the other full.

Figure 1 shows the markings of the association field. The oval in the center is used only in the kick-off. On that play the defensive forwards are not allowed within this line. In each corner of the field, which is marked at the four corners by flags, is marked the space from within which the corner kicks are made. The line eighteen yards in front of the goal is called the penalty line; if any infringement of the rules occurs within this line, a penalty kick is awarded, the ball being placed directly in front of the goal, 12 yards out, at the position marked in the diagram. On a penalty kick all players except the defensive goal keeper and the one opponent making the kick must stand outside the penalty line. The line six yards in front of the goal is used after the ball has been kicked over the goal line by the opponents, without a score. It is brought into play by being kicked from this line by a defensive back.

Figure 2 gives the line-up on the kick-off. The ball is placed at the center of the field, but instead of a long kick the center forward merely passes to one of his men close at hand, to one of the insides, or possibly across to a wing. Behind the five forwards stand the three half-backs, and behind them again the two full-backs. The goal keeper stands directly in front of the goal, or on the line. The offensive forwards stand close to midfield, while the defensive team must keep outside the marked circle.

PASSING RUSH.

In figure 3 can be seen a possible passing rush, by a good team. In order better to illustrate the manner of advancing the ball, only one team is drawn in the diagram. The center passes to his inside right, as shown by the dotted line; the inside passes in turn to the outside or wing, who dribbles the ball down the side lines well into his opponents' territory; after the successful dribble, the wing kicks across to the inside left, who has come down the field on the play; as a try for goal is so apt to be blocked, the inside left passes back to the center, usually the best shot on the team, who makes the try for a goal after a last short dribbling advance. This play is a very common formation, the dribbling down the side lines being particularly characteristic of the soccer game.

Figure 4 shows another successful advance of a similar nature, in which both wings figure prominently. At the beginning of the play the ball is with the inside left, who passes to his center after a short dribble; the center boots across to the left wing, who has run forward to receive the play, and after another short dribble he boots back from close to the corner to the right wing, who makes the shot for goal.

Figure 5 illustrates one of the most important features of a successful advance, the matter of drawing the defensive backs in, to give the wings of the offense a clear field. In this diagram the five advancing forwards are shown, and the five defensive backs opposing them. The inside left has the ball, which he dribbles until the center half is forced toward him to check the advance; he then crosses to his center, who has been left unguarded by the drawing the center half aside; the center forward keeps the ball until he has drawn in the right full-back, and then crosses again to the unguarded left inside. The latter is behind the ball when the kick is made, and so is on side, coming up fast to receive the pass and make the shot.

OFFSIDE PLAYS.

Figures 6 and 7 illustrate the most intricate of the soccer regulations, the off side and on side. In No. 6, where the center has passed to the inside left, the latter passes forward to the inside right. As the inside right has only two opponents between himself and the goal, he is off side on deceiving the pass forward. In figure 7 the facts are just reversed, and the same player is on side, because theer are still three players between himself and the goal.

Figure 8 illustrates a corner kick, made after the defense has taken the ball across its own line. The ball is placed at the extreme corner of the field, and kicked out by one of the attacking players, to his team mates, who cluster about the goal, waiting for a chance to score. As the pass must necessarily be backward, all the players are on side. All the attacking team is shown, all the players except the goal keeper, and one full-back having come down the field for play.

Only two of the defensive team are shown, the goal-keeper in position and one forward, who usually plays well down the field to receive a long kick, if the defense is successful in getting the ball away. All the other players of the defense are usually massed close in about the goal on the play, just in front of their goal-keeper.

Last Year's Sensation—This Year's Standard

There Will Be No "1910 Model" STUDEBAKER E-M-F "30"

EVERY YEAR, JUST ABOUT THIS TIME the newspapers are full of startling announcements of new models. This year it's "Our World-beating '1910' Models." Last October it was "Our World-beating '1909' Model." If you read one you have read them all—they are all alike in that they protest the later model is a wonder, while tacitly admitting that its predecessor was about the worst that ever happened.

THE IMPRESSION LEFT IN YOUR MIND is that you were a sucker to buy a car from that maker last year. He promised you life-long service from it—now he proclaims it obsolete. Under a thin disguise he confesses he buncoed you, offers no redress, and makes your car, only a few months old, practically worthless in the second-hand market, where you had hoped to sell it for at least a fraction of the price you paid him.

YEAR AFTER YEAR THE SAME PROMISES are made by the same makers—and year after year they are compelled to admit between the lines, that their promises have not been fulfilled. Look up your old files, read the "ads" of 1909, 1907, and on back to their beginning. You'll be surprised—and disgusted—at the similarity. All agree in admitting past failures and in predicting future success. Reminds one of nothing so much as a cornered—and therefore penitent—confidence man, who unblushingly confesses past offenses, but protests he will do better in the future—if given another chance.

WE'D HATE TO HAVE TO ADMIT that our engineering force of a few months ago was so deficient in the science of designing and making motor cars—our product of the past twelve months so defective—that radical changes were necessary to produce a salable car!

STUDEBAKERS WOULD HIDE THEIR HEADS in shame if called upon to confess they had sold to a confiding, trusting customer, cars that, one year—or five years—later had to be branded and by the maker, a failure and openly discredited by another model differing in many important features.

WOULDN'T THAT BE EVIDENCE of rank incompetence—some might say bad faith? Wouldn't it indicate that promises made had not been fulfilled? Aud wouldn't it prove to a reasoning man that promises now made would be as worthless?

DON'T MISUNDERSTAND US; Of course improvements will be made from time to time, constantly, in automobile building as in every other department of human endeavor as long as the world lasts. The perfect car will never arrive. But only where the engineering force was woefully deficient in the fundamentals of the art will radical changes be necessary.

IF YOU BUY AN AUTOMOBILE from a hair-brained inventor or an unscientific experimenter because some new-fangled idea of his caught your eye, you have surely no right to expect satisfactory service. You pay for the privilege of trying out his theories—and you get all you deserve.

STUDEBAKERS HAVEN'T THAT KIND of an engineering force. Won't tolerate an inventor in the place. Inventors are mostly folks who think they've found something that wasn't lost. Scientists had it filed away, ready when wanted—out of the way of foolish folk who don't always know how to apply simple principles. Burn their own fingers and other peoples' money.

A CHINAMAN ONCE SAID to an Occidental who criticised his garb: "Yes, I suppose my clothes do look queer to you—they are not like yours. Yours look funnier to me—yes—beg pardon. But had you considered that my mode of dress is the result of more centuries of experience and of observation than your race can trace its history back? I suppose thousands of years ago my countrymen made a light suit do for summer and a heavy one for winter regardless of intermediate variations in the weather. Now we put on several light coats—or few—and we add to or take off as the weather changes. I see you are still experimenting—yes—beg pardon."

LIKE THE WISE ORIENTAL—and Chinese are proverbially honest too—Studebakers did all their experimenting years before they thought of offering the first automobile to the public. Sent their engineers to Europe and scoured the world for talent. Not satisfied with the results, they decided that no engineer, no factory, could successfully manufacture more than one model—a car so good it would outclass any other car of its own type and at its own price.

WALTER E. FLANDERS we considered the greatest manufacturing producer in the automobile industry, by long odds. Had our eyes on him for years. When he began the manufacture of E-M-F "30," Studebakers watched him closer than ever. Here was the car for which we had been looking to fill out our line—the car which, best suited to the needs of the greater number of buyers who want a serviceable, economical touring car, would be most in demand and have the longest life.

STUDEBAKERS STILL CAUTIOUS—couldn't afford to lend their name to any but a product of sterling quality—purchased half the output of the factory—and watched. Not only our own experts, but 6,000 buyers, put these cars to the most grueling tests. And we were satisfied—well enough satisfied to invest millions in this car and its future.

BOUGHT OUT FLANDERS ASSOCIATES—so that this man and his genius and his unequaled organization would be available to Studebakers alone and that we might control the entire output of this car which we believe has no equal in its class.

RESULTS HAVE BEEN MOST GRATIFYING. No other car has made such a record of satisfaction in owners' hands—they are unanimously enthusiastic. Every owner brings ten prospects.

SEPTEMBER WAS LARGEST MONTH in our history. October orders from dealers fifty per cent. in excess of possible output. November, ditto. December we hope to more nearly approach the demand by increased factory facilities that will then be available. It's been a wonderful year for Studebakers and E-M-F "30."

E-M-F "30" WAS IN ADVANCE of its time—two years at least. That it was, is proven by the fact that all the "1910" models now being so loudly touted, are, as nearly as a copyist can copy, imitations—outwardly at least—of E-M-F "30."

BUT WHAT ASSURANCE HAVE YOU that these new models—radically different from their immediate predecessors—are any better than those their makers now admit were wrong? Is there any other car of this class that has been perfected, standardized to the point where its makers believe it cannot be materially improved and customers can absolutely rely on it? Does not Studebaker E-M-F "30" stand alone in this regard?

FOR EXAMPLE: If a certain designer, a year ago, in frantic efforts to discredit the tremendous efficiency of E-M-F "30" motor, with its large valves, advocated small valves; and if that same designer now, by putting larger valves in his "1910" model, has admitted his error; does it not stand to reason that he is still at fault in those several other features where his car differs from the successful, satisfactory, unchanging E-M-F "30."

AND IF ANOTHER RIVAL MAKER believed and protested, for years, that a two-cylinder motor was just as good—as economical, as flexible—as a four; and if that maker in an effort to compete with E-M-F "30" now turns to fours—is there any good reason to suppose he has, in so short a time, learned to design a motor of the type to which he was so recently a convert?

THE HISTORY OF THIS INDUSTRY does not record a single instance in which a designer turned from a horizontal "two" to a vertical "four" and produced anything but an abortion in his first year's model.

IT HAS NEVER BEEN NECESSARY to advertise that E-M-F "30" has been "improved" in any detail in order to create a demand for the product. It has always been in excess of the supply. Of course changes have and will be made. Sometimes they'll be improvements——more often not. Mostly they'll be in the interests of simplifying or faciliating manufacture, because some designers and some customers differ in matters of taste and preference.

HERE'S A CASE IN POINT: A few weeks ago E-M-F "30's" began to come through with "dropped" front axles. Formerly had been straight. Straight axle is lighter and stiffer—better. But convention said a front axle ought to be curved—looked better. Didn't make a penny's difference in cost; difference in strength so small it couldn't be computed; pleased customers—so it went.

MORE RECENTLY A "U" DOOR was substituted for the previous design in the tonneau. Just a case of change in style of ladies' hats. Was the latest thing in doors—why shouldn't E-M-F "30," the most up-to-date car there is, have it? Sure.

THEN AGAIN, THE CLUTCH—One of the smoothest, most efficient ever put in any car; had proven a trifle too sensitive of adjustment for lazy owners. Those who had the knack got splendid results. Those who couldn't or wouldn't bother trying—didn't. Result was bad for the gears—also the motor. So a slight change in design was made, so it isn't so sensitive now. For our own use, we'd rather have it the original way, but we don't drive 'em all.

COMPARE THESE TRIFLING ALTERATIONS—You can't really call them improvements—with those vital changes other makers are announcing in their season models. Then decide which car is safest for you to put your money in—even if values were equal, which they are not.

FACT IS E-M-F HAS SET A PACE others find it impossible to follow—a pace in quality and price—in every-day serviceability and all-around efficiency.

PERHAPS E-M-F "30's" GREATEST RECORD of satisfaction has been in the matter of tires. Undoubtedly this car is the most economical on tires of any car in its class. Other cars selling for $1250 to $1500 weight 500 to 750 pounds more. These are too heavy for standard 32x3½-inch tires—that's why some of them are now forced to put on "bastard-size" tires. Doesn't benefit the buyer any—only obligates him to pay more for the replacements. All tire makers agree it would be unjust to users to put heavier or larger tires on E-M-F "30." She's over tired now—according to her actual weight and tire makers' tables.

IS E-M-F "30" TOO LIGHT? is the natural question after reading the above. The answer is in her wonderful record of performances in hands of over 6000 owners and in several special tests—Pathfinding for Glidden Tour, Pilot in Glidden, Munsey Reliability Run, and a hundred others.

ARE COMPETING CARS TOO HEAVY? The answer again is in their records—all announcing "Improved '1910' Models." Out of their own mouths are they not convicted? Ask owners about tire consumption—remember the owner "pays the freight" over every mile he drives, on every pound of unnecessary weight put there by the maker in his willingness to stint and save cost on materials. Anybody can make a heavy car—only first-class designers can make light ones.

JUST A FEW WORDS MORE: You are in the market for a car—else you wouldn't have read this far. Perhaps you're one of those who have been unable to get an E-M-F "30"—oversold all season. Wish we could promise quicker deliveries—can't. Won't lie about it, so can't. Fifty cars every working day coming out now, but demand increasing faster than we can add buildings and equipment. Another million now being spent in additions. But we can't make all the cars in the world. And E-M-F "30" is first choice of well posted buyers.

YOU SIMPLY CAN'T GET E-M-F "30s" the day you order them. Your local dealer may, if he happens to have a carload en route, or another customer who'll sell you his place in the line and wait, be able to accommodate you—but that's the exception. Generally you'll have to wait two or three weeks—maybe more. After New Years it'll be 90 to 120 days, same as always before. Only way is to get the order in now—get a place in the line and get your car as soon as possible—so you can enjoy its comforts in winter as well as its pleasure in Spring and Summer.

WE FEEL LIKE APOLOGIZING—to ourselves—for this "ad" which seems so unnecessary under the conditions. But we felt we owed it to our friends to explain the Studebaker policy, which is not like others, and to assure you there's no use waiting for a "1910" model, for we don't make cars that way. Changes are made the minute the necessity arises—don't wait till the end of the year. Don't make "season" models—don't make the kind of car we have to be ashamed of regularly once a year. Proud of E-M-F "30" all the time. And the one we sell you will be just as good as the one we sold your neighbor a year ago—if it isn't, you know there's a Studebaker guarantee back of it to make it so.

BREAK EVEN.

HAMMER BUSH HEAVER HARD.

Locals Lose Slugging Game to Senators.

Fitzgerald and Butler Are Rendered in Second.

Twenty-three Hits Made in the First Game.

Sacramento, 4; Los Angeles, 5. First game.

Los Angeles, 7; Sacramento, 1. Second game, seven innings.

Dillon tried his new bush pitcher, Delhi, on the Senators yesterday in the first game of a double-header and he was rapped all over the lot in the sixth inning for two singles, and three doubles, and with the assistance of Jud Smith's awful throw over first base, these made five runs for the visitors. But for this unfortunate spasm the locals might have won both games, for they took the second rather easily.

The first game was a slugging affair with its twenty-three hits, while the second contest was featured principally by the ousting of both Fitzgerals and Butler, the heavers who started the game. In the fifth inning Fitzgerald objected strongly to a decision that McGreevy gave on a strike with Butler at bat, and Mac heaved Fitzgerald out of the game. This flinger kept on talking and was fined $5 and as he continued his sermon, McGreevy threw him off the field.

Butler did fine work for the locals up to the sixth inning, allowing but one hit in the first inning; but in the sixth, with two out, he wrenched his side in pitching and had to retire from the game. Koestner took his place and did well until the seventh, when two singles and two bases on balls forced in a run. The first one came from a double and two sacrifices.

In the first for the locals, with two out, Ross doubled to right, ran to third on Beall's pop hit back of second base and scored when La Longe let Gandil's throw to the plate get away from him. Two singles, a steal, a run and Doyle's shuff of Toser's fly back of second base scored two runs in the second and the locals could not spike the rubber after that.

The first game was enlivened principally by the hard batting, there being no less than six doubles in the twenty-three swats. Beall of the Angels and pitcher Schman for the Senators were the only players not getting a hit, while Darringer, Myers, Flanagan, Doyle, Godwin, Ross and Delmas each made two.

The unfortunate feature of this game happened in the first inning when Daley, who had singled to left and stole second, was spiked by Darringer in trying to steal third. One of the toes on his right foot was gashed in stabbing into third base and he had to retire from the game. Ross moved over into center from right field and Toser was sent into right. One of the pleasing things was the appearance of Dillon in the last of the ninth inning to bat for Delhi and Cap was warmly applauded, having been sadly missed the last month.

Two of the good things were Myers' high jumping left handed catch of Darringer's high throw in the sixth inning of the second game and Darringer's pretty stop of Bush Smith's grounder in the fifth inning. The second game went but seven innings by agreement.

In the first game an error, a sacrifice, an out and a hit made the Senators' first run and two doubles, two singles, an error and a pass the next five in one inning. For the locals a double, single and an out made the first run; two singles, a steal and a sacrifice the second; two doubles and a single the next two and a double and a single the final one.

TROLLEY LEAGUE.

SCHEDULE CLOSES SUNDAY.

Final games of the Trolley League are to be played next Sunday. The McCormicks will finish their schedule with today's contest against Pasadena at Vernon. If the Giants succeed in downing Santa Ana, and the McCormicks win from Pasadena, the pennant will go to the Irish aggregation.

The Giants have a fine chance to win their game from Santa Ana, as they will be strengthened by a number of players from the Occidental team of Salt Lake.

Fernandes will umpire the game at Santa Ana, and "Red" Taylor will handle the indicator in the McCormick-Pasadena game, which will be played at 2:20 o'clock.

Batteries—Cowley, Clark and Weisel for McCormicks, and Myers and Wacob for Pasadena.

Coleman and Meats will compose the Santa Ana battery, and Hinkle and Allen will work for the Giants.

Pat Hardest of Chicago will be tried out in the box by Manager McCormick Sunday.

The National Bloomer Girls' baseball team will meet the Santa Ana club in the second game of a double-header at Santa Ana this afternoon.

Cap. Dillon plucking a highball.

THE STRING-HALT KID.

DILLON LEARNED TO KICK IN HIS BUSH LEAGUE DAYS.

DO YOU know the one player in the league who works the umpires and the opposing team in every game he is in and gets away with it?

If you are not smart enough to guess who this bird is, just take a good long look at Frank Dillon the next time you see him on the first bag for the Los Angeles team.

He is the one man who takes his foot off the bag and catches the ball thrown to him before the runner gets there, and the hundreds of fans who have watched him in dozens of games and have seen him take his paw off the bag wonder how much longer the poor ump will stand for it. Possibly Dillon does not do this, but he has to show about a thousand fans in this town, for he has fobled them for several years. He is the real high stepper.

Aside from this he is about the only real ball player in the country who would rather lose a game than have a horse kick his head off, and he showed this when he was playing the outfield for the Rockford, Ill., team about thirteen years ago. A ball was hit to the outfield and it rolled under a horse which was standing in center field watching the game. When Dillon tried to get the ball the horse kicked at him repeatedly, and as Frank was unable to get the pill, the batsman scored and won the game.

Dillon seemed to take a lesson from that nag, for he has been kicking ever since. He has not been at it very long, however, for, he says, he is but 35 years old, having been born in Normal, Ill. He began his professional career as a pitcher for the Peoria team in 1894, but did not play much ball the following year. In 1896-7 he was in the outfield for the Rockford team, but did not play the game in 1898. In 1899 he began the season as the first baseman for the Scranton team, but on July 4 of that year was sold to the Buffalo team, and several months later was sold to the Pittsburgh club. Detroit got him in the spring of 1900, and he remained there until the latter part of 1902. He came to Los Angeles the winter following, and has been with the local team as captain and then as manager, with the exception of 1904, when he played with the Brooklyn team of the National League.

You have to hand it to him for being the wise old fox, for his wiseness in securing good young ball players has helped the Los Angeles team with three pennants in the last six years. His poor success this year has been largely due to the crippled condition of his team, and even he has been out of the game some weeks on account of a sprained ankle.

No one has a better knowledge of inside baseball than has Dillon, for fourteen years in the game should teach a man something.

However, his years have not taught him to keep his foot on the bag until he gets the ball in his hands, and if you do not believe it, just watch him if he plays first base again this season.

SLAUGHTER GETS MOON.

Stearns Agent Adds to His Line Cars Which Have Made Good in Eastern Field.

Coney C. Slaughter has secured the agency for Moon cars. This fine line of automobiles, which has never been represented here, will be handled by the Stearns Motor Car Company and the demonstrator should be here within a few weeks. Slaughter expects to dispose of about fifty cars.

The moon factory has promised the local dealer steady shipments when the cars begin to arrive. Slaughter expects to get busy with the Moon at once. The line is attractive and the car should make a name for itself.

The Moon is a car that has shown its class in hill climbs and motor meets. It is fast and has an abundance of power. It comes in runabout, tourabout, roadster and touring car models, which are attractive and stylish.

"There is a demand for cars this year," said Slaughter, "and I believe the demand is for a car built on the lines of the Moon. It will make good here in Southern California, I'm sure, because it is fast, powerful and stylish. The Moon has made good everywhere else and I see no reason why it should not make a hit here.

"This is the car I've long desired to get. Now that I have the agency the factory has promised me steady deliveries."

Poly Wins at Redlands.

REDLANDS, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Los Angeles Polytechnic High School beat the Redlands High fifteen at Rugby football here this afternoon, 8 to 3. The game was bitterly fought. Polytechnic's two tries resulting from the superior weight and aggressiveness of the visiting team. As the Polytechnic team defeated the strong Pomona fifteen

Hudson's 'Half Moon' Hudson Twenty

EQUIPMENT—Five lamps, generator, tools and horn, f.o.b. Los Angeles.... $1050

$900

"Look for the Triangle on the Radiator."

The Hudson Achievement of 1609

The Hudson "Twenty" is big in design, in looks, in material, in performance, in general all 'round value. The only thing small about it is the price.

It has a 100-inch wheel base, 32-inch wheels of the long artillery type, large radiator, big hood, staunch, rigid made frame.

It is a roomy car. One can ride all day in it without being cramped. Any more room would simply be waste of space. Its strong three-quarter elliptic springs and long wheel base take away all ordinary shocks of the road. It cradles its passengers over the rough places.

The Men Responsible for the Hudson Achievement of 1909

J. A. Hudson, President—Mr. Hudson is owner of the biggest department store in Detroit. He is a large owner of Detroit real estate. He is president of the Dime Savings Bank and a director of the American Exchange National Bank. He is recognized as a leading, conservative business man of Detroit.

H. E. Chalmers, Vice-President—Mr. Chalmers is president of the Chalmers-Detroit Motor Company. Before buying a large interest in a motor car company he was the head salesman for many years with the Thomas B. Jeffery Company, builders of the Rambler car. He was formerly vice-president and general manager of the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, O.

A. B. Jackson, Treasurer and General Manager—Mr. Jackson is a mechanical engineer, being a graduate of the engineering department of the University of Michigan. He was factory manager of the Olds Motor Works from 1901 to 1904, and is the author of several very valuable automobile articles.

H. B. Chapin, Secretary—Mr. Chapin is treasurer and general manager of the Chalmers-Detroit Motor Company. His experience in the automobile business covers a period of many years. He was formerly sales manager for the Olds Motor Works.

Howard W. Dunham, Chief Engineer and Designer—Mr. Dunham is a graduate of Cornell University and Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute. He was chief engineer of the Locomobile Company from 1901 to 1904. In the latter car he was associated with the Olds Motor Works. He was chief engineer of the Olds Motor Works from early in 1907 until March 1st, 1909.

H. E. Coffin, Member of Board of Directors—Mr. Coffin is vice-president of the Chalmers-Detroit Motor Company. Prior to producing an automobile he was a successful manufacturer of high grade horse-drawn vehicles for years. Among them the Oldsmobile and the Locomobile "Forty" and "Thirty."

The Hudson Achievement of 1909

The Hudson Twenty is not an Imitation of a Big Car—It is a Big Car

Here is a car that satisfies the taste for beauty—the beauty that enhances service. It is big and racy-looking. Note the graceful lines—the sweep of the fenders and the frame. There is no car with better lines. Judged by every mechanical and engineering standard this car is thoroughly up-to-date without embodying any experimental features.

The Hudson "Twenty" is the first low-priced car which embodies all the best features of the standard high-priced machines.

Wonderful Sales Record

Five days after the Hudson "Twenty" was announced to the trade, dealers asked for 1,452 cars by wire. The entire year's output was contracted by dealers before the factory had a demonstrator ready. This is overwhelming evidence of what experts thought of the Hudson "Twenty". These cars were bought by dealers—men who know—men who must invest their money and reputation in them. These dealers knew that for the first time a car on which they could stake their reputation as judges of value was being built to sell for less than $1,000.00—a car free from every objection heretofore raised against cars selling at or near the price. They knew that the integrity and reputation of the personnel of the Hudson Motor Car Company was such as to back up every claim made for the car.

Selective, Sliding Gear Transmission

The Hudson "Twenty" has a sliding gear transmission, selective type, three speeds forward and reverse, such as you find on the Packard, Peerless, Pierce, Lozier and other high-grade cars. Most other low-priced cars do not have this type of transmission.

Four Cylinder Motor

The motor is vertical, four cylinder, four cycle, water cooled, known as the Renault type, 3⅝ in. bore, and 4½ in. stroke. And Renault motors are the pride of France.

Single Piece I-Beam Axle

The front axle is a one-piece drop-forged I-beam section, of the best grade of open hearth steel, carefully heat treated. The Peerless, Pierce, Matheson, Lozier and other high-grade cars use drop-forged front axles. The rear axle is of the semi-floating type, shaft driven, proved out by a score of makers.

Three-Quarter Elliptic Rear Springs

There is more rake to the steering post than is found on the average car.

The springs are of special steel, semi-elliptic in front, and three-quarter elliptic in the rear, such as you find in the Renault, Chalmers-Detroit, Pierce and others.

Lubrication is of the pump circulated, constant splash system, which has proved so satisfactory on the Oldsmobile, Chalmers-Detroit, and other highly successful cars.

The tires are 32x3 ins. in front and 32x3½ ins. in the rear. The crank shaft has a tensile strength of 100,000 pounds; the clutch is leather faced, cone type; the clearance is 13½ inches under the steering knuckles.

A Licensed Car

The "Twenty" has been recognized by the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. It is the only four cylinder licensed car selling for less than $1,000.

The Hudson "Twenty" is making good in use. Dealers and private owners have been using them for two months and they are giving entire satisfaction.

Won Twenty-Four-Hour Race

On September tenth at the Alaska-Yukon Exposition the "Twenty" won the 24 hour race open to all types of cars. It covered 706 miles in eighteen actual running hours (5½ hours being lost through tire trouble) and defeated the nearest competitor by nearly 100 miles.

The Hudson was the lowest priced car in the race and bested some cars costing five times as much.

Mr. Dunham, our designer, drove a "Twenty" from Indianapolis, Ind., to Detroit via Dayton, Ohio, and Toledo—a distance of 282 miles—in seventeen hours of elapsed time, leaving Indianapolis at 2 a. m., reaching Detroit at 9 p. m. the same day. And he did it without replenishing water, oil or gasoline.

These are endurance tests. They tried the car to the utmost. Yet no weakness has developed.

We have an allotment of so many cars. When we sell that number we can get no more this year. You should see this car at once and if possible place your order for future delivery. Please mail the coupon now so we can send a catalog.

CONTINENT COMMENT ON SPORTS.

THE WEEK'S EVENTS.

Sports in Sports.

The days of athletics, aside from the mastery one of physical prowess, is to make true sportsmen out of American youths. This will be accomplished until the athletes learn to keep their tempers in check as well as success, and to lose as gracefully as to win. This object is not always attained and sad to relate the athletic directors sometimes lack discipline among the men under them. In the case of a certain athletic director in Los Angeles so far allowed his temper master him as to slap a player in the face and apply the lie direct because he could not control his temper during the progress of a game. This is but a sample of the many instances of good fellows and bad sportsmanship at a football game. The team itself may be composed of good fellows and have the material of a fine aggregation, but unless the coach and a coach it can never hope to win. The coach hunted for and found it, as that kind always does. This man has never been popular in the eyes of many unprejudiced persons, but the sooner he is found the better for his school.

Conduct of Contests.

Many youths engaged in athletic contests as a pastime are slow to realize that they may have faults in their methods, and that such faults should be noticed. Just criticism of such faults, whether they be of character or ability, should not be considered harsh, but as aids to improvement. Coaches and high school authorities should always to cover up faults which do not reflect credit on athletics, and when such faults are published in the newspapers they blame the papers for publishing them. The real cause of the unfortunate happening is not that it is published or not, but in allowing the newspapers to gain the information. The authorities should correct the evil within their own ranks and attempt to purify their sports. Protection of an unsportsmanlike act is the worst thing that can be done, and true loyalty consists in trying to improve conditions instead of covering up publicity.

Championship Series.

There has been considerable comment on the apparent sequence of the championship baseball game. The Pomona team won, and then the Occidentals won, and so it went through the series, first one and then the other winning. The reason for this proceeding, as it is said, is that if the games were fixed it is but natural that the Occidentals should win first on its home grounds, and then for Detroit to rally on its home grounds, and then for Detroit to rally. Detroit did rally in the last game, and the Occidentals could not win. This was a great series, and that the games were not prearranged is the suspicion seems to be without foundation, for everything was above board. The players received nothing for their games, all the money going to the clubs. The players should be ashamed to play for nothing if they were not.

Fistic Match.

The match of Ketchel and Johnson is a good proposition on the face of it, Britt and Ketchel being the principals. It is likely that Britt will be disappointed in believing that he can whip Ketchel at any time, and that Ketchel has a cinched Ketchel will be disappointed in hoping that he can easily win. Ketchel is a good showing against Johnson, but probably win. Ketchel will be beaten, when he is beaten, as we have thought he would be, but as aids to improvement, and high school authorities always to cover up faults which do not reflect credit on athletics, and when such faults are published in the newspapers they blame the papers for publishing them. The real cause of the unfortunate happening is not that it is published or not, but in allowing the newspapers to gain the information. parently made a fine showing, but it seems likely that Johnson permitted him to do so at several stages of the game. Of course, Ketchel landed a hard blow on Johnson's jaw, but that might have happened at any time with any fighter. The number who believe Johnson will defeat Jeffries is growing. The black is certainly a wonder.

The Greatest Ball Player.

The recent championship baseball series seems to indicate that Hans Wagner is still the greatest ball player in the country, despite the claims of Ty Cobb's friends. Cobb may have been having bad luck, but that was his misfortune, and he will have to be judged by results. However, Wagner had his bad days, and then he had his very good days, and he averaged up high. Cobb made some timely hits and once stole home, but his averages are not high. The chances are that, though Wagner may be more valuable this year, Cobb is worth more to a club, for he has ten or twelve years of star work before him, and being but 22 years of age, should learn more every year.

The Anti-Seining Law.

The anti-seining law has been very beneficial for sport all along the coast, and thousands of anglers have enjoyed wharf fishing. The fishermen are endeavoring to have the law repealed, but sportsmen will rally to its defense. It should leave the few hundreds of yards near shore alone. Most of the persons affected are Japs, and these men have been known to spoil the sport of hundreds of anglers in a half hour's time. It seems that they delight in churning the waters in the immediate vicinity of the piers and driving the fish away.

Need for Early Schedules.

The difficulty arising from inability to secure grounds to pull off the Stanford-Castaway game in Los Angeles again emphasizes the necessity of having schedules made out the winter before, so that there will be no conflict of dates. It is probable that the Stanford boys will not be able to visit Los Angeles this season, and hundreds of local alumni regret it.

CADETS OUTPLAYED.

Pomona High School Defeats Harvard Fifteen by One-Sided Score. Hill, Star of Game.

Pomona High School walked away with the Harvard School fifteen in an interesting Rugby game at Pomona yesterday afternoon, the sagebrushers winning by the score of 27 to 3. Hill, substitute right wing, registered the try for the visitors near the end of the game. He easily played the best game for the cadets.

The home team outweighed the militants an average of ten pounds, and the fast aggressive scrum of Pomona had little trouble in getting the ball on the throw-in. Giles, Ulrey and Heath in the backfield quickly carried the ball to the goal line, making the tries after several pretty passing rushes.

PLAYERS LEAVE FIELD.

Hollywood Disputes Decision on Forward Pass and Quits—Quakers Win Easily.

After wrangling over the decision of Referee Perry on forward pass, the Hollywood football team refused to finish the game against Whittier High School at Hollywood grounds yesterday afternoon, the contest ending with the score 17 to 6, in favor of the Quakers.

Hollywood made a forward pass near the middle of the second period, and the referee decided the throw was made from over the line of scrimmage. The home team would not stand for the decision and withdrew from the field, after much "beefing."

Taylor was the star of the Hollywood team, scoring the single touchdown in the second half on a pretty end run. He kicked an easy goal. Whittier made two touchdowns in the first half, kicking one goal, and adding another touchdown and goal in the second period.

The Quakers outplayed the hill boys and made their gains largely through the line. Mann at half, and McCaslin at full advanced the ball consistently on line bucks.

IN THE AIR.

STANFORD GAME HANGING FIRE.

NORTHERNERS UNWILLING TO CHANGE DATES.

Lax Management by Higgins for Castaways Balls Up Arrangements. Crouch Unable to Secure Field as Supposed, and Exchange of Dates Unsatisfactory.

Unless Coach Presley can be induced to change his decision to keep the Stanford 'varsity on the campus October 30, the Cardinal Rugby team will not be seen in Los Angeles this year. This is the result of an exchange of telegrams yesterday between Manager Crouch of the Castaways and Manager Burbank of the Cardinal.

Burbank wired that Coach Presley was unwillingly to change the date of the Castaways game, as proposed by the Los Angeles club; the original schedule as agreed upon by Pat Higgins was insisted upon. After consulting with J. C. McFarland, representing the Stanford alumni in this city, Manager Crouch replied yesterday that it would be impossible to play the game here October 23.

There has been continual correspondence about the game between the two managers, owing to the lax management of the Castaways before the club was definitely organized for the season. Pat Higgins, acting on his own responsibility for the club, scheduled the Cardinal game for October 23. After Crouch took up the management, he found that no field could be secured for that date. Fiesta Park was taken for the U.S.C. Law-Pomona game, and both the U.S.C. and Occidental fields were engaged for local games.

It was impossible to arrange a double-header, on account of a gate-receipts arrangement agreed to with Stanford, which Manager Burbank insisted upon. After trying to get some of the other teams to change the dates of their games and leave a field free for the 23rd, without success, Crouch wired Burbank to change the Stanford game to October 30, playing at Palo Alto on October 23. As stated, Burbank announced that Coach Presley was unwilling to make the change and play the Campus game first.

Crouch's last telegram calls the game off, unless the dates can be inverted, putting the Los Angeles game on the 30th.

The game scheduled with Santa Barbara High for yesterday also fell through, the Santa Barbara team wiring that the Castaways' acceptance of the offered contest came too late, and that since sending the challenge other arrangements for the day had been made.

MANY SPORTS FOR PORTOLA.

Track Meets and Ring Bouts Events Carded.

Southern Boys to Compete in Star Events.

Lacrosse and Football to Be Field Games.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—The entry lists, including the many aspirants for athletic honors in the different events to be held during the Portola Festival, has closed with the Athletic Committee, and from the array of names received it is safe to predict that the competition during the coming week will be the most interesting witnessed here since the revival of athletic activity.

All branches of sport in the amateur realm will be demonstrated by the best representatives in the respective branches. Only on the golf links will the professional enthusiast figure during the coming schedule and San Francisco will witness for the first time the skillful playing of eastern expert golfers who are being brought here for this occasion.

Beginning Monday the visiting athletes who will oppose the local champions will commence to arrive on the scene. Portland, through the Multnomah Club, is sending a team of six competitors who will dispute the best positions in all of the sports. Forrest Smithson, the world's champion high hurdler, national and Olympic champion, will start in the flight over the sticks.

Edgar Frank, well known as one of America's best lightweight wrestlers, and Omar Dranga, the champion lightweight boxer, both of the Multnomah Club, will be in the ring for the Portland club. Patterson, who recently broke the Coast record in the quarter mile swimming event, and a pupil of Arthur Cavill, will represent Multnomah in the aquatic races.

Los Angeles and Seattle, like Portland, will look for prizes also. From the south will be sent one of the most formidable aggregations of swimmers that has ever invaded this territory, including the Pacific Association champions who cleaned up the Olympic Club at Los Angeles last July. Marcus Lee, O'Malley and Taylor in the races and Watkins in the high and fancy diving will constitute the Los Angeles swimming team.

James Donahue, former national hurdle star, now at St. Vincent's College, and winner of prizes in the Pacific Association track meet held at Ascot Park during the Elks' Carnival, will be an opponent for Smithson in the spectacular contests. Harry McLean, the Indian runner from Phoenix, who made his début at Los Angeles and has since become an American champion, is due to put in an appearance at the stadium in the two-mile race on the day of the track and field meet.

THROWING JAVELIN.

Seattle is also expected to send a track team that is feared by the local competitors and there will be one of the greatest exhibitions with the javelin ever witnessed since the introduction of this novel event. Braley Gish, A.A.U. senior champion and one of the Northwest's all around athletes, will toss the spear with Olle Snedigar and Ralph Rose, both of whom have become experts in handling the javelin.

The track and field meet will take place on Friday afternoon, October 22, at the stadium in Golden Gate Park, and from Stanford, the University of California, Olympic Club, Cogswell School and all of the amateur clubs and educational institutions about the bay, has been gathered the formidable list of starters in the track and field events. McGregor, Morris and Belah are the reliable cardinal competitors who are sure to put in an appearance, while the California squad will be gathered around Kelly and E. F. Smith. Ollie Snedigar, Pete Gerhardt, John O. Miller, A. A. Garner, Elliott Craig, Hoburg, Daye Martin, Orval Baumbaugh, Ralph Rose, C. Moss and Al Plaw will be among the Olympic Club entry list. Eddie Beeson will compete for the University of California.

Football in all known phases of demonstration will be one of the features of the week's sporting display. Beginning on Tuesday, October 19, the elevents from the Berkeley and Alameda high schools will contest on the gridiron at the stadium in Golden Gate Park, following the style of play adopted by the colleges of the East.

On Thursday a Rugby match between the teams known as the American and Great Britain fifteens will take place at the stadium. This should prove one of the attractions of the elaborate programme, as the players will be selected from the prominent Rugby enthusiasts about the bay. Association football will occupy the field on Saturday in a game between the All-California team and the British Columbia champions who will arrive here today.

LACROSSE GAME.

A lacrosse game in which the crack teams from Los Angeles and the Olympic Club will figure is slated for Wednesday afternoon. Those two teams recently played a close series in the southern city and the followers of the game are expecting something out of the ordinary when they settle the score in Golden Gate Park.

While the team competition has been scheduled in expectation of high class sport, tennis, boxing and wrestling are also on the boards for their share of attention and the indoor events, which will be special matched, are announced as well arranged bouts. The tennis will be played on Saturday, with matches at intervals during the day.

The special contest between the Misses May Sutton and Hazel Hotchkiss is sure to attract many to the courts in the park.

With Stanford represented in the regatta with a four-oared barge crew composed of four of last year's victorious eight, the athletic club oarsmen will have some unusual competition on the water. The South End, Dolphin and Alameda boat clubs are entered in all the events and welcome the opportunity to meet the college athletes in this branch of sport.

The regatta will take place Saturday afternoon on the bay at the foot of Sixteenth street and every detail has been attended to make this event one of the most successful regattas ever held on the bay.

SOCCER SEASON OPENS.

Local Scotch and English Teams to Play Match Game at Fiesta Park This Afternoon.

Fast football is promised for the soccer game at Fiesta Park this afternoon, where the local Scotch and English teams will play at 3 o'clock.

Constable, Todd, Carleton and Lincoln are among those expected to star for the English team, while with the Scotchmen will be Mitchell, McDougall and Smith, veterans of well-known ability. The teams appear to be very evenly matched, and a close game seems assured.

A notable addition to the local soccer ranks is Welfare, who recently joined the Rangers. Other new men for the Rangers this season are the Aitken brothers, the two Burleighs, Devlin, Buchanan, Lane and Saunderson.

Big Receipts.

Jimmy Coffroth announced the receipts of the Johnson-Ketchel fight at $32,300. This is in excess of the seating capacity, but is explained by the fact that 900 more were crowded into the bleacher section, and that many standing-room tickets were disposed of at $5 a head. The fighters took 60 per cent. of the receipts, divided 65 per cent to the winner and 35 to the loser. This made Johnson's end $12,480 and Ketchel's $6720. As there was a $10,000 side bet, Johnson will receive over $22,000 for his day's work, and Ketchel must be contented with $1720, as he lost $5000 on the bet. In addition, the negro has 40 per cent. part in the moving pictures as against 30 per cent. held by Coffroth.

METHODIST SQUAD WOEFULLY WEAK ON DEFENSE.

University Eleven Lacks Driving Power in Back Field—Veteran Players Not Working as Occasion Demands—Students Show Unwarranted Confidence.

After three weeks of practice the varsity team of the University of Southern California is disappointingly weak in the daily scrimmage practices, and some real hard work is before the Methodists if they would aspire to the championship honors again. Compared with the other southern college eleven, the university players are two weeks behind in their knowledge of the game.

Primarily the university eleven has not the necessary driving power in the back field, and against either the law school or the Highlanders the Methodists would have little chance to gain on line formations. The line is noticeably ineffective on offense, and in breaking up the scrub offense it is not working as the occasion demands.

Allan is not playing the game as he should at guard, and is not showing the strength he did last year at center. Bunker is unable to join the squad at center until late in the afternoon, and his knowledge of the signals is faulty. In the new game the performance of the snapper back is second only in importance to the work of the ends. Much depends on the aggressiveness of the center in strengthening the whole line of play.

Stookey, the giant tackle, is far from being in condition. His wind is short, and though the big fellow plunges into the scrimmages with great gusto for a few minutes, the scrubs walk all over him during the closing minutes of play. Apparently the veteran tackle is not taking proper care of himself, and is not abiding by all the regulations of the Methodist discipline. Malcom is the only lineman doing satisfactory work and he has first choice at either guard.

Back of the line Decius is out of the game with an injured head and is missing much valuable team practice. Holden is still suffering with a dislocated thumb, while Capt. Paslin is limping with a bad leg.

Hall at full-back is able to hit the scrub defense for substantial gains, but against the 'varsity defense of the barristers or Presbyterians he would have little chance of duplicating these performances. He plunges into the attack unassisted, and frequently has to open his own hole.

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford Freshmen, 5; California Freshmen, 0.

On California Field this afternoon Stan Mitchell of Los Angeles, captain of the Stanford fifteen, scored the lone try and converted the goal, which was the first freshmen game that a Cardinal baby team has taken from the blue and Gold for six years.

Stanford's victory was a glorious defeat for California, as all the wise ones had picked the Cardinals to win by an overwhelming score. Instead of going to pieces in the second half, as was expected by many, California put up the fast five minutes of play had the ball within the Stanford 5-yard line.

Against the 'varsity defense of the Presbyterians he would have little chance of duplicating these performances. He plunges into the attack unmolested, and frequently has to run his own hole.

A spirit of indifference and self-confidence pervades the whole Methodist institution from the president down, and this attitude is considered a dangerous symptom by thoroughly interested students. Last year the Methodists won the Occidental game, when they had absolutely no license to defeat the Tigers. Only the splendid spirit of the team carried the university colors to the top against big odds. This year a majority of the students think the performance will be repeated. The players will be in fit shape for the big games, say the rooters, so what's the use worrying.

The victory of the 'varsity over the Polytechnic players at San Luis Obispo last week is given false value by the enthusiasts. The northern team was but a sieve for the 'varsity backs to filter through, and the one-sided score should not be taken too seriously in considering the strength of the team.

Coach Cromwell is not given to publicity. He is laying for the Occidental game, and he has three weeks to get his men into shape. A lot can be accomplished in this period, and the result may justify the present raw condition of the squad. Cromwell is putting great stress on having the players become thoroughly acquainted with the elementary lessons of the game. Certainly the Methodists will not be stale, and all the strenuous practice of the rival coaches may forbode a reverse condition of the opponents when the crucial time comes.

ONE-MAN GAME.

STAN MITCHELL DEFEATS THE CALIFORNIA FRESHMEN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford Freshmen, 5; California Freshmen, 0.

Before a crowd on Berkeley Field this afternoon the Stanford freshmen, captained by Stan Mitchell of Los Angeles, captain of the Stanford fifteen, scored the lone goal that decided the goal, which was the first freshmen game that a Cardinal team has taken from the Blue and Gold for six years.

The freshmen victory was a glorious one for California, as all the wise ones had picked the Cardinals to win by a overwhelming score. Instead of being in the second half, as predicted by many, California put up a game fight on the defensive, and for five minutes of play had the ball on the Stanford 5-yard line.

According to the statement of Referee Cameron only overeagerness, which caused the two knock-ons and the two Stanford penalty kicks, kept the Blue and Gold from scoring. The heavy Stanford scrum was all that saved a California score at least twice earlier in the game. The Blue and Gold worked the ball within the 5-yard line, only to lose it when the Stanford pack would yell out to Worwick, who would punt to touch.

Stanford played the eight-men scrum, while California used the seven, but out of the seven one man was held back as a rover. Knowing the Blue and Gold was outweighed in the pack, Schaeffer had his men allow Stanford to heel out, but to smother the packs. Only in the first half did the much-feared Stanford backs get a chance to work any passing rushes, but Mitchell, Kern, Case, Worwick, Fife and Bumgardner did brilliant individual work. The long kicks of Mitchell were constant ground gainers, and California was forced to the defensive most of the time.

Stroud, Miaj Morris and Laine were very noticeable in the California plays.

Stanford's score was made in the middle of the first half after Mitchell's free kick from a California off-side had forced the Blue and Gold to save. Hill found touch on his own thirty-five and then from a scrum Case kicked to Touch on California's fifteen.

A scrum ensued from the throw-in and Worwick secured the heel out and passed to Mitchell, who went straight through the pack for the try, which he afterward converted. A penalty kick gave California a chance for a forty-yard place kick but the attempt to score failed. The half ended with California on the aggressive and the ball on Stanford's twenty-five.

It was thought that physical condition would give Stanford the advantage in the last half, but instead the Blue and Gold forced most of the fighting. Morris, Mint and Brant got in some clever back field kicks and runs, but Schaeffer's pack did not give their backs the chances possible, probably much to the detriment of the score.

Referee Cameron stated that the game was one of the best exhibitions of Rugby that he had ever seen. Officiating was easy and the penalties were chiefly for off-side playing. California was penalized the most, owing to the over-anxiety of her rovers. Seven thousand persons saw the game.

RIFLES' DAY AT GLENDALE.

Members' Medal and Marksmen's Reserve Buttons to Be Contested for in All-Day Shoot.

The Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club is to hold its annual shoot for the "Member's Medal" of the National Rifle Association, this afternoon, on the club's Glendale range. This medal is given to each civilian club annually to be taken by the highest man in the shoot. The conditions call for five shots per man at 200, 300 and 500 yards. Last year's medal was taken by A. H. Aiken, who, under the N. R. A. rules, is ineligible to compete for another one.

Members will also shoot for the government "Marksman's Reserve" buttons, given to all members of clubs affiliated with the National Rifle Association and making fifty points or more out of the possible seventy-five. The conditions are the same as for the Member's Medal shoot.

A ten-man team shoot with Seattle will be pulled off during the afternoon, conditions of which are ten shots per man at 200, 300 and 500 yards.

The shoot will commence at 9:30 o'clock and will last all day. Men qualifying in this competition are given lapel buttons by the government and their names enrolled in the War Department as the first line of reserve in case of war.

ROWING SHALL LIVE.

Lagunita Club Reorganized at Stanford Insures Boating for Interested Students.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 14.—The Lagunita Rowing Club was organized by the crew men yesterday. The purpose of the new organization is to foster and support rowing at Stanford in order that it will not become entirely abandoned as a result of the withdrawal of the support of the student body.

J. C. Huston, '10, who would have been captain of this year's 'varsity crew if the sport had not been dropped, was elected president of the rowing club, and F. L. Guerena, '11, coxswain in the first boat last season, was chosen secretary.

Membership in the club is open to all men in the university. The money received for dues is to be used in maintaining the boating equipment. Blue and white were selected as club colors.

The crew that is to man the four-oared barge to represent Stanford in the Portola festival is training daily at Redwood City.

STANFORD WANTS TRIP.

Cardinal Anxious to Meet and Win Victory Over Castaways—Stars Return to Game.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 15.—Coach Presley expects to be able to use the strongest 'varsity football lineup if the Cardinals meet the Castaways at Los Angeles next Saturday. The trip is at present hanging fire.

Capt. Mow Mitchell, who has been disabled for several weeks, is rapidly recovering, and again will don a uniform early next week. Minturn, one of the regular forwards, is still suffering from a sprained ankle, but he will go south with the squad, and undoubtedly will get into the game. The other men are in good conditicn.

The tentative Los Angeles trip would be the only journey the Cardinal fifteen would make from the campus this year. The game that was arranged with the University of Nevada for the latter part of this month, early in the season, was called off on account of the heavy expenses connected with the trip and with bringing the Nevadans here for a return match.

Stanford is anxious to meet and defeat the Castaways, inasmuch as California was unable to secure better than a draw. Twenty men, accompanied by Coach Presley, Trainer Moulton and Graduate Manager Burbank, will form the delegation if arrangements can be made.

"Varsity practice has been overshadowed this week by the preparations for the freshman game, but, despite this fact, considerable progress has been made. The 3-2-3 scrum formation, which has been permanently adopted, has required that a great deal of attention be given the forwards. The pack men are now working together effectively, and when the intactness of the big machine is restored by the return of Minturn, its efficiency will be all that is desired.

Cheda, Fitting and Horton, in the front rank; Dole and Minturn, side rankers, and Pemberton, Crawford and Thorpe, in the rear rank, are eminently qualified for the positions on account of their weight, strength and agressiveness. These men seem to stand head and shoulders above all the other candidates for the forward positions, and, barring accidents, are sure to form the pack in the intercollegiate contest. The average weight of the scrum men is close to 195 pounds.

"Mickey" Reed hs fitted well into the position at half-back vacated by Scott, '10, and if he is not injured probably will occupy the place throughout the season. His knees and ankles are rather weak, however, and he has been unfortunate in getting "laid up" several times.

Roth and Stolz, who have been playing first and second five-eighths, respectively, probably will be supplanted by the Mitchell brothers. Capt. Mow Mitchell will resume his position at second five-eighths next week, and Stan Mitchell, who has made a phenomenal showing with the freshmen, seems better qualified than any one else for the other five-eighths berth. Cook, who played on the 'varsity last, undoubtedly will be kept at center three-quarters, and John Holman is sure of his place at wing. This will leave only the other wing position vacant, and the competition for the place will be keen. Drew, Kern, MacKenzie and the men supplanted by the Mitchell brothers in the center of the line will be the principal candidates for the place.

SOME PUNCHERS.

FOUR HEAVIES ON THE CARD.

Geyer, Johnson, Cameron and Sieberg Assure Slugging.

Big Bruisers Ready for Next Friday Evening.

Coulter Will Be Tried Out With Charles Norvel.

By placing four heavyweights on the programme for next Friday's entertainment, Manager McCarey is carrying out his plan of an elimination series for the big fellows, and will reinforce the bunch now on the Coast by importing several of the most promising from the East.

Jack Geyer is the new face that will appear before the fans for the first time Friday evening, and in making his initial bow to the patrons of the sport in Los Angeles he has displayed plenty of nerve in going on with the redoubtable Battling Johnson, for while the big Russian was whipped soundly during his career in the south he has been recuperating for the past nine months in the north, with his inseparable companion, Fritz Frey, and the Battler comes back to Los Angeles looking the picture of health and ready for a fight again.

When Johnson made his first appearance in the ring at Naud there were many who thought he might have a look in for the championship, but he soon lost his punching power, and his last matches were much to the bad. Now, however, he is back to his first form, weighing close to 200 pounds, and should make Geyer hustle some to beat him.

The other pair—Jack Sieberg and Jim Cameron—will entertain the crowd with some heavy hitting while the bout lasts. Cameron was knocked out by Jack Burns, but since that fight he has won several contests, and he hopes to make such a good showing with Sieberg that he may get the opportunity to get on with Burns again, in which case he will fight winner-take-all with a side bet, if Burns is willing.

GOOD IMPRESSION.

Sieberg made a good impression in his contest with Burns, for he hit like a mule kicks, and nearly "copped" the Salinas boy in the first round. Sieberg's weak point seems to be his stomach, and this spot caused his defeat when he met Burns. Sieberg has been schooling himself against this frailty, and he expects to get Cameron for the count before the fight is many rounds old.

With the probability of the winners of these two bouts coming together later, and with the Burns-Flynn contest ready for October 29, the fans certainly will see lots of the big fellows, but the Pacific Athletic Club will not stop at this, for it will have Al Kubiak, Lew Taylor and a few of the newcomers in the heavy field later. This will string out the big battles throughout the next few months, so that by spring some one who may be a likely candidate for the championship honors may have been developed.

Sam Coulter and Charles Norvel will furnish the wind-up for the triple event next Friday, with Al Rogers and Jake Arnold as the openers. Coulter has aspirations for the lightweight belt and in going on with Norvel he takes another step for the Butte boy is accredited with a good kick in his right mitt. Norvel also hopes to make good in the same class and he will do his best to show the fans Friday that he is a candidate for those honors and he expects to go on with Picato if he wins decisively from Coulter.

BOXING NOTES.

Jim Flynn and Jack Burns are training hard for their battle scheduled for October 29. Flynn is at Doyle's camp at Vernon, while Burns under the guidance of Doc Gene Jeffery is holding forth at Venice. Burns is rapidly developing great hitting powers in either hand though he still lacks speed and this is where Flynn will expect to gain the victory by getting next to the big fellow and rapping him hard at close range.

Jim Barry has decided that he will have little chance to show again in Los Angeles and will seek other fields for his talents. Yesterday he left for the East and will try and get on with some of the big fellows.

Next Wednesday Secretary Hancock of the Pacific Athletic Club will have a big class of try-out lads in initial bouts. This is an accumulation of several weeks' standing and the fans who go out to Naud in the afternoon will see plenty of fun without having to put up money for it.

Danny Webster and Monte Attell may meet earlier than Thanksgiving Day if the boys have their own way. Each of the pair wants to go on again within a month and it is probable that Manager McCarey will stage the contest at the pavilion so that the ownership of the championship belt which now reposes in his hands, may be decided.

GOAL THROWERS BUSY.

Girls and Boys Start Basketball Practice at Occidental—Good Outlook for Teams.

Basketball practice has started at Occidental and the candidates for the team, who are not on the gridiron, are hard at work.

Prospects point to a decidedly better team than that of last year. There is considerable new material in addition to all of last season's 'varsity. The men are handicapped by having to play on an indoor court.

Coach Braden is drilling the men in goal throwing and passing, in order that he may devote the entire time to team work when regular training starts.

Hollister, McPeake, Douglas and Hillary, 'varsity men, are showing up well. Capt. Baer, McKenny and Robertson, all of whom are practically certain of positions, will not be out until after Thanksgiving.

Both college and academy girls are organizing class teams and will compete for two loving cups, put up by President Baer.

In the college the juniors, with Miss McCoy and Miss Chamberlain, and the freshmen, with several former High School players, seem to have the best teams.

A schedule of games for the girls has been arranged as follows:

October 15—Freshmen and sophomores; academy first year and second year.

October 21—Juniors and seniors; academy third year and fourth year.

October 26—Freshmen and juniors, academy first year and third year.

October 28—Sophomores and seniors, academy second year and third year.

November 2—Freshmen and seniors; academy first year and fourth year.

November 4—Sophomores and seniors; academy second year and fourth year.

Jack Johnson, Heavyweight Champion, who retained his title by defeating Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight champion, yesterday, at San Francisco.

KETCHELL-JOHNSON.

strength when he uppercut Ketchel with a right and sent him to the mat for the count of six. Again in the sixth the burly black sent Ketchel spinning across the ring from the force of a short-arm punch and finally dropped him with a left. This time, however, Ketchel waited for no count but finished the round with his face covered with blood and his legs tottering.

FLUSH ON JAW.

The Michigander showed to best advantage in the seventh round, when he got in two hard punches. One of them was a full left swing that caught Johnson flush on the point of the jaw. The negro shook his head, laughed, and went ahead, but when the fight was over he was carrying a badly swollen jaw and in one spot the skin had been taken off. The other was a corking good left to the body, but the blows did not stop Johnson. If anything, he carried the fight more aggressively than ever and at the finish of the round was leading by a wide margin, as he led in every round.

His straight left to the face was Johnson's favorite punch in the earlier rounds and it was noted that he was slow to get into action with his famous right uppercut. But he rarely missed when he wanted his left to crash Ketchel full in the face.

In the second round Ketchel's left eye showed signs of being cut and in the third and fourth the middleweight was bleeding profusely. He seemed utterly unable to cope with the more massive Johnson or to land any punches on his own account.

All through the fight it was evident that Ketchel was endeavoring to follow the course that had been mapped out for him by Britt. It is true that much of the time he was forcing Johnson around the ring, but it is also true that he tried with his best knowledge of the fight game to force the black to lead. And Johnson was willing when the opportunity offered, seeing that he would receive little in exchange.

Once more, as in the Kaufman fight, Johnson was a marvel of boxing skill. He feinted Ketchel time and again, leading light lefts for the stomach, only to close in with a right uppercut as his opponent protected himself against a different punch. Ketchel, on the other hand, showed to poor advantage. His rushes and his efforts to use the shift might as well never have been tried. Johnson, seeming to know when was coming, rushed back out of danger's way and the punch would go hurtling by, encountering nothing more than the atmosphere, fully a foot away from the grinning negro.

BY ROUNDS.

First round—The men did not shake hands. Johnson towered above his adversary by several inches. The champion scored almost immediately with a hard left hook to the stomach. "Make him lead," yelled the spectators to Ketchel. Ketchel apparently was determined to make the black lead, and sparred for almost half a minute, center of the ring. It was an utterly to the face twice with lightning-like rapidity. Ketchel forced the black against the ropes, but the latter wriggled away without receiving a blow. The bell rang with the men in the center of the ring. It was an utterly tame round, both men fighting with extreme caution. Ketchel looked nervous throughout, while Johnson wore his "golden smile."

Second round—They ran to a clinch, and Referee Welsh pried them apart. On the break Joanson shot a straight left to the nose, and soon thereafter duplicated it. At every clinch Ketchel was playing with short arm blows for the stomach. In a clinch Ketchel uppercut hard to the jaw with his left. This angered the champion, who rushed in, landing left and right on the body. Ketchel slipped to the floor with considerable force. He was up quickly, and rushing in, but had great difficulty in getting under Johnson's long reach. Johnson merely toyed with Ketchel until the bell ended the round. Ketchel's face showed grim determination as he took his seat.

Third round—They sparred perfunctorily for fully half a minute, and then closed in, swinging right and left at close range. Ketchel landing on the body once with his right. Ketchel drove his right high on the negro's breast, and as they clinched Joanson uppercut twice with his right. The referee then separated the belligerents. They again rushed in close, Johnson putting in several short-arm rights and lefts to the stomach. The white man uppercut with left to the face as they broke from a clinch. Just before the round ended, Johnson swung his right to the jaw. Ketchel went to his corner dancing, however, and looked fresh. Johnson kept up a running fire of conversation with his seconds during the minute's respite.

Fourth round—After a sparring fest, Johnson rushed in, forcing his man to the ropes, and, placing his arms around Ketchel, fairly carried him to the center of the ring. "Make him lead," came the repeated injunction from Willus Britt. Ketchel missed a terrific right swing, intended for the jaw. It was a close shave for the negro, and missed by barely an inch.

Johnson steadily backed away as they sparred for a lead, with Ketchel following. Johnson then sent a hard right to the jaw. Ketchel constantly kept teasing the big black in an effort to make him lead. It was a tame round, characterized by a few bursts of speed.

Fifth round—Ketchel opened with a left to the body, to which the champion replied with two weak lefts to the face. Johnson then sent Ketchel's head back with two straight lefts to the nose. Ketchel again essayed to force Johnson to lead, to which the champion failed to respond. Ketchel showed unexpected cleverness at blocking the negro's leads whenever Johnson came to lead. Johnson hung his left twice to the face, and they sparred at long range. Joanson working in a straight left to the face. Neither man showed damage as the round ended. Few leads marked the round, Johnson having a shade.

Sixth round—Each missed a left swing and then Ketchel landed a left to the body and followed with another left to the jaw. Johnson countered with a left to the stomach. Johnson shot out his left, catching Ketchel with both hands as the latter threw up his guard, and Ketchel was sent to the floor. He was up smiling, however. Johnson gave him a warm reception. He uppercut with right to the jaw, and reached Kitchel's face with a succession of lefts to the jaw. Ketchel continued to force the pace, but was met with two lefts on the nose that started blood flowing. Johnson had a good lead in the round.

Seventh round—Johnson swooped in with two lefts on the nose, Ketchel countering with a hard left hook to the body. Johnson shot another straight lefts to the nose and Ketchel missed a terrific left swing for the jaw. As they closed in, Johnson uppercut with right to the jaw and Ketchel used the negro's shoulder as a mat with which to wipe the flowing blood from his nostrils. At close quarters Johnson landed several times on the nose and face. Suddenly Ketchel swung his left with terrific force and it caught the champion solidly on the jaw, raising a big lump that was immediately preceptible to the spectators. It was by far the cleanest and best blow of the fight and the crowd arose to its feet, yelling gleefully.

Eighth round—Johnson's smile had vanished when he came up. He immediately closed in, landing twice with left on the face. The fighters roughed it, shoulder to shoulder, and Ketchel worked in a hard right uppercut to the jaw. The referee separated the men. Johnson landing left and right on the face as they broke. Ketchel missed a terrific right swing and almost went through the ropes from the force of his effort. Johnson forced his opponent back gradually and landed a left on the jaw. Ketchel again missed a hard right swing and again nearly went through the ropes from its misdirected force. Ketchel ran to his corner smiling while the crowd cheered.

Ninth round—They closed in, each landing short-arm rights on the face. Welsh was forced twice to break the men from clinches. The champion sent in four stinging straight lefts to the face, but Ketchel did not break ground. To the contrary, he rushed in, hammering at the champion's stomach, but his blows were smothered. Ketchel planted his left over the ribs and Johnson countered with a short left hooks to the jaw. Johnson then hooked his left to the jaw and a clinch followed. Johnson broke it up with a nasty straight left to the face, and the round ended in favor of the champion.

Tenth round—After a clinch Johnson sent two light lefts to the stomach and quickly shifted to the jaw, where he landed twice and started Ketchel spitting blood. Johnson wrestled Ketchel to the floor and then lifted him up and placed him in the center of the ring. In a mid-ring rally Johnson sent three straight lefts to Ketchel's sore mouth and nose, starting the blood afresh. Johnson again wrestled and Ketchel almost went off his balance. Johnson, getting Ketchel against the ropes, sent a right wallop to the stomach and Ketchel winced. Johnson patted Ketchel on the stomach with his open hands as the bell clanged. Ketchel looked slightly worried as he sat down.

Eleventh round—After some desultory sparring, Ketchel whipped his left to the kidneys and missed two hard swings for the jaw. It was noticeable that Johnson's right uppercut, which he used with such good effect in his other fights, had little effect upon Ketchel. The Michigander sent the great crowd into convulsions by landing a terrific right almost on the jaw and the big black immediately clinched and seemed content to rest. Ketchel forced the fighting, seeking to follow the advantage, but could not further penetrate the negro's clever defense. Ketchel was vigorously cheered as he sought his corner. His face was badly battered from the effects of the negro's constant left jabs.

Twelfth round—Ketchel, suddenly rushing in, sent his right for the jaw. It struck the champion on the arm and the big negro fell flat on his back and seemed to have injured himself. Ketchel rushed right at him, but the tricky champion was waiting for him. He swung a hard right to the jaw, and quick as a flash shot a left to the body. As Ketchel fell backward Johnson sent in another right to the face and the white man went to the canvas as if shot. There he lay prone, with blood streaming from his mouth. He made a weak effort to arise, but fell back again and was counted out.

PRELIMINARIES.

Franklin Smith was given the decision over Jeff Perry at the end of the tenth round. Smith outfought his man from the start to the finish, knocking him down in the sixth round for the count of nine. It was a clean-cut victory.

La Grave gained the verdict over Nelson at the end of the tenth round of the second preliminary. It was an uninteresting and featureless fight.

FIGHTERS TALK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jack Johnson said:

"Ketchel is a good, tough boy, but I had things all my own way. The time he knocked me down was because I was coming in too fast. His punch hit me back of the ear, but the force of both of us coming together was what sent me to the floor. Of course it hurt me. Why shouldn't I admit it. But let some of the other fellows fight him if they want to, I don't think there's any occasion of my trying him now. I will stay in San Francisco several days, but will probably go to Los Angeles to fight the winner of the Jim Flynn-Jack Burns fight. And Jeffries can have his chance any time. I guess I showed the fans that I have a good punch."

Stanley Ketchel said:

"All I want is to have another fight with Johnson. I was too careless, that was all. From the start I was laying back waiting for a chance to land a hard punch. I had been trying all the time and I hit him a good stiff left when he dropped. But then I lost my head. How did he hit me? I don't know. I only realize that when I came to, I was back in my corner and that I was beaten. I came pretty close to winning that championship. I weighed 178 pounds and never felt in better condition for a fight. He is a good boxer and all that, but he was afraid of my punch just the same. Just let me rest up and give me another crack at him."

BORE NEW WELLS.

Gadwell Gun Club Secures Three-Year Extension on Lease—More Ponds Give Better Shooting.

Members of the Gadwell Gun Club have just negotiated a three-year extension of their lease on 500 acres of the Alamitos Rancho, the preserve lying between the San Gabriel River and a branch of the Alamitos Bay, and can easily be reached by launch from Naples.

E. McSwain has recently competed boring a twelve-inch well at a depth of 350 feet, which is giving a sixty-inch flow of water. Three other four-inch wells are pouring a flow of 120 inches of water into the ponds. The club now has eleven ponds, forty additional acres of land being submerged during the last year.

Several new members will be probably taken into the club shortly, as there are ten blinds available for the gunners, and the excellent shooting warrants the increase in the size of the squads. Large flights of sprig, gadwell and some mallards are feeding on the ponds, and limit bags have been secured frequently since the opening shoot.

PIRATES CHAMPIONS.

of them his injured leg failed him and he was withdrawn. O'Leary succeeding him. The crowd which gathered at Bennett Park today numbered not more than 25,000 persons. The weather was cool a trifle, but was still a bit too far for perfect baseball. The mercury hovered around the 60-degree mark, and there was a brisk wind from the east.

A report was sent out during the game that Tom Jones had suffered a relapse, and would not play, but he appeared with the team and appeared to be in good enough condition to play the game.

Moriarity, who also was injured in yesterday's game, and Moriarity, another cripple as a result of that desperate struggle, were ready to play.

BUNGLING METHODS.

SCALPERS GET BUSY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By their methods of selling reserved-seat tickets for the last game of the world's series, the National Commission brought about the worst attack of ticket scalping ever known in the history of baseball.

Tickets in the reserved-seat section were being sold freely all morning by speculators at prices ranging anywhere from $5 to $25. One man paid as high as $50 for a single seat.

The commission didn't think the local club officials and ticket agents could handle the crowd as well as they could, and they decided to take complete charge of affairs. Their aim was to defeat the scalpers, but their misguided zeal led them to play right into the hands of those they were fighting.

If the sale of tickets for today's game is a sample of their methods they are a vastly overrated and overpaid commission. Their slice of the world series money will amount to something like $30,000. A few followers of the game who were kicked bodily out of line when their only offense was their desire to see a ball game, would like to know what they have done to earn it.

Men like Congressman Edwin Denby, George and John Nestor, millionaire lumbermen and many other men prominent in the State and locality, were flatly refused tickets, while others not known to any one were readily given what they wanted.

GOOD VERNON HEAVER IS HIT ALL OVER PARK.

Fisher Raps Out a Home Run and Graney a Triple—Seaton Holds the Tail Ends All the Way—Contest Called in Ninth Inning, Owing to Gathering Darkness.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Oct. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gus Fisher redeemed himself today for his slump in the previous day's matinee by catching and playing good ball through the game and this in addition to acting the gentleman at all times. Portland won 10 to 1.

Not only did Fisher field his position like a big leaguer, but he also distinguished himself by securing the only home run in the game and three safeties out of four times at bat. His four-sacker cleared the right field fence by several feet and brought in Ort from second base.

With the exception of the first inning the game was a walkaway for Portland until it was called in the first half of the ninth on account of darkness. Vance was found for a total of twelve hits and seemed easier as the game progressed. In addition to the home run secured by Fisher, he also presented a three-bagger to Graney, the latter bringing in two men on bases. Seaton in the box for Portland proved a puzzle except the first inning when three of the five hits he allowed were secured by the Vernonites.

Stovall, the first man up for Vernon, hit a clean one past second, McKay was out at first, Martinke hit and then Stovall was brought in on error for the only Vernon score in the game. In the seventh Vance was found for a total of four hits which netted three runs for Portland. The runs were made on a combination of three hits, a fielder's choice and a base on balls.

In Portland's half of the ninth Cooney led off with a two-sacker, Olson reached first on an error by Devereaux and both were brought home by Graney's three-bagger. The game was not allowed to proceed further on account of gathering darkness and because the score was piling up too fast on one side.

FRANKLIN ENDS EXTENDED TOUR.

FIFTEEN THOUSAND MILES IN ROUGH COUNTRY.

Roads Good and Bad on Trip to Seattle and Return—Stuck in Deep Water, Stevenson Asks Help of a Woman With Balky Horse—Is Told Boom of Logs Is to Be Let Loose.

J. E. Stevenson with Miss Capitola Stevenson completed a tour in a a Franklin roadster from Seattle to Los Angeles last week. They left the northern city three weeks ago and arrived here Thursday after one of the most pleasant tours possible. They took numerous side trips on the run down, visiting the big tree country around Santa Cruz and making the picturesque climb to Mt. Hamilton. This is described by Stevenson as being one of the most delightful short side trips on the coast.

The run was made with no more serious trouble than a puncture. Prior to this trip the Franklin had been run 15,000 miles without ever going into the shop.

"We found the roads good part of the way and bad at other parts," said Stevenson, in telling of the tour. "The run to Portland has some good stretches but between Kelso and Portland it is very bad and I would advise any one making the trip to ship around that section, as there is no pleasure touring over such roads which force one to drive carefully every foot of the way and be constantly on the alert.

"The roads in Oregon and Northern California were good as a whole. From Dunsmuir to Redding we found one very bad stretch in which many cars were tied up. One of my few unpleasant experiences was getting caught in a rainstorm near Eugene, Or. This made the roads muddy and traveling was hard.

"I was stuck once and I deserved that, trying to rush through a four-foot river, 100 feet wide. I succeeded in getting about half way across when I was completely flooded, water going over my front lamps. Here I had a small-sized fright.

Just after I stopped a woman drove along in a buggy. I asked her to help me out. She regretted that she couldn't, as her horse was a bit balky. At the same time she gave me the pleasant news that just above me they were preparing to let loose a boom of logs which would crash down the river in a few minutes. This was nice and you can believe I lost no time getting out. The fact that I am here shows I missed the logs."

Stevenson will pass the winter touring about Southern California and may drive back to Seattle in the spring.

MOTORCYCLES TUNING.

Opening Meet Sunday at Coliseum and Fast Professionals and Amateurs Are Matched.

Motorcycles are to be the attraction again at the Coliseum, the first meet to be held Sunday. There will be races in the morning and afternoon. There will be an intermission between 12 o'clock and 2 o'clock. The morning session will be started at 10 o'clock.

Several of the crack professional riders are here. Eddie Lingenfelder, who has defeated Jake De Rosier in the East, will try to show his prowess with the wheel. He has been doing sensational riding on the Springfield track. He rides an N.S.U. machine which is powerful and fast.

W. Samuelson of Salt Lake City will be one of the riders who should do some speed stunts hitherto unheard of. Samuelson is a daring and skillful wheel manipulator. Mitchell is also one of the fast bikers who should figure in the professional events.

Among the amateur riders M. J. Graves is the star. On his fast Indian racers Graves has driven into world honors on several tracks. He is the sensation in the amateur ranks and is a particularly hard man to defeat.

Charles Balke, another amateur, will be seen on a Merkel. Balke is always in the running whenever he starts and has the habit of keeping the lead when he once gets the front wheel of his fast bike in the van. Walter Collins and C. Chellini were both defeated by Balke at a recent meet in San Francisco.

One of the youngest riders on the track, Raymond Seymour, has been making a record in the East. He is here to ride at the Coliseum on the opening day and is entered in a number of the amateur events. He will use a Reading-Standard that is fast. Seymour won honors last season.

BURRIS CUP CONTROVERSY.

Fast Run of Royal Tourist Settles Squabble for Ownership of Silver Trophy.

By breaking the road record to Camp Burris the Royal Tourist has settled the question of the ownership of the Burris trophy. The claim that the Olds used compression plates during the run for the cup when the record of the Columbia was lowered is made of no avail by the spectacular run of the bigger car.

Al Livingston drove the Royal to the marble quarry at the foot of Greyback in 59 min. 40 sec. This beats the record of the Oldsmobile by almost a minute and that of the Columbia by more than fourteen minutes. Livingston failed to reach the goal on a former attempt.

Over the roughest road in Southern California the Royal lowered the record in a fast drive during which the life of Mechanician McDonough was endangered. McDonough was thrown from the car as the Royal rounded a curve. Al Livingston, who drove, kept the machine up to concert pitch for every mile of the twenty-mile climb.

Special preparation was made for the test. The car was stripped and tried out. It was found to be capable of a speed of a mile a minute. This is fast enough to win the Burris cup as the road leads up a steady grade which rises now and again in an abrupt 30 per cent. climb.

Just why an automobile should be driven to the marble quarries no one knows. The road is filled with boulders. Sharp rocks bar the progress of an automobile. The drive is dangerous, though not as dangerous as the Baldy climb. The road is rougher than the Baldy course.

NEGRO STARS IN CITY.

Occidentals, Champions of Utah, to Play Winter Ball With Local Teams, Barring None.

The Salt Lake Occidentals, one of the strongest negro baseball teams in the country, is to play independent ball in this city this winter. The Utahans arrived from the East yesterday, and Manager Black has made preliminary arrangements with Scotty Allen to play match games at a new park under construction by the local promoter.

Last season the Occidentals won the championship of Utah, playing 108 games and losing but fourteen in the series. Manager Black is unacquainted with the strength of the local teams, but says he can muster players from the East who can compete with any team in the country. Black already is in communication with several stars of the Chicago Leland Giants, and he may bring some of the Chicago men to the Coast.

The line-up of the Occidentals in batting order is: Black, 2b.; K. Hawkins, 3b.; Langley, c.; Burns, cf.; Langford, p.; Middletown, lf.; Robinson, ss.; C. Campbell, rf.; Smith, 1b.; Harrison, substitute pitcher.

MOTORCYCLE CLUB RUN.

Pasadenans to Make Long Cross-Country Trip Today Though Nine Cities.

The first annual endurance race of the Pasadena Motorcycle Club will be held today over a course of 147 miles. Twenty-four entries have been made and the race promises to be one of unusual interest.

The racers are to start from the club at 7 o'clock this morning and will pass through Monrovia, Azusa, Claremont, Cucamonga, San Bernardino, Redlands, Riverside, Colton, Pomona and back up by way of Azusa and Monrovia, ending the long race at the club-house.

In order to facilitate matters the men will be started in pairs at intervals of five minutes.

The club is to give a cup to the winner. In addition to this many prizes will be given to the racers. The general rules governing in automobile endurance races will be observed.

The following machines have been entered in the event: Ten Indians, nine Reading Standards, four Thors, two Excelsiors. The following men have entered: C. H. Basore, Smith, Phil Senour, Roy Senour, Archie Sparks, Johnson, Schaugle, Williams, Bishoff, Austin, Washburn, Hardin, Burnham, Henry, Rewo, Keppner, C. L. Cook, C. M. Cook, Donald Kellan, F. The New WHITE Gasoline Car

The Two Thousand Dollar f.o.b. factory, 20 h.p. White Gasoline Car, a copy of the best French car built for every-day, stand-up use.

The New White Gasoline Car

IS as economical in consumption as any foreign car and considerably ahead of any American car of any price.

IS next to the White Steamer in smooth running, perfect control, and general comfort.

HAS several strong mechanical points that do not appear in any other American made car. Long stroke, 5⅛-inch. Small bore, 3¾-inch.

HAS four speeds forward, driving direct on the third speed. The fourth speed reduces the revolutions of the engine when going rapidly, thus adding to the longevity of the motor, and

IS unquestionably worth your while to investigate.

THE WHITE STEAMER
Is now (without question) the most economical

2. Mechanical Repairs
3. Cost of Tire Upkeep.

Chalmers-Detroit Cars Will Surprise You However Much You Expect

Nothing Like the "Forty"

In our early announcements we aroused great expectations about the 1910 Chalmers-Detroit.

We said that our "Forty" would become a 7-passenger car, with a 122-inch wheel base and 36-inch wheels. That it would be upholstered in hand-buffed leather.

We promised to give all this extra value without adding one cent to our remarkable prices. We would do it out of the saving we make by adding one-third to our output.

We also furnished a Bosch Magneto and Prestolite tank without extra charge.

And so we say nothing has ever been produced at near the price embodying so much value.

You Will Marvel, Too

When you see these new cars you will say, like the rest, that not half has been told.

Mere figures and details and pictures can't begin to show these cars as they are.

All that you have dreamed of in a car you will find in the "Forty."

It will surprise you. It will surpass your most sanguine expectations.

We tell you frankly, NO OTHER CAR at anywhere near the price, is so good—so desirable—and we ask you to let us show you.

Remember

This is the car that won the Riverside Hill climb and the free-for-all for stock cars at Altadena.

GOODYEAR

DETACHABLE TIRES

A Royal Tourist Motor Car (Mountain & Carrigan agents,) has just won the Burris trophy, given in the Redlands Mountain climb; time 59m. 40s.

The Royal Tourist was equipped with the same set of GOODYEAR DETACHABLE TIRES that were used by it in the Santa Ana races.

Though the course of sixteen and a half miles, 9000 feet up the mountain side, is an extremely difficult one, especially for tires, the Goodyear Detachables were in perfect condition when the goal was reached.

In view of the splendid showing made by Goodyear Tires in the Santa Monica Road Race, the Mount Baldy Race, the Santa Ana Races, the Redlands mountain climb, and other notable events, it is not surprising to know that the Buick people have equipped their Phoenix desert race entry with Goodyear Detachable Tires.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE GOODYEAR TIRES. YOU'LL WANT THEM ON YOUR CAR.

A Long Surplice Effect in Satin.

A Filled in Surplice. Front and Back.

Fold upon Fold.

MARIE ANTOINETTE! Her very name will recommend a style. There is, somehow, a glamour round her memory that makes us welcome all of her belongings. In the history of nations, and of the women who helped to make their history, there are no more interesting stories to draw from than those of the unfortunate queen who wore the pretty fichu. It is but natural, therefore, that we lean toward fashions made thus attractive, instead of taking such infinite pains to go backward to less fascinating times.

The front and back of a Marie Antoinette fichu are shown here in a flowered mull evening frock made over white silk. It is one of the well-known ruffled fichus, allowed to cross and hang down the back in one long flowing end. In front it is drawn toward the shoulder and held by an artificial rose. The fichu belongs to this quaint gown, with its wrinkled bodice held together by bands of black ribbon velvet, which are also the finish of the little puffed sleeve.

The fichu line without the fichu is shown in a blue satin dress for evening wear at home. A fall of lace follows the pomted neck opening, which discloses a shirred chemisette of sheer stuff matching the lower sleeve puff. Here again is the artificial rose—a pink one—and the wrinkled bodice and belt which are part of the gown with the gathered skirt.

The front and back views of a filled-in surplice show soft folds over the shoulder instead of the irregular ruffles of the fichu. A big pink ribbon rose gives the needed light touch to this quaint dinner dress of wine-red satin, and the half-sleeve and gathered skirt are not missing. A wrinkled girdle is worn with an ample bow—a sash without ends.

A long surplice effect in white satin, more pointed than the others, shows its opening filled in with a chemisette of beaded tulle to match the sleeves. The same long crystal beads decorate the bodice over the shoulders.

Fold upon fold of gray embroidered chiffon pass over the shoulders of another model—a gown reflecting some of the points of the same French period. The neck, though higher, is also filled in, and the sleeves are sectional. There are gray satin bands crossing each other in surplice effect, both back and front.

These over-the-shoulder folds have been with us for several years, but they are unusually good with our present quaint styles. There has scarcely been a time when the fichu has not been popular for the muslin summer dress, but the Marie Antoinette lines have penetrated to this year's evening gowns. Her soft girdle holds in both the fichu ends above and the skirt gathers beneath. Her half-sleeves appear on the best dinner gowns; and, indeed, fashion seems at this late day to have espoused the cause of the pathetic queen.

Just as the empire fashions took the evening world by storm a short time ago, so may the more fanciful garments of the later French court gain first a gaslight foothold. There was an amazing dignity about the sweeping garb of Josephine that is quite the reverse of the frivols and frills of the pretty Louis gowns, but they are alike more suitable for evening than for daylight hours.

It is not anticipated, nor is it promised, that all that is now being exploited in Paris will be paraded on our American highways to the complete rout of the strictly tailor-made.

America loves the shopping garb, and may her women long reserve the court gown for the ball, the reception and the dinner.

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES
By MARION HARLAND

ECONOMY in BUYING

"It is true that I did not really want it."

THIS is the second of a series of articles by Marion Harland which have been written with a view to helping the housewife at a time when economy may mean just that little that puts the balance on the right side of the household ledger.

The first of these articles, published last Sunday, was entitled "A Stubborn Fact," and dealt with the necessities for the practice of economy today. The third article, to be published next Sunday, will be entitled "Economy in Cookery," and the fourth, which will follow, bears the caption, "Economy in Hired Labor."

RESOLVE firmly at the outset never to buy what you do not need just because it is cheap.

This is the rock upon which the born bargain-maker wrecks purse and peace of mind. If put into the confessional, how many of us could plead "not guilty" if asked to search the records of memory for instances of this form of extravagance? Who of us has not excused the folly by "It is true, I did not really want it at the moment; but the time might come when it would be useful, and it was so ridiculously cheap it seemed a shame to let it slip through my fingers"?—the unvarnished fact being that the shame lay in spending money for a useless thing.

We talked together last week of the stubborn fact that each of us whose income does not mount well into the tens of thousands must face the absolute necessity of curtailing expenses that were comfortably covered ten years back by salary or dividends or rents that did not equal two-thirds of what we are today receiving. I pause at this point to modify a statement made in that paper. I said that family expenses are now 25 per cent. more than they were three years ago. After my manuscript went to press I had an opportunity of looking more narrowly into statistics involving the rates of living in all sections of the United States, as compared with the outgo and income, five years earlier in the century. Figures that cannot equivocate show that, as a body domestic and politic, we pay out 33 per cent. more for the necessaries and comforts of living than we expended for the same in the year of our Lord 1909.

Set alongside of this startling truth the fact that salaries and wages have not advanced, on an average, 10 per cent. in the most prosperous region of our common country, and there gapes before us a pretty big hole to be filled up by economies, great and small.

To return to the practice of these, "blue pencil" the memorandum of today. I illustrate by an individual case: A dear young friend, to whom I speak as plainly as to my daughters, called upon me on her morning round of marketing, and in the course of the conversation lamented the difficulty of bringing her household expenses within the limits of the allowance made for the purpose by her generous husband.

"I cannot bear to ask him for more!" she said. "His business suffered sadly in the general depression of last year and has not recovered from the pressure. Yet our family is no larger than it was five years ago. And I do try to be economical. My heart sank like lead when I saw the length of the memorandum my cook and I made out this morning."

She drew it from her pocket and opened it.

It was formidable in my more experienced eyes.

"Do you mind letting me read it?" I asked.

"Not a bit! I wish you would run it over and show me how to abridge it without starving John and the babies—not to mention the maids"—this last with a conscious laugh.

"Six pounds of butter," I read aloud. "Fourteen pounds of granulated sugar, ditto of powdered, cake of chocolate, bottle of vanilla, twelve oranges, twelve lemons, four packages of oatmeal, ditto crackers, bottle of olives, ditto of mixed pickles, four cakes of sandsoap, one-half gallon of salad oil, barrel of flour."

"That last item was a blow!" she interposed, pointing to it, actual tragedy in voice and gesture. "But the bottom of the last barrel was scraped this morning for the semi-weekly baking. I heard

"A barrelful is an unknown quantity."

once of a good old saint who said that 'the angels must hear when she scraped the bottom of the meal barrel, for she always had something valuable sent to her that very day!' I thought of it when I found that I must overrun this month's allowance by exactly the amount it will cost to get a barrel of best family flour. I wish I had the old lady's guardian angel—or a bigger allowance!"

Then I fired a direct question at her:

"Why do you buy flour by the barrel"

Her answer was as direct:

"It is cheaper in the long run."

"I know!" I interrupted. "When you came in I was reading a magazine article by a practical housewife who knows whereof she speaks, on 'The Struggles of the Half-Way Poor.' By the way, there are more of that class in our favored land at the present speaking than ever before since the landings at Jamestown and Plymouth. Hear Mrs. Well-to-Do's advice to the half-way poor woman:

"'My dear child, I wish you would understand how much more expensive it is to get things in small quantities! I save literally hundreds of dollars yearly buying flour, potatoes and apples by the barrel. * * * If you can buy a tub of butter now at 25 cents a pound, when you are paying 35 at retail prices, see what you save! If you do not learn these household economies you will never be rich.'

"'No,' laments the other inwardly, 'and as I shall never be rich I shall never have the money to spend on a quantity of staples at once.'"

I closed the magazine and proceeded with the "improvement" of my text.

"In my salad days, when I was green in judgment, I, too, was a warm advocate for buying at wholesale. It was not until I had lived abroad for a term of years and studied the ways and means of those incomparable household economists, the French cooks and German hausfrauen, that I came to a just sense of proportion on this subject. Here lies the point: If you mean to sell at retail what you buy at wholesale, it is all right to buy by the large quantity. If the barrel of flour is to be used in your family, subject to the measurement and pleasure of the average maid—let her nationality be what it will—it is wiser management of your allowance to make small purchases. Bridget-Thekla-Dinah gauges the depth of a twenty-five-pound bag of flour more truly than that of a barrelful. Generally this last is an unknown quantity to her. She will make biscuits, bread and cake with a more lavish hand when she may dip at her discretion (which is likewise an unknown quantity) into the barrel. Did I ever tell you of the answer Mrs. F.'s cook made to her mistress when she (Katy) was about to throw six fine, large potatoes with the kitchen refuse into the garbage pail? 'Sure, mem, and there's a whole barrelful in the cellar!'

"Katy struck the keynote of an 'opus' that may be said to be a 'continuous performance' in nine out of ten households where wholesale buying is practiced."

My guest scratched out "barrel" and substituted "bag."

"Fourteen pounds of each kind of sugar!" she read, thoughtfully. "That ought to last our family three weeks, unless Jane indulges her fancy for extras in cakes and puddings too freely. Would you get half the quantity?"

Without waiting for an answer she ran on:

"And we wouldn't eat a dozen oranges in one week. Nor a dozen lemons. I suppose you would say the same of four boxes of crackers and of oatmeal?"

I laid my hand on the busy pencil:

"I dictate nothing, dear! You are the proper judge of what you have a right to spend and to save."

I meant what I said. I knew, however, that I had dropped good seed into good soil. I would fain believe the same with regard to the larger audience I place before my imagination is turning back to my desk.

Had I elected to take that memorandum in detail, as I am reading, with my mind's eye, scores of expense books conned ruefully by fellow-housemothers, I could have cut down the sum total in other ways than by advising retail in place of wholesale purchases. Jane evidently meditated chocolate cake. A plainer compound would have tested as well to John, if properly concocted. Olives need not appear upon the table at the same time with mixed pickles, and, unless mayonnaise dressing be a triweekly treat, it would be prudent to get a quart and not a half gallon of oil.

If your list of "must haves" for the day was pruned judiciously, my sister student in this hard, new school, the curtailed result would amaze you and gratify the financier of the household. Separate "may gets" from "must haves." And buy nothing today because there is a bare probability that it may be wanted tomorrow.

"Separate 'May Gets' from 'Must Haves.'"

I am painfully aware that the principle of purchasing by the day will meet with little favor with older readers brought up, as I was, according to the tenets of an age that was lavish by reason of growing prosperity. We have been so long accustomed to the idea that it is sound economy "in the long run" to get staples at wholesale that we reluctantly learn the lesson appointed for us by changed conditions. A woman told me outright yesterday that she "could not reconcile herself to the thought of living from hand to mouth. One might as well be a pauper at once."

The French are in the lead of all nations in the matter of cookery. It was from a Frenchwoman of means, who had a "cordon bleu" in her kitchen, that I first heard of the advantages of buying just what one wants, and in precisely the quantities that are required for a specific purpose. It was she, likewise, who reprobated as extravagance the purchase of fruits and vegetables in advance of the season. I winced slightly when she alluded to it as "the trick of the vulgar rich." Yet she was right. It is patent to the dullest of us that when berries and peaches are in their richest maturity they are at the cheapest, because ripe fruits will not bear transportation or keep so long as immature fruit that must mellow in cold storage.

Watch the markets if you would live well at reasonable rates. Don't be ashamed to price without buying. It is only by vigilance and inquiry that you learn what you may afford to get without exceeding your lawful means.

When practicable, do your marketing and shopping in person. Again and again I have changed my menu for the day, and for the better as to quality and price, after entering a shop. I have found that the roast I had intended to set before my family was neither so cheap nor so good as the fresh beef's tongue just brought in. Or I had thought of preparing, had ordered by telephone, I should have lost the opportunity of making that fowls of an age were and reconciled myself to the disappointment by receiving, as I thought, to try, that very day, the Mrs. Blank gave me last week burger steak, baked in a and overlaid with slices bananas.

"Don't be ashamed to price without buying."

"The telephone of a cheaper medium."

In next week's talk I more to say of the economy making the best of what rated as indifferent cuts "art" instead of "waste," wisely. The proficiency of cook in this respect fills of genius.

One word more of the a shopping medium. I believe that enough is said the woman who gives all over the wire to pay from markets a dozen tidy little instrument, with my hand as I write, is a tation when business weather is inclement, or I gently glad to read the that is worth reading, scanning grocers' shelves er's counters in hope of the thing" I want. Neither false to my conscientiousness prudent and right when my obliging tradesman He prefers it to seeing me of course, the less disposed majority confessed to us telephone customer is far cable than she who must purchases."

Pickled Rind

OUR family is very fond of sweet pickled watermelon rind, but we dread the long, hot work of cooking the tough rind.

Allow me to tell of a late experience that may answer your query, "Have any of the owners of fireless cookers used them in canning?"

Last Monday morning I cut the rind of a large melon into pieces and put it into very salt water, covered it and left it.

On Tuesday I drained off the brine, put the pieces of melon rind into the large can of the cooker, covered them with cold, fresh water, brought them to the boil, cooked them hard for ten minutes, then closed the can and shut them into the cooker.

Wednesday I took them out, drained off the water and, having made ready the sweetened, spiced vinegar, I scalded them in it, a few at a time.

Result: I have a dozen cans of the most tender and best sweet pickles I have ever made in all my thirty-odd years of housekeeping.

Although the process covers three days in the telling, the actual time spent in the task was not two hours.

2. Last spring a Minnesota member asked advice concerning creosote dropping from a stovepipe. It is nearing stovepipe time in Minnesota. Hence this note.

If she will remember that all wood-stove pipes should be put up with the edge of the overlapping pipe toward the chimney, or upward, and that all coal-stove pipes should have the overlapping pipe edge away from the chimney, or downward, she will never be troubled with creosote droppings or with escaping coal gas.

3. Now for a query:

I have an aluminum teakettle, which was used last winter upon a gas stove and became coated with a gummy, yellow substance that yields neither to soapsuds, kerosene nor alcohol. What can I do to remove it?

If I've been too prolix, "blue-pencil" me.

FANNIE M. C. (Louisville, Ky.).

I would disown the pencil that should strike out one line of a letter that is sane, helpful and replete with interest from start to finish.

I am personally your debtor for the information respecting the capabilities of the fireless cooker in the line of pickling. Cucumbers and the rind of citron and of nutmeg melons may, of course, be put up in the same way. It occurs to me, too, that fruits which must be heated for hours to prepare them for jellying may be managed thus, and save the trouble of stirring, as well as the expense of keeping up a coal-and-wood fire while the slow heating goes on. It has been my custom in getting currants, crabapples, quinces, etc., soft enough for straining to set the kettle or jar containing them in a larger vessel of hot water, covering them closely and leaving them to cook all night. In the morning they are ready for the jelly-bag. In future I shall press my "fireless" into service after they have begun to boil. So I thank you heartily.

Do you mean that the kettle is coated within or without with the gum? And will not some grateful housemother arise to the occasion with a remedy for the nuisance?

Bread From Dried Yeast

I note your reply to "P. E. H." (Seattle, Mich.), relative to breadmaking. I am afraid you did not quite understand about the dried yeast and the "starter." When one lives out in the country, or in a village, fresh compressed yeast is hard to get, and one has to fall back upon packages of little cakes of dried yeast.

"Starter."

I make the "starter" thus: Early in the afternoon break up half a cake of some kind of compressed yeast and pour over it a cup of lukewarm water. Let it stand until the yeast is soft; stir in enough flour to make a soft batter, cover the bowl and set where the wind will not blow on it.

"Sponge."

For the sponge: At suppertime scald (not boil) a quart of milk and let it get lukewarm. Add the "starter" and enough flour for a soft batter. Beat well for at least ten minutes. Wrap the bowl in a thick cloth and set out of the draught and where the temperature will be even. A chill is fatal.

In the morning before breakfast add to the sponge, which should be light and "bubbly," a tablespoonful each of salt and sugar and enough warmed flour for soft dough. Lay upon the kneading board and knead vigorously for fifteen or twenty minutes, or until the dough is elastic, rebounding readily from a blow with the closed fist.

Return to the bowl and wash the surface with melted butter or cooking oil; cover with a towel and set in a warm corner until it has doubled in bulk. This should be in two hours. Lay again on the board and cut into two portions. Knead each into a loaf and wash again with butter. Put the pans containing the loaves in a warm place until the original bulk is doubled. This will take an hour. Just before putting the loaves into the oven prick carefully with a fork to let out the gases. When the bread has been in the oven five or six minutes turn the pans around, moving them very gently, not to jar them and impede the rising.

The loaves should be baked in forty-five minutes in a good oven. Then brush the surface with butter and stand the loaves on end to cool.

The finished product should be four soft, fine-grained, golden-brown loaves, pleasing to eye, taste and smell.

I hope this is not too long, but if one wants to have "good luck" in baking one must attend to the details.

H. E. G. (Anaheim, Cal.).

I wish the novices in housewifery who write to me for explicit directions for making good domestic bread would cut out that recipe and tack it up in a conspicuous place in kitchen or storeroom, conning it from time to time until they have mastered every detail.

Our California member has done a signal service to the constituency at large by the succinct and trustworthy formula.

To Clean White Net

I have a fine white net waist which has become much soiled. Can I clean it without washing it?

S. H. S. (Mahanoy City, Pa.).

Mix three quarts of flour with a pint of salt. Set in the oven until it is warmed throughout. Then rub it into every mesh of the net with a complexion brush. Having gone over the waist in this way, shake out the salted flour and work in a fresh supply. Leave this on, covering the waist with paper or putting it into a box to exclude the dust, and let it alone for three days. Then shake and beat out the flour. The grime should come with it.

Irish Potato Cake

You asked lately for a recipe for Irish potato bread or cake.

My home was in Belfast for many years and I know well the kind of bread called there by that name. In the country it is known as "fadge."

Boil potatoes until well done and mealy. The quantity makes no difference in the recipe. Mash well, seasoning with salt. Work in all the flour the potatoes will absorb. If they are very dry, moisten slightly with milk or water into a soft dough. Put this upon a well-floured board and roll out, sprinkling with flour until somewhat thicker than pie crust. Have griddle heated over a slow fire. Cut the dough into convenient pieces, sprinkle again with flour and bake slowly on both sides until brown.

In this country this is sometimes taken hot from the griddle, buttered and eaten with afternoon tea. Usually it is cut into pieces about four inches by two and fried in hot bacon or pork fat for breakfast. It is delicious, but I fear indigestible.

I hope that this is the "potato cake" to which you refer.

AN EXILE FROM ERIN (Cedar Rapids, Iowa).

Whom we welcome heartily to our ranks. The recipe is exactly what we wished to get. I recognize it joyfully as the identical "potato cake" I have eaten in the hospitable house of an Irish friend. I asked for it, at another time, in a fashionable Dublin hotel, and got it.

"A PAIR OF GIANT HANDS"

"GOOD-BYE, mother," said Rupert, with a last hug and kiss. For a moment they wept together; then Rupert turned and fled through the garden gate, that his mother might not know his courage was failing.

It is hard for a boy only 8 years old to leave home for the first time. But since the father had died a year before Rupert's mother could earn barely enough money to buy bread for both herself and her son. Therefore, the lad resolved that no longer would he burden her, but out into the world he would go to seek his fortune.

WHILE playing in the woods one day, little Jack Rabbit caught his foot in a trap. It had been set there by a hunter, who knew that people like rabbit meat and that sometimes rabbit skins are useful.

"Oh! oh! oh! Help! help!" screamed little Jack Rabbit, in pain and fear. But his cries brought no one. So he wrenched and pulled and tugged, although it hurt him so much, until at last he was free. Then, moaning and groaning at every step, Jack Rabbit limped back to his burrow. Hardly could he drag himself there, to throw himself upon his bed of dried grass. Somebody was coming. Crawling over to the door of his burrow, Jack Rabbit heard in a weak voice:

"Here comes a hedgehog to help me!"

The Hedgehog—for it WAS a hedgehog—looked at the sick animal and called out in a cheerful voice:

"Hello, Rough!" He didn't mean Jack Rabbit, but that was simply his funny, ugly old chap won't offer to help this handsome stranger with a reddish yellow coat and a magnificent plume for a tail." Therefore he cried once again: "Help me! Please help me!"

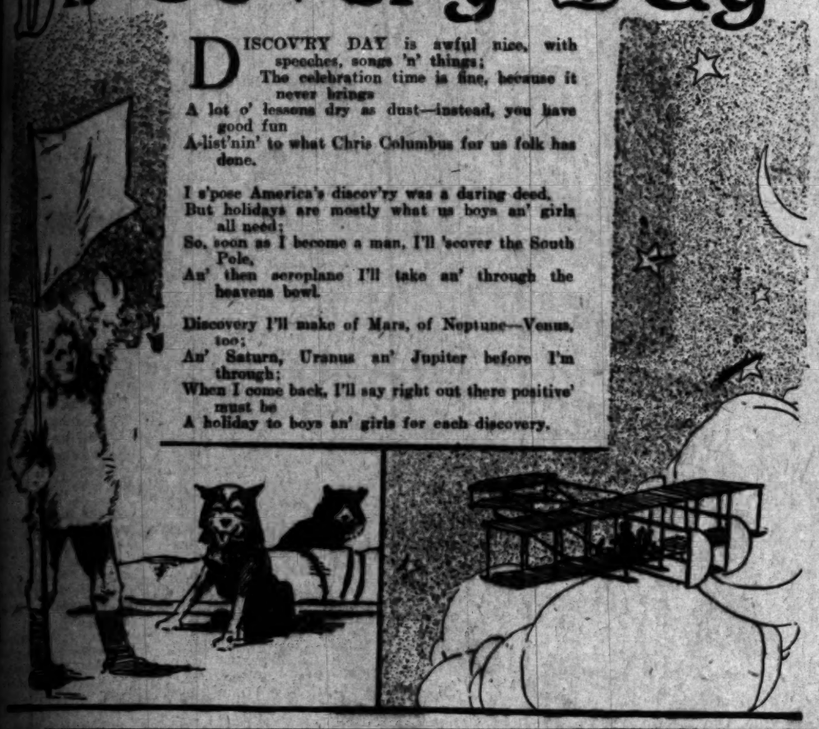
Discovery Day

DISCOVERY DAY is awful nice, with speeches, songs 'n' things;
The celebration time is fine, because it never brings
A lot o' lessons dry as dust—instead, you have good fun
A-list'nin' to what Chris Columbus for us folk has done.

I s'pose America's discov'ry was a daring deed,
But holidays are mostly what us boys an' girls all need;
So, soon as I become a man, I'll 'scover the South Pole,
An' then aeroplane I'll take an' through the heavens bowl.

Discovery I'll make of Mars, of Neptune—Venus, too;
An' Saturn, Uranus an' Jupiter before I'm through;
When I come back, I'll say right out there positive' must be
A holiday to boys an' girls for each discovery.



Bwana Humpto in Africa

"JOINED HANDS AND DANCED IN A CIRCLE ABOUT THE LAD"

By Raber Mundorf

PHOTO HUMPTO propped the poor dead squirrel jauntily against the tree. Then he squinted into the lens of his kodak. A snapshot followed. A snapshot usually did follow 'most everything 'most everybody did.

"Taxiderme," said the generous lad, "you may have the squirrel, because it's of no use to me."

"Thanks; I'm canning a bunch now," replied the scientist, as he began to cure rats, mice and squirrels in arsenic and seal them in tin cans. During the hunting party's stay in the East African Kenya province, which is south of River Gwaso Nyiro and east of the Navaiba Masai reserve, the traps were busy and many small creatures were seared. Now the taxidermist was pickling them.

"While I was chasing the squirrel I saw a nice, plump guinea fowl roosting in the jungle. But I couldn't take a pot shot because my ammunition was gone; nor could I fire at a troop of beautiful olive green monkeys that said what sounded like bad words to me," Photo explained.

The taxidermist suggested that the boy again go forth to hunt. Besides the common green monkeys, there were the mackabeys, blackish and white in color, and the silky-haired colobi, from whose pelts are made ladies' boas and muffs. Or fierce baboons or apes were to be had, according to Taxiderme.

"But now I have decided not to kill the dear monkeys or baboons or apes," said the lad firmly. "I think I shall take with me a huge salt shaker, from which I shall sprinkle salt upon the tails of the animals. Thus I will capture them and send them alive to my organ grinder friend, Tony Ferrillo, who lives in New York. Tony and I will soon grow very rich, I am sure, by selling monkeys to organ grinders. Is it possible to catch a monkey by placing salt upon its tail, Taxiderme?" asked Photo.

The naturalist reflected a moment before responding. "I have never heard of such a plan being successfully carried out, but you might try it."

"Do not discourage the boy," interrupted Doctor Pillo; "it is hard to tell what things may not be possible. Photo, here is a bright little song which I should like to have you memorize:

"If a chipmunk chew a cherry,
Can a kitten cut a caper,
Or a 'roller' broil a brisket?

CHORUS.

"Is it possible?
You say not?

"Well, suppose a sparrow spatter
On a tricky turkey talk,
Can a crow come calmly crawling
And a woolly warthog walk?

CHORUS.

"Why, it's possible!
Who says not?

"And there you have it," concluded the doctor, sagely; "the possible and the impossible are sadly mixed; so it is best to consider nothing impossible."

"I shall follow your advice and try my level best," returned the lad, now greatly cheered.

Out into the forest, then, he forced his way, through heath and grasses, by water courses where the papyrus grew, and amid acacia, baobab, palm and rubber trees. Where the jungle was densest, vines and creepers interlaced, forming an almost impassable network between trunks.

At last, however, he drew near to a troop of monkeys. Green fellows they were, who chattered at him from boughs high above ground. With salt shaker thrust securely in his belt and his trusty kodak slung from his shoulder, Photo attempted to climb after the monkeys. Of course, they were too agile for him, and soon he was obliged to give up pursuit.

"I'll take a snapshot, anyway," said he.

The leveling of the camera produced a magical effect. Led by the old male, the entire troop dropped to the ground, and the members joined hands and danced in a circle about the puzzled lad.

"Ah!" exclaimed the boy, when he saw the meaning of their antics, "they believe the kodak to be a street organ, and they are dancing to the tune which they suppose should come from it."

Thereupon Photo, still holding the kodak in position, moved slowly toward camp. Undoubtedly he would have captured the troop had not a python, which had been tracking the monkeys, swayed its length from a tree branch overhead and jerked the precious kodak from Photo's hands.

The spell was broken. Away fled the monkeys in all directions, wildly chattering and screaming. Photo at once set about regaining his valuable kodak.

This would have been no simple matter had not assistance arrived in the person of Photo's good father, Bwana Humpto. The Mighty Hunter had become worried over the absence of Photo. As he mounted his horse he did not observe a chimpanzee crouching among trees at the edge of the wood. Supporting itself upon its forearms and knuckles, the brute intently watched the departure of the great hunter on a search for the missing boy. Then, before the horse could gather speed, the chimpanzee took a flying leap, landing upon the horse behind Bwana Humpto's seat.

Bwana Humpto immediately saw that the intelligent beast had something to tell. Therefore he followed the guidance of the chimpanzee, and so came to the place where Photo was trying to outwit the python.

With a word of warning to the boy, Bwana Humpto coolly raised his rifle, took careful aim and fired. In a moment the python was dead and the treasured kodak was again in its rightful owner's possession.

"Oh, why did I not put salt on the monkeys' tails when I had them so near me!" lamented the youth.

"Do not despair, my lad," counseled Dr. Pillo that evening in camp. "I have a better plan. Here are instructions which I should like to have you memorize:

"Train an intelligent chimpanzee to play a mouth-organ. Then set him loose among his fellows, and I'll wager that soon there will be troops and troops of monkeys who will forget to raid plantations of grain and vegetables and bananas; who will forget to munch fruits, berries, soft wood, birds' eggs, fledglings, grubs, insects among the bushes and in the trees; who will forget everything but the fascinating melody of this mouth-organ. After the player they will flock like rats after a 'Pied Piper.' And he will bring the army to you."

"Thank you! Thank you, my dear doctor!" cried Photo, his voice trembling with feeling. "Do permit me to take a dashlight of you! I MUST have a photograph of one who is able to devise such astonishing, such exceedingly remarkable schemes."

Then Photo Humpto took the "flash-light."

The Giant Hands

"A PAIR OF GIANT HANDS"

"GOOD-BYE, mother," said Rupert, with a last hug and kiss. For a moment they wept together; then Rupert turned and fled through the golden gate, that his mother might not know the courage was failing.

It was hard for a boy only 4 years old to leave home for the first time. But the father had died a year before and his mother could earn barely enough money to buy bread for both herself and her son. Therefore, the lad realized that no longer would he burden her, but must go out into the world he would soon learn to call his fortune.

With the coming of the lark came to the lad the scent of the early morning flowers, and the early morning sounds of fresh, growing things filled his nostrils with a grateful perfume, Rupert's cheerfulness came back to him. And with a new hope, as bright as the blue skies above, he trod forward quickly. He hardly paused to say farewell to each familiar object along the way, so busy was he dreaming of the time when he would triumphantly return, bearing a fortune to lay at his mother's feet.

All went happily until the boy came to a madly rushing stream. No sign was there of a bridge, and Rupert stood in despair.

While the discouraged lad was thinking what he should do a heap of billowy clouds formed just above the ground nearby. A second passed, and then a pair of giant hands appeared. At the same time a voice from the clouds said:

"Have no fear, Rupert. We will watch over you and save you from harm. Do earnestly the work you find. Success will surely come to you."

Rupert took off his hat and politely bowed, as his mother had taught him. "I thank you, great hands, with all my heart, for being kind to one who is so little and so weak."

Immediately the hands raised him gently and placed him on the other side of the stream. Afterward they disappeared, and Rupert joyfully resumed travel.

Finally the boy came to a great castle. He courageously mounted the steps, but the knocker on the door was so high above his head that he could not reach it. He might have beaten with his fists a long time on the massive door without being seen had not the giant hands come to his rescue and started the echoes with a thunderous pounding.

"Are you a prince or some person of renown, to come knocking in such fashion?" demanded a voice, which Rupert saw came from an ogress more than ten feet tall. She had hurriedly opened the door and now stood glaring down upon the little fellow.

"No; I am only a poor country boy, your highness, who would like to work in this magnificent castle," replied Rupert.

"Work!" exclaimed the ogress, scornfully; "what could a pigmy like you do? Besides, I have no work. All my servants left the last week because there was nothing to do."

Rupert thought it strange that any servant should leave a mistress because there was too little work. But he said he would be very glad to do anything, in order to earn his living.

Finally the terrible lady consented to take him into service. And very soon Rupert found there was a very great deal of work to be done. He was in despair when the ogress commanded him, saying:

"Go into the kitchen and prepare dinner."

Now, the little boy knew not a thing about cooking. Afraid to disobey, however, he sought the kitchen, where he sat down to cry. Then the hands appeared, and in a trice all the work was done for the astonished lad.

The ogress was even more surprised than he. She at once began to test the boy further. He was told to sweep and clean all the rooms. In an hour the hundred rooms were spick and span.

Rupert seemed truly wonderful. The ogress did not know that it was the pair of giant hands that had accomplished these tasks; that large fields were ploughed and immense piles of logs split into kindling by the hands. She imagined that little Rupert was doing the work of twenty persons.

For a year the boy labored. He really was very industrious all the time; but without the aid of the hands his efforts would have been useless. At the end of a twelvemonth, however, he began to long to see his mother.

"May I go home, your highness?" he begged of the ogress.

"Why do you want to leave your work?" asked the terrible woman, sourly.

Then Rupert told how he had left his mother all alone and how poor she was. He knew she would be overjoyed to see him again.

For the first time in her life the heart of the ogress was touched. Without a word she handed the lad a big sack filled with gold.

"Take this," said she, "to your mother. It is a reward for faithfulness. You have done so well that you deserve to live happily with your mother always; so you need not return. Lucky for you it was that you performed every task I set for you. I cook and eat every servant who fails. That is why I had none when you came to me. And as the people know me all hereabouts, it will very likely be a long while before I can hire another servant. Nevertheless, I will let you go."

Rupert gratefully accepted the treasure, and journeyed with all speed home to his mother. As the boy threw the gold at her feet, she cried:

"How proud I am to have such a son!"

But Rupert said, modestly:

"Do not praise me; the hands are to be thanked for all I have gained."

And then Rupert told his mother the story of the giant hands.

How Jack Rabbit was Saved by a Hedgehog

WHILE playing in the woods one day, little Jack Rabbit caught his foot in a trap. It had been set by a hunter, who knew people like rabbit meat and that rabbit skins are useful.

"Oh! oh! Help! help!" screamed Jack Rabbit, in pain and fear. But no one came to his rescue. So he wrenched and tugged, although it hurt him much, until at last he was free. Then to his burrow Jack Rabbit limped, moaning and groaning at every step. He dragged himself in and threw himself upon his bed of dried grass. He was very, very sorry for a poor wounded rabbit because he was in pain.

"Certainly," said the Fox, as he trotted past the Hedgehog, "but you must come outside your doorway."

Little Jack Rabbit moved forward, when the bad Fox all at once made a grab for him. Luckily the bunny tumbled back into his hole just in time. Here his enemy could not catch him.

He trembled and gasped as he lay on the floor. Faint he was with terror and pain. "Thump! thump! thump!" went his heart as though it would burst.

But he didn't die, because the Hedgehog, who had been busy gathering tender leaves of cabbage and wild thyme, came with his burden to Jack Rabbit's door, and grunted, very kindly:

"Romph! romph! Here is something for you to eat. Soon I will be back with some herbs, of which you can make a poultice to bind upon your wounded foot."

The Hedgehog was as good as his word. And he came every day, bringing food, until the paw was healed and Jack Rabbit could help himself.

Thus Jack Rabbit learned that a homely face and a gruff manner sometimes hide the greatest of good-will and kindness.

When it was below Zero

MISS SKIDDER WAS CARRIED TO THE WOODS

"AH! I CAN tell you it's a big relief to have a warm, cozy room," murmured Cissie, as she settled among the cushions in huge contentment.

"Poor dear! You must have suffered great privations!" cooed Vera, while Ethel added:

"Just returned from a South Pole discovery, Cissie?"

Cissie smiled indulgently at the laugh which came from the five seniors at her expense.

"No," she explained to her classmates, "but there have been times when I've felt myself pretty close to the pole. You girls here at Martensburg Academy have lived in ease and bodily comfort—"

"O-o-o-h!" groaned the others in chorus, and Julia queried, "Remember our pleasant freshman year, girls?"

"—but my stay at Hillsboro was under altogether different conditions. Did you ever hear of Miss Skidder?" continued Cissie.

"No," responded the five, as they grouped themselves closer about their hostess, anticipating a tale. Cissie's recital was as follows:

"Miss Skidder reigned over our floor when I was in the junior year at Hillsboro. She was assistant instructor in Latin during the day, and at night patrolled the corridors in the hope of catching some of us girls breaking the rules. She was mean about it, too, when she caught us, and we got all the law allowed.

"Now, it happened that Miss Skidder possessed a hobby. She believed every one ought to live out in the open air and take lots of exercise and all that sort of thing. Well, she began to talk the thing over with us until she got all of us to promise that we'd sleep with our windows opened completely. We promised, as I say, but we were somewhat surprised when school session was over one afternoon to find that the janitor had taken sashes and all from the windows. You see, Miss Skidder didn't trust us enough to let us keep the windows open ourselves, so she thought she'd make sure of it.

"Bear in mind that this was in January, and the thermometer was then near the zero mark. Before this we had had trouble in keeping our patience when we had almost frozen every night. Miss Skidder's mean trick didn't put us in any better humor.

"We were talking the matter over one night—my roommate, four other juniors who had sneaked in and myself—when Clara Morrison, another junior, rushed into the room. Mad! She was angrier than a wet hen or any other kind of a hen!

"I, for one, am not going to stand it!" she said. And then she told us that Miss Skidder's door was half open as she went by, and in glancing through the opening she saw that the windows in the room were closed tightly.

"It was then about 18 degrees below zero—or it felt like it, anyway. We quickly made our plans. We knew that Miss Skidder slept soundly, since she stopped prowling about the hallways and turned in. So we weren't taking any chances when, about midnight, a few of us grabbed hold of her cot and carried the bed down the broad hall steps and across the meadow to the woods. For a joke we stuck her alarm clock on a little box nearby. Then we left her.

"Now you know why I am here at Martensburg. Miss Skidder might have seen the joke, but she didn't, and, as prime mover in the scheme, I was politely informed that Hillsboro wasn't the place for me. And now you know, also, what unpleasant memories a cold room brings to me, girls."

As all munched solemnly upon their macaroons, Vera said, emphatically: "Well, you have had hardships!"

From Girl to Graphophone

New Game of Pass Ball

PASSBALL can be played by four players or by any greater even number. A long rectangular court of clay or sand is divided by a rope stretched across it, the ends of the rope being attached to long rods fastened upright at the side lines. Have the rope about four feet from the ground. An equal number of players occupy each of the two small courts. A football or large rubber ball is thrown by a player over the cord. It must be caught by a member of the opposing side. The object of the game is to throw the ball so that it goes over the cord and strikes the ground beyond. When a player fails to catch the ball one point is counted for the opposing side. Likewise, if a ball is thrown under the cord the other side gains a point. The ball must be returned by a player from the position in which he has caught it. That side which first wins ten points is entitled to the game.

CYNTHIANNA BLYTHE

Drawings by Wallace Morgan—Verses by Harry Grant Dart.

1.— When Cynthia came back to town
She learned that "Theodore"
Had disappeared in mystery
A month or so before.
For weeks she'd longed to romp with him
And when the news was told,
In tears of deep distress she burst
And wouldn't be consoled.

2.— A guilty conscience papa's face
Most vividly outlined,
And he repented when he saw
How Cynthianna pined.
He tried his best to get "Ted" back
And advertised each day;
But all his efforts were in vain,
For "Teddy" stayed away.

3.— While grim remorse still clung to hin
He strove to make amends,
By bidding Cynthianna and
A group of little friends
To be his guests at vaudeville;
And in the foremost row
We find him with a bunch of tots,
All keen to see the show.

4.— They screeched at Dutch comedians,
They laughed at tumbling turns,
And guessed how many million cents
"That spangled lady" earns.
They sat in awe through mother song
And vapid monologues,
But hearkened when a card announced
"DRAKE'S EDUCATED DOGS."

5.— And when each dog had done his stunt,
The house with laughter rang,
For printed placard told the crowd
A culprit was to hang.
This criminal, in soldier clothes,
About to be strung up,
Appeared a most dejected brute,—
A luckless mastiff pup.

6.— Now, Cynthia, to view him well,
The opera glasses took;
For he did certainly present
A most familiar look;
And when he was about to hang,
The house burst in a roar
To hear our Cynthianna cry,
"Come here, my Theodore!"

7.— He leaves the cops and sheriff dogs
Upon the stage all heaped,
And to Miss Cynthianna's side
He frantically leaped;
While papa with three taxicabs
Was planning to dispose
Of sundry shouting boys and girls,
And dog in soldier clothes.

8.— When Cynthianna got him home
She made him understand
That he must never leave the yard,
Except by her command.
"You ought to be ashamed," she said,
"A doggy of your age,
To just escape the gallows tree
And life upon the stage."
